Town to Have Paved Streets

COMMUNITY CLUB OPENS AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN

Enthutiastic Crowd at Second Meeting Of Organization. Constitution is Adopted. Prof. Moses Makes A Stirring Address

The passing of a recomendation urging that the people of New Wilmington make preparation to pave Neshannock Avenue and Market Street from borough line was the most important feature of the meeting of the Community Club in the High School building Monday evening. In spite of the disagreeable weather the meeting was well attended, about one hundred being present. Prof. E. R. Moses, the President of the organization, was in charge of the meeting.

The recomendation in regard to paving the street aroused considerable discussion, property owners giving voice to opinions on both sides of the question. The majority, however, seemed to favor paving and the recomendation was finally passed by a two-thirds vote. A meeting will be held in College Chapel next Tuesday evening, at which time C. E. Kimbrough and C. H. Millholland of New Castle will discuss the details of the question.

The Constitution prepared and presented by the Directors was adopted by a unanimous vote. In the Constitution the object of the Club is stated as follows: "to promote and encourage civic improvement in the borough and vicinity; to cultivate civic pride among the citizens; and to advance the best interest, socially and materially of all the residents of New Wilmington."

Dr. W. A. Clark, chairman of a committee appointed for the purpose, made several suggestions for the name of the new organization. The point aroused much discussion, and the committee was finally given another week for its work. All those present were urged to hand suggestions to members of the committee.

In his opening address Prof. Moses emphasized the necessity of cooperation and oneness of aim

No Decision Yet As To Rebuilding

Business Section of Town is Threatened by Big Fire Early Sunday Morning

C. B. White has not decided whether he will rebuild the pool room and bowling alley which was destroyed by fire recently. It will be some time before the insurance is adjusted, and Mr. White will not make his decision until that matter is settled.

The fire was one of the worst in the history of the town. The pool room and bowling alley, in which the fire started, was burned to the ground with all its contents. The town hall was considerably damaged by the flames and water, and for a time it looked as if the electric light plant and the big livery barn of John C. Allen were doomed to destruction.

The blaze started about 12:15 o'clock Sunday morning. When the flames were discovered the pool room, a one story frame structure, was burning fiercely. The fire bell was sounded, and volunteers came running from all parts of the town to aid in the

INTERCLASS DEBATE

The annual Freshman-Sophomore debate will be held in the Chapel this evening at 8:15 o'clock. The question is Resolved that the United States Should Prohibit the the Exportation of War Materials to Belligerent Nations. The Sophomore team composed of Ashbrook, McGeoch, and Britt will uphold the affirmative. The negative will be defended by the Freshmen representatives, Taylor, Richards, and Lowstetter. Both teams have been working hard on the question, which is one of vital importance at the present time. No admission fee will be charged.

Fourth Number Of Community Lyceum Course

William Sterling Battis Appears in Life Portrayals Of Some of Dickens' Characters

The fourth number of the Community Lyceum Course was presented in the Second U. P. Church last Friday evening by William Sterling Battis, who appeared in life portrayals of some of Dickens' characters. Mr. Battis' performance was interesting and amusing, as well as instructive, and a large audience was greatly pleased by the entertainment.

As an interpreter of Dickens, Mr. Battis is certainly an artist his portrayals being masterpieces of interpretative impersonation. In the course of the evening a dozen or more characters are presented, each complete in costume and makeup, the changes being made with great rapidity. Mr. Battis' repertoire ranges from the hardened outlaw Bill Sykes to the tender old grandfather of Little Nell.

Mr. Battis' performance is unique in many ways, but in none more so than in the fact that he permits the audience to watch him make up. His explanatory talks while thus engaged add greatly to the entertainment. His ability to differentiate between characters reveals much skill and experience.

JUNIOR ORATIONS

The annual series of Junior Orations will begin Friday evening January 14. The orations will be continued two evenings each week until each member of the class has had a chanee to appear on the platform.

Series of Meetings

Dr. J. Alvin Orr will hold a series of meetings at the College during the latter part of February.

Dr. McElree's Funeral Services

Held in the Second U. P. Church Yesterday Afternoon

The funeral services of Dr. E. N. McElree were held in the Second U. P. Church yesterday afternoon. Rev. A. A. Graham was in charge of the services. He was assisted by Dr. R. G. Ferguson and Dr. J. O. Campbell.

Dr. McElree died Saturday afternoon after an extended illness. He was 77 years of age. For many years Dr. McElree was pastor of the Second U. P. Church of this place, and previous to his retirement was one of the best known ministers in the United Presbyterian denomination.

Two sons survive: Prof. J. J. McElree of Westminster College, and Rev. Breaden McElree of Keokuk, Iowa.

Christian Association NOTES

Phipps had charge of the Y. M. C. A. meeting January 4, and gave an excellent talk on the subject of "A New Start."

The Y. M. C. A. work has been hindered somewhat by the absence of President Jameson, who is detained at home by sickness.

The Y. W. C. A. meeting Thursday evening was in charge of the Volunteer Band.

There will be a joint meeting of the Christian Associations next Tuesday evening in the interests of the Howard Martin Fund.

Miss Knott led the Y. W. C. A. ...g January 4.

...iston was in ... C. A. meeting ... The subject ...on."

... of Jesus" was ...iscussion in Young Men's Bible Class last Sabbath. Prof. J. D. Barr as teacher pictured the Christ as the Man whose influence and power has dominated the ages. It is impossible to doubt His divinity and explain entirely away His persistence and power thru the ages. It solves the problem finally to accept Him as the divine Son of God. Jesus did not aim to be original in His teachings; yet his originality consisted in selecting from the mass of rubbish of other teachers the ethical truths that were everlasting. Four aspects of Christ set Him apart from other men: first as to sex; He was a man yet he can be no more to man than to women; tender as a woman and manly as the manliest of men. As to race He was a Hebrew yet who thinks of Him merely as a Jew. As to the age in which He lived His mind cannot be dated as other great teachers. Finally as to rank He was at home with kings and poor people alike.

Camp Suegin Round-up

A number of Westminster men attended the Camp Suegin Round-up in the Second U. P. Church, Pittsburgh, Monday and Tuesday evenings, December 27 and 28. Among those present were, Mercer '16, Grundish '16 Jameson '16, Toy '18, Schenck '18, Taylor '19, Miller '19, McMurray '19 and Robertson '19.

PAVED STREETS

in the task of improving the town He suggested that the aim of the organization should be to make New Wilmington an educational center, about which a residence district should be built.

Among the things for which to plan Prof. Moses suggested a post office building, better mail service, better railroad facilities, an artificial lake, improved walks, paved streets and more civic pride. "Increase of population of a town does not depend upon industries," he said, "but upon the spirit of the inhabitants."

The new organization was formed New Year's Eve when about fifty citizens met in the High School Building to discuss the project. After enthusiastic and optimistic speeches urging improvements, steps were taken to effect a permanent organization.

At that time the following Board of Directors was elected: Prof. E. R. Moses President, H. T. Getty, F. W. Ferris, J. M. Houston, and Prof. W. W. Campbell. Later in the week T. O. Hogue was appointed Secretary-Treasurer.

...work of fighting the flames ... students rendered efficient aid.

By the hardest kind of work and endurance the fire was kept from spreading to the light plant and to Allen's barn. For a time it seemed as if nothing could save the town hall, but the fire fighters managed to get control of the flames, and confine them to the poolroom.

C. B. White the owner of the poolroom, has no idea how the fire started, unless it was from a lighted match someone had carelessly dropped in the building prior to closing time. He carried insurance amounting to $1,200, and rates his loss at $2,000.

Currie-Blystone

Clyde E. Currie of the Junior class was married to Miss Alice Myrtle Blystone of Bethel on Thursday, December 23. Mr. and Mrs. Currie are now residing at Bethel. Mr. Currie is well known as one of the proprietors of the College Book Store.

Her Mother Dead

Mrs. James L. Bone of Columbus, Ohio, mother of Miss Anna Bone of Junior class, died at her home on last Wednesday after a short illness of pneumonia. Mrs. Bone was well known in New Wilmington, having been a frequent visitor at the Overlook and at the Hillside.

Senator Cannon To Speak

Ex- Senator Frank J. Cannon of Utah will address a union meeting of all the local congregations in the Second U. P. Church next Sabbath evening, his subject being 'Mormonism." The meeting is under the auspicies of the National Reform Association. Senator Cannon is well known in this vicinity, having been one of the lecturers at the local Chautauqua.

"Twelfth Night"

The Class in Dramatic Expression is planning the presentation of Shakespeare's comedy "Twelfth Night" on Friday, February 4. The Class has been working all semester under the direction of Prof. Moses, and the play is expected to come up to the high standard set in previous years.

Quartet Sings

A quartet from the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary sang in the Sixth United Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh last Wednesday evening. Three of the members of the quartet are J. K. Stewart '13. J. C. Fulton '15, and Robert Cummings '13.

NOTHING WORTH WHILE was ever accomplished without enthusiasm And no wonder, enthusiasm is dependent upon love and ideals, the two things which sum up the entire difference between drudgery and cheerful service. Life is a monotonous treadmill to those who have not an abiding, far-reacning love in their hearts, and whose eyes are not fixed upon some uplifting ideal. It is the pulsing of such a love in the heart, and the influence of such ideals upon the mind, that permits that abiding joy and purpose and power that we are accustomed to name enthusiasm.

THE HOLCAD WISHES everyone of its readers a happy and prosperous New Year. True happiness, however, is largely a matter of the individual. In spite of the happiness of others, in spite of the well wishes of friends, there can be no real joy in the life that is not at peace with itself. For this reason it would be a good thing for us to take a reckoning, to see wherein we fail to attain joy. Doubtless there are some things we should put out of our lives. And then there are many things we should strive to attain—more patience, more thoughtfulness, more love, less worship of a buried past, and a braver forward look into the future.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF the formation of an organization for the purpose of improving the community is one that should be welcomed by all who have the interests of the town or College at heart. Such an organization, with the enthusiastic spirit that has already been revealed, can prove of inestimable benefit to both New Wilmington, and Westminster. No one will deny that the town and college are linked together in many ways, and that

EAST AND WEST

(The poem below is printed by the New York Call. The Call got it from Prof. E. J. Ward of Wisconsin University, who says that it came to him in a fragmentary form and he knows neither the title nor the name of the author.)

Men look to the East for the dawning things,
For the light of a rising sun,
But they look to the West, the crimson West,
For the things that are done.

For out of the East they have always come—
The cradle that saw the birth
Of all the heart-warm hopes of men
And all the hopes of earth.

There in the East arose a Christ,
There in the East there gleamed
The dearest dream, the clearest dream,
That ever a prophet dreamed.

For there in the East we dreamed the dream
Of the things we hoped to do,
And here in the West, the crimson West,
The dreams of the East come true.

Dr. A. T. Ormond Died Recently

President of Grove City College Dies Suddenly While on an Auto Trip to Elderton

Dr. Alexander T. Ormond, the president of Grove City College, died suddenly Saturday afternoon, December 18. Dr. Ormond was 67 years old, and was well known throughout the United States as an educator and philosopher.

Dr. Ormond left Grove City early Saturday morning, intending to visit his brother at Elderton where he planned to spend the holidays. While on the way he complained of feeling ill. His companions rushed the automobile forward in an endeavor to reach the physician at Elderton. When it was realized that this would be impossible the party took Dr. Ormond to a farm house, where he died before medical aid could be brought.

Dr. Ormond was born at Punxsutawney in 1848. He graduated from Princeton in 1877, and received his M. A. degree one year later. In 1880 he accepted the chair of philosophy in the University of Minnesota, where he remained three years. Later he spent some time in study at Bonn and Berlin. Upon his return from Europe he was called to the chair of philosophy at Princeton University, which position he occupied for thirty years. In 1913 he became president of Grove City, succeeding the late Dr. Isaac Ketler.

The funeral services were held in Grove City Monday afternoon, December 20. Westminster was represented by Dr. Charles Freeman and Professors E. R. Moses, J. A. Shott, B. W. Bridgman, W. W. Troup and D. O. McLaughrey.

YOU SHOULD READ

We have read many articles condemning millionaires who grind down their workmen, who fleece widows and orphans, and who hoard great stores of riches in their Fifth Avenue mansions. It is with relief that we read an article stating positively that benevolent millionaires (the kind, inspired ones like Andrew Carnegie) are threats at the very life of the American people. Nobody but Gerald Stanley Lee could have conceived such an idea. His article on "Mr. Carnegie and His Peace Flock" (Everybody's January 1916) is original, startling, and readable. He presents Mr. Carnegie in a new light—and also discusses Mr. Ford's peace venture. The article is well worth reading

SENIOR'S PSALM OF LIFE

Tell us not to come to Chapel,
Breakfast's but an empty dream,
And the student's wise that slumbers,—

Life is real! Life is earnest!
Next Commencement is our goal!
Back to college thou returnest
Was not spoken of a soul.

Daily pleasure and not sorrow
Is our destined end and way,
We will find that each tomorrow
Is no wiser than today.

Lessons long, and time is fleeting,
And our hearts though stout and strong
Still with nervous dread are beating
As we to the classroom throng.

In the College field of battle,
In this sphere of campus life,
Be not like dumb, driven cattle—
Be a senior in the strife.

Trust no teacher, howe'er pleasant,
Student's ships have oft been sunk,
Act! Act! in the living present—
If you don't you'll surely flunk.

Lives of graduates remind us
To use the hours as they pass,
And departing, leave behind us
Ponies for the junior class.

Freshmen meek! Be up and doing
With a heart for any fate,
And in time you'll be seniors
If you labor hard and wait.

—H. R. P.

REASONABLE

Why do you advise placing plenty of sugar where the cockroaches can find it? asked the housewife.

I have just read that cockroaches have three thousand te th, answers the expert. My theory is that a heavy diet of sugar will necessarily cause toothache and the cockroach will die in great agony or else flee the neighborhood in a vain search for relief.

THE NEEDLESS NEEDLE

Now, ma, said the young man who was showing his visiting mother the wonderful sights of the city, would you like to go into the park and see Cleopatra's Needle?

I didn't know that hussy ever used a needle. She didn't spend much time sewing, from the scanty wardrobe she had in all the pictures of her that I ever saw.

SOMETHING MISSING

Arise and tade the young child and his mother and flee unto Egypt, was the text illustrated in a large highly-colored picture for the Sunday school pupils.

Now, children, said the teacher, here is the mother, there is the young child, and Egypt is seen in the distance.

Everyone was soberly impressed until a little boy piped up:

Yes, teacher, but where's the flea?

About Shopping In January . . .

Do you realize the many advantages to be had by shopping during January? It is the Up-to-Date merchants house cleaning time, the best of the season is over and he must now prepare for Spring Goods which will be due to arrive in the course of a few weeks. With the consumer, conditions are about the reverse, the greatest part of the winter season is yet to come, that being the the case, it behooves every thrifty person to be on the lookout for our special sales of seasonable merchandise, which will be advertised from time to time throughout the month.

A good New Years resolution would be to resolve that you will be a close observer of the New Castle Dry Goods Co.'s advertisments hereafter, and by so doing you will be in a position to work your dollars to the limit.

Football Schedule For 1916 Announced

Syracuse and West Virginia Wesleyan Are New Opponents Appearing On the Schedule

1916 FOOTBALL SCHEDULE

Sept. 23 Syracuse at Syracuse
Sept. 30 Penn State at State College
Oct. 7 University of Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh
Oct. 14 Slippery Rock State Normal at New Wilmington
Oct. 21 Washington & Jefferson at Washington, Pa.
Oct. 28 Open
Nov. 4 Geneva at New Wilmington
Nov. 11 Open
Nov. 18 West Virginia Wesleyan at Buckhannon
Nov. 25 Grove City at Grove City

Graduate Manager W. W. Campbell has announced the football schedule for next season. Syracuse and West Virginia Wesleyan are the new teams appearing on the list. The usual games have been arranged with Penn State, Pitt, W. & J., Geneva, Slippery Rock and Grove City. Two open dates appear, and Director Campbell is negotiating with several institutions, with the idea of staging two more contests on the local field. In all it is the most attractive schedule ever arranged for a Westminster eleven, and Director Campbell deserves much credit for his efforts.

The schedule is as formidable as it is attractive. Early in the season four of the greatest teams in the country will be met, this quartet of hard struggles with larger schools being relieved only by a practice game with Slippery Rock on October 14.

The game with Syracuse is of special interest. Westminster is not as well known among eastern schools as she is in this vicinity, and the game with Syracuse is the first contest with an important eastern school.

During November Geneva, West Virginia Wesleyan and Grove City will be met in the order named. The Wesleyan game is the only one that needs special mention. The West Virginia institutition generally turns out a good gridiron aggregation, and the game should be an interesting one.

HIGH SCHOOL TAKES GAME

Prep Boys Prove Too Strong For Waiters. Score Is 39 to 16

The High School varsity had little trouble defeating the Hillside Waiters in a loosely played game of basketball in the college gym Saturday evening. Both teams were frequently penalized for holding and running with the ball. Richards had a little on Pitzer when it came to shooting fouls, caging ten out of a dozen chances while the High lad only connected with seven. Pitzer and Bennett starred for the High School, while Richards was the best bet of the Hash Slingers. Lineup:

High S.—39		Hash S.—16
Beighle	F	Taylor
Bennett	F	Richards
Pitzer	C	Lucas
Phillips	G	Brandon
Byler	G	Lawther

Field Goals—Pitzer 8, Beighle 2, Bennett 6, Taylor, Lawther 2. Foul goals—Richards 10, Pitzer 7.

A GAY DECEIVER

"Who approaches?" inquired St. Peter of the angel on the lookout, as he started up from the depths of his crimson plush chair, at the same time ceasing to idly dangle the keys at the end of his great chain, and rudely thrusting aside the cherub who was polishing his patent leathers.

"Here, Percival, take the key and unlock the gate!"

The cherub obeyed and as the gate swung back a big bold-looking fellow stepped in. He whispered a few words to the guardian angel, and then with an admiring glance around the star-spangled hall, advanced straight towards St. Peter's throne. A page, slapped to with a bang the almanac of Father Time, and with a salaam so low that he bumped his head on a good intention which projected from the floor, began introducingly.

"Most Worshipful Excellency! This is Mr.——"

But the newcomer ignoring all ceremony, very abruptly interrupted.

"Most Ecclesiastical Excellency! I come to you from one of the most wonderful careers mortal ever had,' he answered haughtily, and was about to proceed with a further explanation when St. Peter spoke

"A broad statement," murmured St. Peter, "What have been your qualifications? Where are you from?"

But the page had already found the address in the directory and was now hastily scanning a monstrous wall-map, which he had unfolded by pressing an electric button.

"Here it is!" he explained excitedly as he stuck a lighted candle in the spot indicated.

"Oh! So you're from New Wilmington?" Continued St. Peter inquiringly. "Well?"

"Yes, from Westminster. I was Grand Visor down there. I am the guy that convinced the alumni and faculty (but not the students) that they did not need a new gymnasium. The money would have been a useless expenditure, so I persuaded the Board of Trustees. I nipped in the bud the movement for a new athletic field, explaining to them that the old one was better protected from the cold, more level and better situated. I advocate the uselessness of a new president, since the students were not expecting one anyway. I induced the legislative body to pass the anti-hazing law. I am the guy who refused to give the football men either jerseys or a banquet because it would have been money wasted. I convinced the officials that they did not need a baseball coach, because they could rely on their good reputation of a successful season last year. I was the main protestor against the movement for varsity basketball. It was I who——"

"Enough!" cried St. Peter. "You are in the wrong place." You got on a dirigible when you should have taken a submarine. Percival give me that writing pad, and my diamond-studded, gold-mounted, fountain pen."

The visitor sat in silence and watched St. Peter's flying fingers. When St. Peter had finished he folded the letter, placed it in the envelope and handed it to the visitor.

"Take the first aero-car going South. You will find here a pass, and a letter of recomendation. If the gentleman with the cloven hoof doesn't make you chancellor of his realms I miss my guess. Good-bye, Prince of Liars!"

INDOOR TRACK MEET

Coach McLaughrey called a meeting of the fellows interested in track recently and made the announcement that there was to be an indoor meet under the auspicies of the Westinghouse Athletic club of Pittsburgh some time in March. The fellows voted to accept the invation, so a team will be gotten into shape at once. It will mean hard out-door training, yet the Coach feels he can send a team to the meet which will be a credit to the school. Every fellow in college who can possibly do so should come out so that a team which represents the best in Westminster may be entered in the meet.

ATHLETIC SITUATION

Prof. W. W. Campbell was in Pittsburgh Monday, discussing the athletic situation of the College with the Prudential Committee. A meeting of the students interested will be called in the near future, to decide on any recomendations to be made to the Board.

TEAMS CHOSEN

For the Class Debates. Preliminarys Thursday

On January 7 the members of the Freshman debating team were chosen from the ten candidates who participated in the contest. Those chosen were Ferguson, Ashbrook, McGeoch with Milligan as alternate. The competition was spirited throughout and some promising work was done. W. I. Grundish has been appointed coach by Professor Moses.

On the following day trials for the Sophomore team were held in which seven men competed. The successful candidates were Mechlin, Kirkbride, Armitage and Murray as alternate. It will be the task of this team under the supervision of W. Braham to meet the Freshmen on the question of an increased navy. The date has not yet been definitely fixed but will probably be within the next two or three weeks. The Freshman were the winners last year but only Mechlin of last year's team remains.

The Intercollegiate prelims, as previously announced, will be held at 3 o'clock Thursday, January 14, in Adelphic Hall. Argument will be on the question, "Resolved that the United States should increase her present naval policy." Five minutes will be allowed for first speeches and two for rebuttal. Six men will be chosen, two of whom will be alternates Three debates have been arranged with a fourth pending. Geneva will appear at New Wilmington, Westminster at Penn State and Westminster at University of Pittsburg. The question debated will be the Monroe Doctrine. Communications received from Prof. Roy of W. & J., indicate that their team will probably debate in New Wilmington on the same subject. Westminster has an enviable record in debating and the honor of representating the college is worth considering, but every man who makes the team will get value received for his effort. A large number should be out.

Basketball Holds the Stage

The basketball season will be officially ushered in Saturday night when four teams in the Inter-Class League of Westminster make their debut to the public. The program for the opener is:

Freshmen vs. Sophomores.
Juniors vs. Seniors.

The outlook for a close race in the league this year is better than last year, as all the teams seem to be materially strengthened. The captains of the class teams are:

Seniors—Owen Shaffer
Juniors—E. V. Buckley
Sophomores—Joe McCracken
Freshmen—John Wherry

The games are always well attended both by the student body and the town basketball fans. Coach Tinkham or Mr. White will probably referee the contests this season.

If you claim to have class spirit, come out and cheer your team to victory.

Junior Orations

Groans and sighs were given uterance Saturday when the schedule for Junior orations was posted. These groans are an annual event, but their regularity makes them no less pathetic. This year there will be five evenings of entertainment, with the victims, as they term themselves, scattered thruout. Notwithstanding the fact that the class were somewhat opposed to delivering their productions, everyone is expecting some unusually good orations.

Der Deutsche Verein

The Deutsche Verein held the first meeting of January, Tuesday evening in the Music Hall. A musical program was carried out. Some of the best known German music was given on the Victrola while the Misses Murdock and Logan gave short speeches in German concerning the German composers.

Prof. Troup (assigning Mythology lesson)—Take Aphrodites and go to Hades.

RIGHT AND WRONG VIEWS OF ATHLETIC SPORT

Quoted from a circular issued by the National Collegiate Athletic Association representing about 130 colleges and universities.

"Athletic sport, if honorably and wisely conducted, can hold its own in any institution of learning: but to gain a position of dignity, it must be saved from many of its friends, and maintained on so high a level that no reasonable man can question its value. Rightly administered it strengthens the weak, improves the weak places in the strong, clears the brain, teaches boys and young men to know the relation of a clean, vigorous body to an actiue mind and an honorable life. Rightly conducted it is a school of manly skill, courage, honesty, self control and even to courtesy; wrongly conducted it is a school of bad manners, vulgarity, tricky evasion, brutality; the ideals not of a sportsman but of a sporting mau.

We are constantly told that in England men play for the sake of playing, whereas in America men play for the sake of winning. The more serious the question of winning, the more serious need of winning honorably. Sport in America is not mere fun; it is a test of character, and nothing that makes the player less a gentleman belongs to it."

"To maintain high ideals in athletic sport is the chief purpose of the National Collegiate Association."

"Though strictly the Association has no power over the colleges it represents, it has unlimited opportunity of influence. Its discussions of Athletics are the most important in America; and its opinions find expression in "Rules Committees" and in standards of athletic games throughout the country.

The Association encourages "Faculty control of athletics," beleiving that the man in charge of physical education should be a member of the Faculty and as good a man as any in it; that he should have a thorough acquaintance with athletic sports and a strong sympathy with youth, knowing, and able to teach the difference between cleverness and trickery, between manliness and brutality, between the amateur and the professional, between the sportsman and the sporting man."

Nicht Getun!

A week or so ago, the Kaiser of Germany arrived at headquarters arrayed in his most glorious uniform—white, with silver facings, white mantle and silver helmet—but dripping wet. The astonishment his bedraggled condition created was heightened, when taking no notice of his generals, he paced the floor, repeating to himself the strange sentence "He did not do it. He did not do it."

A veteran general approached him. "Majesty, I am afraid you are not well."

The Kaiser only muttered. "He did not do it." and gloomily strode from end to end of the hall, as one in a deep reverie, still murmuring the cryptic phrase.

Then another bold soldier came forward and faced his War Lord. "I am sure your Majesty is indisposed: can I be of service?"

At last the Kaiser was recalled to his surroundings and with characteristic emphasis exclaimed: "He did not do it. He did not walk on the water."

Not Forgotten

The foot ball fellows have not yet forgotten the dinner which Dr. and Mrs. Russell gave them on the sixteenth of December. It was strictly a "stag" affair, so of course, everyone had a good time. The dining room was beautifully decorated, but the most delightful features of the party were the things which had been prepared in the kitchen calculated to tempt any jaded appetite. There was none in evidence, though, for every one ate everything. Before the banquet, the team chose as its captain for the next season C. McQuiston of the class of '16. The team also presented a handsome loving cup to little Miss Marcella Jane McLaughrey, in appreciation of the splendid work her father has done for the team and for Westminster during the past three years.

Kindly Remembered

In order to make the day more pleasant for Miss Mary Ferguson, who is seriously ill at the Overlook a number of young people from the college sang for her Sabbath evening before chapel. These are the little acts of thoughtfulness and kindness which mean so much to the persons for whom they are done.

Promoted

Mr. Weber, who for some months has been holding the position of janitor in the college building, was promoted on the first of January, to the office of Superintendent of Grounds and Public Buildings, Westminster College. We rejoice with Mr. Weber in his promotion.

Good Games

In a sizzling hot game from the toot of the whistle, "Mike" Wherry's Freshmen Five defeated Tinkham's Filibusterers Saturday night, the final count standing 43-38, The Freshman team as a whole played sterling basketball, Captain Wherry leading in the number of goals. George Neal, the big guard, broke his wrist in an endeavor to "dish" one out of the netting. For the Filibusterers, "Buster" Allen covered the floor with his old time skill, while the work of General Tinkham could not be improved upon. The Freshmen have a good man in "Goat" Buttons, who cavorted around on the wax (?) like a spring lamb.

Mr. Neal who was injured will be out of the game for some time, and will be very much missed by the team.

A preliminary game was staged between the "Apaches," led by Chief Grundisch, and "The Wild Men of Borneo," commanded by Oom Paul Schenck. The contest ended in a free for all loving match, and the referee was moved to such a degree of mirth that he forgot to keep score. Earl Dart covered himself with—dust.

Was Bribed

The cub reporter who has been "doing" the contest between the Y. M. C. A. and Girls' Bible Classes has finally been bribed to stop writing statistics. Ever since the the contest began the girls have been ahead and now there is such a difference in their score cards that we cannot afford to hire a skilled mathematician to compute the figures. According to the rules the girls are preparing to do justice to a big feed which the boys are going to give the first of February as a penalty for their few points.

Fine Skating

Everybody has been out taking the fresh air cure the past week for the skating at the cut has been grand. Anyone who ever knew how to skate, and many who do not, gather on the old skating ground for a good time. The enthusiasts hope that no thaws or examinations will interfere with their fun.

No. 3

The Coward

(With apologies to a Guy-named Maupasant.)

BY JACK DALTON, 1917.

It cannot be denied, but that Henry Humphries loved his wife—yea he loved her beyond words of expression. To prove to you that I know what I am talking about, I would have you peep in the back of Henry's watch. And this after the honeymoon had waned, and the Humphries had returned to father, with stickers on their suit cases, and rice still in their hair.

Unlike most men, Henry Humphries kept on raving about his soul-mate even after he discovered that the divine, spiritual little being he had trailed to the altar could stow away an amazing cargo of corned beef and cabbage. He was so jealous of Angelina that he would never let her visit the postoffice, for fear she would ask for the male.

One evening he was treating his wife, and some of his wife's folks, to a welsh rarebit, and he was feeling all to the Ponce de Leon. The restaurant was lighted brilliantly and the pop of many little corks sounded like a sweet symphony in Henry's ears. Suddenly Angelina kicked his shins under the table: "Say Hen," she asked, who's that old pink-whiskered fossil over there that's been staring at me for fifteen minutes like a man looking for a long lost sister?"

Henry trained his optics on a little man sitting across the room. Humphries was a man of action. Furious with rage he left his party, and walked heavily across the floor. It looked like a scrap. "Do you know, sir," he snorted at the offender, "that you've been staring like a dip at my wife, for the last fifteen minutes?"

The little man coughed apologetically.

"How can I help it," he replied, "she's the handsomest woman in the room."

Go East Young Man

In New York City they have organized the League for the Promotion of Marriage. The statistics sharp who started the ball rolling, has discovered that there are 400,000 lonely feminine hearts in the metropolis, and about 300,000 Eveless Adams wandering unmolested in this modern Eden. Staggering figures these. A vast wilderness of undarned socks, unemptied ash trays, patent buttons and unclaimed affections. How to rope, throw and tie these skittish sticklers for freedom; how to beg, boost, or blindfold them and lead into the grooves where grows the fruitful family tree—that is the question the League for the Promotion of Marriage is going to try to solve. "Get together" is the watchword, and they hope that sooner or later in their campaign the basiful boy who has never had his heart softened, will find the one from the 400,000 whose pericordium beats in tune with his, a maid who will not object to his placing a plain gold band over the ring finger of the heart hand. It sounds vero Utopian.

Take the tip and go East young man!

On the Sharpsville

New student (at station)—What train is this?

Station Agent.—That's the 4:15 last Monday afternoon. You ought to get to the Junction at half past three the day before yesterday, according to the time-table.

Mrs. Smith (in private conference)—If you would read more, you'd be five times the girl you are.

Frances Perkins (thinking to herself)—Well I don't think I need to do that, I'd rather go on a diet.

Margaret Miller (buying gifts) Shall I pay for these or charge them to Deutsche Verein?

GOOD GAMES MARK BASKETBALL OPENER

Class League has Fine Start

All kinds of basket ball was witnessed Saturday night when the class league was formally opened. The score board results are as follows: Seniors 40, Juniors 18; Sophomores 32, Freshmen 30

The first game between the two upper classes furnished a great deal of interest and amusement to the large crowd, altho at times the playing was somewhat erratic. Capt. Shaffer and "Tess" Braham played in their usual form, while the addition of "Tuss" McLaughrey to the team strengthened it materially.

Capt. Buckley has a good outfit and with a little more practice will be in the running for the championship.

The lineup:

Seniors 40		Juniors 18
Shaffer	F	Mercer
Braham	F	Patton
Stewart	C	Buckley
McLaughrey	C
D. McQuiston	G	Vincent
McNaugher	G	C. McQuiston
Stewart	G

Goals from field, Shaffer 3, Braham 5, Stewart 7, McLaughrey 4, Mercer 3, Buckley 3. Foul goals, Shaffer 2 out of 6, Mercer 3 out of 6, Buckley 3 out of 13.

The second game furnished the real thrills for the crowd. From the toot of the whistle it was closely contested, the Sophomores holding a slight advantage at the end of the first period.

The last few minutes of the game kept the fans on their feet. Back and forward the contest surged, one team getting ahead, only to be overtaken by the other. A second before the whistle sounded, Capt. McCracken tossed a field goal from the center of the floor, the ball

MRS. RUSSELL ENTERTAINS

Christian Association Cabinets and Volunteer Bands

Mrs. Russell entertained the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. cabinets, together with the Volunteer Bands at an informal dinner at the Hillside, Monday evening. The affair was given to honor Miss Haggard and Mr. Ellers, who were here in the interest of the student work. The affair was delightful, as these affairs always are, the music room was very tastefully decorated, and the guests were served by Mrs. Russell, Miss Martin, Miss MacLaggan, Mrs. Johnston and Mrs. Graham. At the conclusion of the dinner, an informal discussion was held as to ways and means of making the work more practicable.

Contest Closes

Next Sabbath will mark the close of the contest between the two Bible Classes. Although the girls are so far ahead that there is not much doubt as to the outcome, yet it is urged that every member of the two classes makes a special effort to get out. Aside from increasing the contest figures those who come can very greatly increase their knowledge of the Bible, for neither Dr. Ferguson nor Prof. Troup spares any pains in preparing an interesting lesson.

At the Chapel

Mr. Ellers, student secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who has been with the students for the past two or three days, addressed the student body in the chapel service last Sabbath evening. His whole purpose was to make a forceful appeal to young people to fit themselves for service and for leadership.

The Juniors are taking Psychology and are evidently trying to display their erudition, for this is the motto they are having printed on their oration programs: "No psychosis without neurosis." Of course we all know what that means.

WHO'S WHO AT WESTMINSTER

"HERB" JAMISON

We don't like the idea of writing enconiums of people until they "are under the sod and the dew"—a false notion—but probably rightly instigated by the first individual who sold his panegyrics to Peruna. Yet it is but fair that the worthy man should receive his epaulets this side the Jordan for service—it may be that they have no G. A. R. on the other side. All of which is to warn you off the grade crossing of a home-made eulogy.

If old "Tub" Diognes were in the flesh today and following his whim of stalking readers of the Holcad with an electric flash-light, it wouldn't be long until "Herb" Jamison and he would be cronies.

Herbert is a "good fellow"—(will the printer please put it in raised red letters and a capital G?)—and he fills an important niche in college activities.

He is the kind of a young man you and I would like to have for night watchman if we owned a mint. He doesen't keep his religion on a shelf during the week and then parade it on Sunday morning. It is a vital principle to him, and he so lives it thru the twenty-four hours of the day. He is as faithful in his endeavor to follow the Master as was Thomas O'Kempis, but his altruistic spirit is alien to the narrow asceticism of the middle ages. "Always doing something for others" s Jamison's motto, and it is working overtime while "God bless our Home" is hanging up side down at our house. He stints himself not in his unselfishness, neither in time nor labor. Just at present his efforts at promoting the Bible classes are reaching fruition in awakened interest in spiritual activities.

The old addage that a man can't acheive great success without courting enemies, has been knocked into a cocked hat by Herb. We have yet to meet any fellow who has carried around any criptallized animosity against him. And this doesn't denote any weakness in his armor—decidedly the reverse. Christ's injunction, "Love your enemies," has been the alchemizing influence in Jamison's life. It has been the Gift of the Magi to him, and he has returned it a thousand fold.

Not until Christianity has produced men of his type the world o'er, may we expect the Millenium.

FOR A FEW moments every morning we are expected to meet for devotional exercises in the chapel. We come to chapel as a matter of habit and because we get "docked" some credits if we don't. But are we really devotional in our attitude towards the service? How many of us are there who use these moments for a brief review of the first lessons? So many times this comes as a temptation and, to judge from appearances, is very often yielded to; but with a little strength of character and a little foresight in studying our lessons, this need not be done. Study your lessons beforehand, and reserve at least, these few moments at the opening of the day's work for worship and devotion.

A Pleasing Selection

Music lovers of the college community were privileged to hear Miss Edna Dunham on Friday evening. All who heard Miss Dunham in the soprano solos of the Messiah, last spring, knew that they could expect something good. The audience was small, but this did not detract from the enjoyment of the evening. Miss Dunham, accompanied by Miss Douthett gave a very pleasing selection of song. Her presence on the platform was so easy and unassuming that her audience was completely captivated.

Through a misguided report all the speakers at the last Deutsche Verein meeting were not included in the article in the Holcad. The names unintentionally omitted were: Margaret Miller, Esther Cummings, Owen Shaffer.

JUNIOR ORATIONS

First Program Was Given On Thursday Night

The First program of Junior Orations was given Thursday evening to an appreciative audience. During every production the audience was attentive, each one feeling that he could best help the speaker in that way. To make any comparison between the orators would be unfair to the judges; but it can be said that each one did well and no one forgot. Prof. Moses, presiding, introduced the speakers and their subjects.

Robert E. Lee — Ella Snodgrass
The American Girl — Marie Lytle
The Downfall of Christian Civilization — David Schnable
Education and the Motion Picture — Genevieve Houston
The Little Alien — Clarence Anderson
Men of the Hour — Marion Hover

The last two speakers are Seniors. In the intermissions the college orchestra relieved the nervious strains by giving us sweet strains of music. As judges for the orations the class have selected Prof. J. M. Shaffer, Prof. J. D. Barr and Dr. Freeman.

Pray for this Purpose

In order to prepare for the meetings which Dr. McCullough of Pittsburgh is going to hold here in February, a number of the girls are holding prayer circles every evening before dinner. It is the sincere desire of every earnest Christian worker that there should be a real spiritual awakening here in our school. May we not all join our prayers together for that purpose?

(Author of "A Pair of Black Eyes")

". hyllis, I am glad your hair
Does not resemble purest gold,
That your are plain instead of fair
Is good; I'm glad you're old,
And that—er—well—that is between us
Too—you're not a diving Venus.

If you were built as you are not;
Adorned with every girlish charm
You'd be a peach; but soon I wot
You'd run to some protecting arm
And we—O grevious thought—we'd look
A long, long time for such a cook!"

Muggsy Says

"Dat man McLaughrey looked like de Singer building on wheels Saturday night. De Seniors have a pretty good fleet wid four submarines an' a Dreadnought."

'Some of the boys are suffering from an enlarged Sarah Bellum because de Editor was kind enough to put em in the box score. Its true dat victors get de spoils, but sometimes de spoils spoil de victors."

"Shatto lives up to his name. He says our floor is so big, dat he loses himself like a sunbeam in a coal mine."

"De Janes don't know much about de game. I heard one say: 'Oh girls, don't you wish we would get another touchdown before the last man's out.' And someone wid de chewin' gum habit back of me wispers: 'Isn't Mr. Button just killing in that suit!' Maybe so, but I haven't seen any Sophomore obituaries."

A Joint Meeting

At a joint meeting of all the Young People's Societies of the town, held in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening, Miss Haggard, traveling secretary of the Student Volunteer Association spoke of the need of praying earnestly and sincerely for power in our lives—not long prayers—but simple and heartfelt. Throughout her whole talk, one felt the sincerity and strength of her life which showed complete surrender to the call of the Master's service.

SWIFT SOPHOMORES STAND SUPREME

Secured Start Saturday. Seniors Silenced

SECOND SESSION SURELY SOME SELECT SIGHT

The Sophomore basketball team, last year's champions, took the lead in the class league Saturday night, when they defeated the Seniors 35-31. It was a close and exciting game all the way—one of those bang up, nip and tuck games that keeps the nerves a tingling and the corpuscles doing a tango in the hemoglobin.

The first half ended in a draw, 16-16. In the second period the team work of the Sophs began to assert itself, which, added to some spectacular shooting by Captain McCracken, placed them far in the lead. Nothing daunted by the handicap of the score board, the 1915 aggregation evened things up with a flash of real form. Seesawing back and forth the game progressed. Always when the Sophs would obtain a comfortable margin, the Seniors would display a sporadial spurt which kept the game in doubt. The struggle finally ended with the Sophs four points to the good.

McCracken starred for the Sophs, while the work of Captain Shaffer and "Tuss" McLaughrey for the Seniors was a feature.

The lineup.

Sophs—35		Seniors—35
Cummings	F	Stewart
Igo, Steele	F	Braham
McCracken	C	McLaughrey
Strathearn	G	McNaugher
Sniff, Coulter	G	Shaffer, Markle

JUNIORS VS. FRESHMEN

The second game resulted in a victory for the Freshmen 54-26. The contest was harder fought than the score board would indicate, and the first period Captain Buckley's men were in the running. The second half showed a reversal of form for the Freshmen and their machine once under way, swept the Juniors off their feet. Button, Shatto, and D. Igo worked the floor well and Wherry and Douthett carried off the basket honors.

A large crowd witnessed both

A TROLLEY LINE

Discussed by the New Castle News

The New Castle News gave more than a column of editorial space on Tuesday evening to reasons why the Mahoning and Shenango Valley Railways Co. should build a trolley line from New Castle to New Wilmington. That is the kind of agitation that counts. Keep it up Mr. Editor. It is believed by the News that such a line, possibly extended to Mercer, would in a few years become very valuable to the Railways Co., would add 1000 to the population of New Wilmington, would place Westminster—already the "Little Giant" among educational institutions—in the very front rank among colleges, and be of great commercial advantage to New Castle as well as making it possible for a great many more of her young people to secure an education.

The editorial was the result of a talk given by Dr. Russell, the evening before, before the Rotary Club of New Castle. The Doctor never misses an opportunity to say a good word for Westminster and New Wilmington.

JUNIOR ORATIONS

Many Fine Speeches Made by Students

Before a large crowd on Teusday evening, Jan. 19, orations were given in an excellent manner by the students whose names and subjects follow: "The Jew in America," Margaret Brown; "Womanly Heroism in War," Clara Cummings; "Pan-Germanism," F. R. Moore; "Brains-plus." Emily Johnston; "After the War, What?," H. M. Shields.

On last Friday evening another large audience was present, interest in the orations seeming to grow as the programs progressed. Agnes Burton chose for her subject "When the Jelly Jellied," Ralph Bell talked on "Theory vs. Practice," Vera Foy discussed "Education of Defective Children." D. Ormond McLaughrey's "Labor and Living" was an interesting talk, "A Plea for Idleness" was well given by W. H. Lindsey; and Owen Shaffer described the necessity of "A National Health Bureau."

Again on Monday evening the chapel was well filled when the fourth class in orations was called. The subjects and speakers follow: "Our National Crisis, "Walter Hart; "The Needy Mothers and Neglected Children," Betty Long; "The Salary not Found in the Envel-

ADDITIONAL DEBATE

W. & J. Added to List of Debaters

An addition was made to the schedule for the debating team recently when Prof. Kay accepted the invitation of Westminser College for a debate to be held at New Wilmington in the near future. A date has not been agreed upon, but if it is decided to hold this debate after those with Pitt and Penn State, a third team will be chosen to make this trip. However, if the Westminster debate comes before the other two, the team which is to debate with Pitt will be sent to New Wilmington, and thus, will get some practise for their work to follow.

Westminster has made quite a record for itself in its debating department in the last four years. During this time it has won unanimous decisions over Grove City, Wooster, Bethany, Pitt and Penn State and has lost to Juniata and Swathmore by one vote. It may be seen from this record that their representatives can be counted upon to make the debate an exciting one.

This year Westminster will debate with State, Pitt, Geneva and Washington aud Jefferson, the subject for all the debates being: "Resolved, That the United States should abandon the Monroe Doctrine." They will probably uphold the affirmative against W. & J.

Prof. Kay has received a letter from Prof J. T. Marshman, who has charge of the debating at State, in which he says that March 12th, the date suggested by W. & J. for the triangular debates, is suitable to them. Pitt has not yet been heard from in regard to the date. This year Penn State will debate with Swathmore, Dickinson, Westminster, Franklin and Marshall, Washington and Jefferson, and University of Pittsburgh.—W. & J. Weekly.

Religious Meetings

Some weeks ago a definite movement was quietly begun for the welfare of Westminster and her students. Saturday evening marked the beginning of action by the arrival of Mr. Bookman and Mr. Weigle. Mr. Weigle needs no introduction to the students for he attended Westminster for three years and is well known as "Stiffy." Mr. Frank Bookman is Y. M. C. A. Secretary of Penn State, and although his stay among us has been short we have come to know him as a man of power and as having a wide experience in Christian work among students. Both men have come to us with their helpful and inspiring messages and we are especially fortunate in securing them at this time because of the great impending evangelistic campaign at Penn State.

On Saturday evening Mr. Bookman met with the Christian Association Cabinets in joint session down at the manse. Both men addressed the Bible Class on Sabbath morning and emphasized the great importance of making the Bible a real part of our lives. The regular morning and evening services were well attended and the afternoon meeting for men was of special interest.

All these meetings were in preparation for the regular evangelistic meetings which will begin Feb. 12 under Dr. McCullough, Get in the game the fight is on.

Engagement Announced

Mrs. S. B. Donaldson, Wilkinsburg, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Donaldson, to James Frank Shrader of Philadelphia. The wedding will be an early spring event. Both parties were members of the class of 1907.

MYSTERIOUS

And Wierd was the Totten & Co. Show

New Wilmington was treated, on last Wednesday evening, to an exhibition of the apparently impossible. Totten and Co. presented many new and some old tricks in a very clever manner, the entertainment being refined and original throughout. Mr. Totten, after exhibiting his powers of declamation and story telling, proceeded to "annoy some of the worthy ones in the audience. While the magician was teaching several boys the ins and outs of the game, those in the neighborhood of our worthy President noticed an unseemly agitation at the back of his coat. The agitation came violent, and the magician who had come down to where the Doctor was sitting, deftly extricated the source of the trouble. "A chicken"—burst simultaneously from the lips of all. When the rosy red at last left the Doctor's face, amusement was still audible in many parts of the audience. After the magician had bewildered a Sophomore, (the wise one) by a display of the occult, he ended the entertainment with a patriotic display of the "red, white and blue," and an appeal to the people to "stand by the ship."

The German Society

Der Deutsche Verein held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, January 19, in Cresto Hall. The evening was spent in discussing the four German poets—Goethe, Schiller, Lessuig and Heine. Excellent essays by Leonora Conway, Genevieve Houston and Mary Jamison, were read and Fred Reed, Helen Artman and D. O. McLaughgave selections from the poets named. On Feb. 2, there will be a joint meeting of the French and German Clubs in the Science Hall, when Miss MacLaggan will give an illustrated talk on Italy.

Fine Sleighing

The little snowflake has come with millions of its brothers and sisters and again the merry bells are ringing on the crisp air. Everyone welcomes the good sleighing even though it does come at an inopportune moment, for there is a certain sect of people in college who cannot associate sleigh rides with exams.

TO WESTMINSTER

Blest moment you have come at last,
Thou vision in my troubled past,
Of College—oh, that happy dream
Beside my sunny southern stream

Sweet, Fostering Mother be thou mine
And on my path, I pray thee shine
The lamp of knowledge long denied,
For which my soul these years has sighed.

For you to live, for you to strive
With every art that men connive,
Shall be my task, my nightly thot,
Though oft with pain and danger fraught.

For you, a home, a mother's left,
For you, a sister is bereft;
Then set my lamp a blazing bright,
For honor, truth, and priceless right.

Thou home of merriment and mirth,
Can mortal estimate thy worth,
Until the winds of destiny
Have blown him far away from thee?

I've left them all today for you,
Home, love, and skies of Southern hue;
Then father, mother, all, to me,
You owe to be, you owe to be.

I feel thy spirit now of love,
That stirs the heart, the soul to move;
That bids the soul be still and say,
"I'm for you now, tomorrow, aye."

Beneath thy shade, Westminster Fair,
Beneath thy tender guarding care,
If man falls short, then let him know,
T'was all because He willed it so.

Philosophy makes good reading for the man who has his rent paid.

When I was in school, I had as many "cases" as a yellow fever doctor in New Orleans. Here's a tip. When you think you've fallen in love at first sight———consult an occulist.

Things are not what they seem. Etymology says that "college" is from French colle—pasted or stuck, and etude—study. A place where everyone is stuck on study. (?)

Of course we are a Christian nation, even if that New York Sunday School superintendent persists in his endeavor to teach tangos with the New Testament. The eagle is our national bird, chosen presumably on account of its being a bird of pray.

When I wanted to go in for football, here was pa's definition of an athlete: "a dignified bunch of muscles, unable to split wood or sift ashes."

DEBATERS CHOSEN

At the Preliminaries Last Week

During the afternoon of Jan. 14, the preliminaries for the inter-collegiate debates were held. About sixteen contestants crossed swords in an effort to make a place on the two debating teams which are to represent the college in the coming inter-collegiate debates. Prof. Moses, Dr. Campbell and Prof. Bridgman acted as judges. The spirit of contest was rife and the discussion was a lively one. When Prof. Moses gave his decision he made the remark that it was the closest ranking he had ever been asked to make. The final count put the following men on the list; Ralph Patterson, Charles McQuiston, Lawrence Stewart, Frank Orr, Arteur Jewell and Daniel McQuiston. These are to be commended for their success and we bid them good speed in their efforts in the future to bring victory to our College; but we turn with outstretched dand of encouragement to those who met seeming defeat and we ask them to make this failure a stepping stone to attain the same goal when another year has rolled around.

SHARON A. C. DEFEATED SATURDAY

Score 64-42 in Favor of "All Stars," a Picked Team

"CHAUNCE" CANON WITH SHARON TEAM

A team picked from the class league, met and defeated the Sharon A. C. Saturday night, in the local "gym" 64-42.

Owing to the Crescent and the Kelly clubs taking advantage of the snow for sledding parties, the usual class league contests were cancelled. The Sharon game was an unexpected treat to the basket ball fans and furnished an hour and a half's excitement for a large crowd.

The Sharon A. C. is a formidable organization, captained by no less a worthy than "Chaunce" Canon the former Westminster athlete. "Chaunce" brought his passers down to Mew Wilmington with the avowed intention of humbling his former cronies. Canon came, saw and was conquored.

The "all stars" worked together like a well oiled machine. McCracken and Wherry led in the scoring. Wherry scored 8 out of 9 fouls, and Joe McCracken netted 13 field goals. Shatto and Cummings played the floor well and Strathearn's guarding was a feature.

The playing of the "all stars" reminds us that we once had a basketball varsity that brought fame and notoriety to Westminster, and we wonder why such a combination wouldn't be a good venture now as in former times. We wonder why.

The lineup:

Westminster 64		Sharon 42
Wherry	F	Gibbons
Cummings	F	Lafferty
McCracken	C	H. Canon
Strathearn	G	Ring
Shatto	G	C. Canon

Field goals, McCracken 13, Wherry 8, Cummings 6, Strathearn, Gibbons 9, Lafferty 2, H. Canon, 6. Foul goals, Wherry 8, H. Canon 4, C. Canon 4.

Referee, White; Umpire, Cummings.

The Editor Ill

Miss Dorothea Keast, editor of the Holcad, is ill, at her home in New Castle, suffering from a severe cold. We sympathize with her, and with the readers of the Holcad, which misses very greatly her leadership and work. We hope that she will be back soon, completely restored to health, and able to resume her work on the paper.

Le Cercle Francais

The French Society held its regular meeting last week in Miss Kickhoeffer's room. The program which was based on the Geography of France, was as follows:

Physical and Descriptive Geography, Betty Long; Colonies, Ethel Wight; Industries, Arthur Vincent; What a Tourist Sees in France. Mary Long.

Each subject was treated in a very interesting manner. The discussion was carried on in English.

Will Stage Play

The class in Dramatic Expression, under the direction of Prof. Moses, will give the comedy "She Stoops to Conquer" in the College Chapel, Friday evening, at eight o'clock. This play is considered the best of Oliver Goldsmith's productions, and is guaranteed to make the most pessimistic smile. Excellent costumes have been secured and the dramatis personae is the flower of Westminster talent. "Charlotte" Orr never appeared to better advantage than in the role of the Squire's Son, and "Tuss" McLaughrey as Diggro makes a bigger hit than he ever did on the gridiron. Marion Hover is the leading lady.

Don't fail to see the production.

Prof. Freeman "What is H-2 S O-4?"

Milligan—"For booze competition in Penna. according to our politics."

FRIDAY, THE TWENTY-NINTH

A Momentous Day in the History of the Junior Class

Friday, the sixth day of the week, named from the Scandinavian diety Frigga, the Goddess of love, enjoys a unique place in the history of mankind. It was on a Friday that Noah bought the first two by four for the Ark. On Friday Herodotus received his first check from the Bingville Bugle. On Friday Martin Luther was fed on a diet of worms. On Friday Austin Joe discovered New Wilmington. And on Friday, January twentyninth, nineteen hundred and fifteen, the class of 1916 concluded their splendid, five reel production of the famous tragedy "Juniors Orations."

The film opened with some thrilling war scenes. showing glimpes of class meetings, faculty conferences, and mighty orgies at Val's. A picture of the signing of the Peace Treaty was followed by a psychological study of "Hubbard" when he heard that the Juniors were going to charge admission. Then the drama proper opened, and the heart interest did not flag for a single instant. Every feature was played to a crowded house. Simmy's seven-tone orchestra (procured at great expense by the class) tried to furnish music at each performance.

It was decided to present a matinee performance some time during Commencement Week, and Martha Vincent, Agnes Burton, Marie Lytle, Betty Long, E. E. Mercer, Walter Lindsley, W. I. Grundish and Hanavan Alderman were selected as the company.

Prof. Shaffer, Prof. Barr and Dr. Freeman composed the Board of Censorship. Prof. Moses acted as stage director.

Crescent Sleighing Party

The annual Sleighing party of the Crescent Club was held on Saturday night. Four large bob sleds drawn by as many horses per sled, and filled with thirty happy couples, left the Hillside promptly at 2:30 and headed for Hubbard, 14 miles distant. The Sleighing was excellent and the spirited teams made good time, arriving about 5:30. Previous arrangements had been made about the entertainment and on arriving at Hubbard the crowd was divided half going to Dr. Button's home, the others to Mr. C. H. Stewart's. Cheery firesides and a warm welcome were heartily enjoyed after the cold drive. Following a thorough thawing out a bountiful supper was served. Reports are meagre but it is said the attacking party was led by Gen. Von Shafferstein and Gen. Von Tinkhamburg, together with Madame McLaggan and Joan of Martimque. The onslaught was terrific. Nothing could stand before the consuming fire. Gen. Food, it was thought was completely annihilated.

Games, music and songs completed the evening's program and at 9 o'clock the sleds turned homeward. All report a most enjoyable time.

The Department of Buildings and Grounds might utilize its spare time by cleaning the ice off the walks on the Campus.

THE McCULLOUGH MEETINGS

To be Opened on the 15th of the Month

A continuation of the series of evangelistic meetings which began last week with the visit of Mr Bookman and Mr. Weigle, is planned for in the visit of Rev. W. E. McCullough, D. D. of Homewood, Pa. Dr. McCullough's stay at Westminster, begining Monday evening, February 15, will probably continue about ten days. During each of these days he will lead the morning chapel exercises, and will conduct a daily vesper service in the chapel auditorium at 7 p. m. On Sabbath, an eleven o'clock as well as the evening chapel service is planned for, with Dr. McCullough in charge. Opportunity will be given during the days for personal conferences. It is hoped that a large number of students will take advantage of this opportunity to get in touch with one who has had a large experience in Christian work, and who is coming to us with the earnest desire to help any who may have personal problems or questions.

A number of students have made use of the addresses of the evangelist which have been posted in every conspicious corner so long, and have sent in requests that he deal with certain named questions or problems of personal or collegiate interest, It is hoped that with the help of this index of the college spirit he may be guided to bring to Westminster just the message that she needs. This campaign has not only been carefully planned but has been the object of much earnest prayer since the begining of the school year, that it may be successful in its initial purpose of bringing the student body into a nearer touch with God and a truer realization of the Christian life. Pray that God's spirit may be with Dr. McCullough to prepare him for his opportunity and responsibility here, and that we as a student body, may be made ready to receive what God has in store for us.

The Log of Adam and Eve

[ED. NOTE—Not long ago the world was surprised at the unearthing of an archaean rock in Neshannock Falls quarries, which was pronounced by Prof. Donnewetter of the Curnegen Institute, as containing a record of the Garden of Eden. We have secured the exclusive right to publish Prof. Donnewetter's translation which we assure our readers will throw an intimate light on the hitherto unknown inner life of the Adamses. The first installment is given herewith.]

Starting the Race

BY ADAM

"You can take it from me that playing the alpha for the genus homo is a harder job than its cracked up to be. In the first place I have no precedents to keep me from making a state blunder. Responsibility rests heavily upon my shoulders. The Garden of Eden isn't any sugar plum orchard with manna dropping out of the sky like snowflakes. Not by a skullful.

"The law of compensation never slumbers nor sleeps and you have to pay for what you get. No, we're not running a cafeteria, I was refering to Eve. I had to hand over one bone before I even got her Bertillion measurements!

"Then there's the animals. I can't see why I ought to be the keeper for this outdoor zoo. Eve is afraid to put a halter on the dinossaur, and my oldest boy hasn't the strength to chase the dipladaci out of the bamboo thicket. You see he isn't Abel.

"Last spring the hoof and mouth disease got into my herd of Brontosauruss.' I wish Eve had caught a little of the mouth ailment. Maybe I wouldn't have insomnia now. Her tongue runs like a mountain cascade. And when she drops into dreamland, young Abel is sure to begin screeching with green apple colic! Such is life in the Mesopotamia garden.

"But sometimes the sun is shining, and the feathered charms fill the jungle with song. Beautiful winged butterflies are everywhere flitting among the flowers. The palm trees bow their frouted plumes before my cave in obeisance, and as I look down thru the garden to where the lion and the lamb are drinking together at the spring, there comes to me the pride in the spirit of man, the dignity of my station, and the thot that after all life is really worth living."

ECHOES

A timid little Freshman was standing before the Registrar.

"I would l-like to articulate," he stammered.

"All right," replied Professor Bridgman, "consult Professor Moses."

In the Junior physics exam papers was found this query by a nonplused but poetic student;

"Here is a question I fain would ask
The answer youv'e not yet taught.
If you give me a naught on this quiz on air,
Does it mean areonaut?"

(The faculty has decided that fellow was either drinking balloon juice or reading Edgar Allen Poe when he should have been doing lab. work.)

Doc. Campbell—Which calendar do we use—the Gregorian or the Julian?"

Pete Hormel—"Neither: ours is from the Blinkenstutter Brewing Co."

The difference between a woman and an actress is that the actress acts only about half the time.

"THE BELLS"

(Apologies to Poe.)

BY EVERYMAN.

I

Hear that early morning bell,
Chapel bell!
Hear it ding! ding! ding!
With a sort of fiendish ring,
How it yanks me out of slumber
Like the summons of a king!
Tyrant bell!

II

There's that beastly rising bell,
Morning bell!
Oh I curse you Jake! Jake!
Every time I get awake
For your clanging and haranguing me
With bells, bells, bells,
For that vicious twilight habit—
Ringing bells!

Kelly Club Sleighing Party

Saturday afternoon and evening the Kelly Club took advantage of the excellent sleighing and journeyed to Mercer, where a fine supper was enjoyed at the Humes House.

After supper many attended a "movie" for the first time since leaving home. The picture, however, was such a thriller that this was abandoned in time to see the Mercer high school trounce Sharon.

Promptly at ten o'clock the party started homeward. While gliding down a rather steep hill about four miles from New Wilmington, something happened. The ring which connects the tongue of the sled and the neck yoke of the horses, broke. The sled of course bumped the horses heels. The horses kicked, J. McLaughrey received, it was a lucky stop, but Jim admitted it was horse-shoes, and the game was on. The double tree then came loose and the horses sped on down the hill, leaving the sled and the deviltry behind. The sled got jealous and started after the horses. Tuss McLaughrey jumped—on Prof, and Mrs. Smith who had previously jumped. Tuss called to his wife who tried to get out. But Henry Shields thinking Mrs. McLaughrey was about to fall, held her foot, The sled then ran into the ditch, which received it very gracefully and—we had a good excuse for being late.

SHOCKED

Jake Weber has an Exciting Experience

Jacob Weber, the new superintendent of grounds and public buildings, had a unique experience last Saturday, which deserves to rank with an adventure of Baron Munchausen. Getting an unexpected holiday from the Faculty, Jake decided to do something original—which was to go Esquimo fishing in the creek. Of course you never fished Esquimo fashion, but what of it? Jake cut a six inch hole thru the ice, baited his hook with a piece of red flannel—and waited. In something like ten minutes there was a yank on his line that sent Weber's imagination skyward like the mercury in July. With a heave he jerked thru the hole, a long shiny, wriggling object, dripping and shining in the sun.

Jake eagerly took a strangle hold on his prize.

There was a blinding flash and Weber got a shock as if he had grabbed a live wire.

His catch had been an electric eel, and because he was wearing an electric belt, there had been a short circuit.

College to Lose its President

ROBERT McWATTY RUSSELL, D. D., LL. D.

To Resign the Presidency of Westminster, After a Successful Administration of Nine Years.

WILL GO TO THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE OF CHICAGO

A Short Resume of Dr. Russell's Work Since Coming to New Wilmington in 1906.

Last Thursday, our president, Dr. R. M. Russell came to a decision that will be greatly regretted by the Westminster students and alumni in general—that of accepting the position tendered him some time ago in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Dr. Russell stated that he would present his resignation to the Board of Trustees of Westminster at the meeting in March, and would take up his new work in Chicago, in September.

During the month of December he was tendered the acceptance of the Chair of Doctrine and Homiletics in the Moody Bible Institute. He refused to make any comment, for publication, at the time, but after visiting Chicago, and considering the proposition at length, decided to sever his connection with Westminster and take the new position.

"The prudential committee of the board of trustees, in charge of college affairs, will be apprised of the pending resignation prior to the annual meeting of the board, so that immediate steps may be taken towards filling the vacancy," Dr. Russell said.

Members of the prudential committee are Dr. D. F. McGill of Ben Avon, Dr. J. C. Kistler of Houston, W. J. Pierce of Pittsburg, Dr. J. K. McClurkin of Pittsburgh, Hon. S. S. Mehard of Pittsburgh, S. N. Warden of Mt. Pleasant, Dr. W. D. Irons of McDonald and Hon. J. P. Whitla of Sharon.

Dr. Russell became president of Westminster in 1906, succeeding Dr. R. G. Ferguson, who has ever since been connected with the college faculty in capacity of Bible instructor and professor emeritus. Dr. Russell came to Westminster from the pastorate of the Sixth U. P. Church of Pittsburgh, where he had been in charge for fifteen and a half years. The present college year will mark the end of nine years of administrative effort on his part.

PROGRESS UNDER DR. RUSSELL.

During the nine years of Dr. Russell's administration the college has made substantial progress and has kept pace with the leading institutions in extending and elevating its curricculum, and in the increase both of equipment and endowment.

Among notable achievements have been the completion of the $400,000 additional endowment fund, of which more than $350,000 has already been paid in. This has made a very substantial addition to the invested endowment of the college and has placed it on a very gratifying basis, financially.

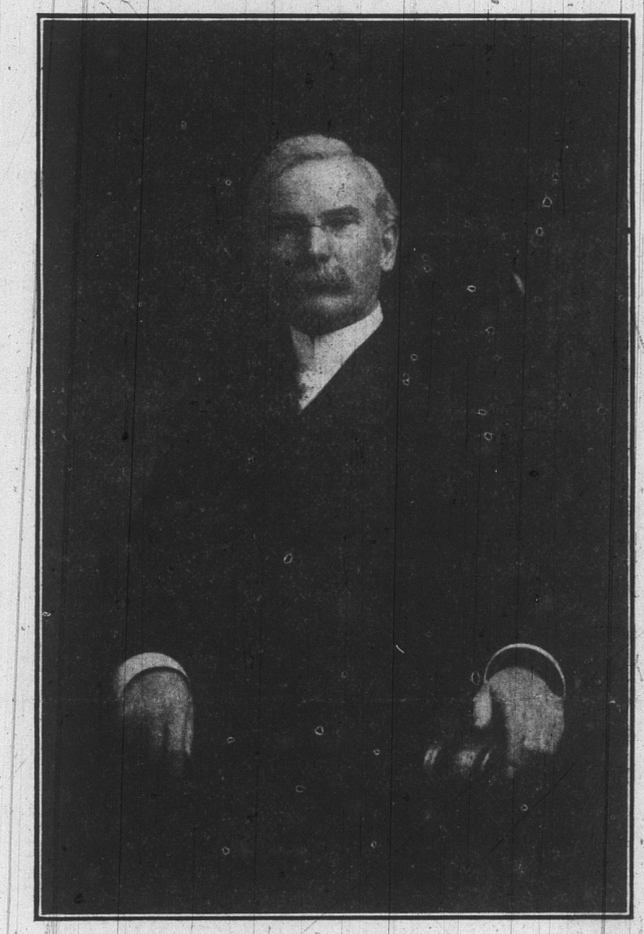

Recent remodeling of the Science Hall has given the college an equipment in the department of physics, chemistry and biology that is not surpassed by any save the largest universities.

Several new buildings have been erected during his administration, including the Music Hall, and enlarged Girls' Dormitory. All buildings have been remodelled, refurnished and refitted. A substantial three story addition was also made to the main administration building of the college group.

In addition a 200 acre farm has been secured, affording an excellent opportunity for establishing a department of agriculture in connection with the college. A new athletic field has already been purchased and laid out.

Taken all in all about $600,000 has been contributed to Westminster during Dr. Russell's adminis-

"SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER"

Successful Presentation of the Play

'Twas a dark and stormy night, suitable more for murder and Macbeth than a comedy like "She Stoops to Conquer"—but Goldsmith, assisted by Prof. Moses, conquered the elements and a large crowd, and for two very short hours kept the audience basking in sunshine. It was Friday night, the red letter day of the week, as Mr. Grundish remarked in a recent issue of the Holcad.

The play was given after the Ben Greet idea, which means that the audience is allowed to use its imagination in regard to scenery. But the cast was so admirably portrayed that little or no scenery was necessary.

Frank Orr, as Tony Lumpkins, Fulton as Hardcastle, Alderman as Young Marlowe, and D'Ormond McLaughrey as Diggory, easily carried off the honors for the men, and Kathryn Barr as Miss Hardcastle, Martha Vincent as Mrs. Hardcastle, and Marian Hover as Miss Neville, captivated the audience in their respective roles.

The customs and fashions of Oliver Goldsmith's day were vividly acted, from drinking bout to ye olde love scene, and Prof. Moses deserves unlimited credit for training the players.

The class in dramatic expression is contemplating staging a Shakespeare play at Commencement.

tration, including endowment subscription, repairs, and the large sum furnished by friends thru the maintenance fund for college support during the period of inadequate endowment.

The decision of Dr. Russell as one of the ablest men in the whole United Presbyterian denomination, and it will be a hard matter to find a successor who can carry on the work along the lines laid down by the present president and head of the institution.

The following epitaph was found on a tombstone erected over the grave of his dear departed:

"Tears cannot bring her back to me—Therefore I weep."

DOWN IN BOHEMIA

Music and dancing and laughter,
Snatches of song.
Freedom from thoughts of hereafter.
All the night long.
Soon through the curtains come stealing
Gleams of the day,
Sweeping our pleasure and feeling
Coldly away.

Oh! how we dread it! The flaring
Light of the morn,
Showing the tinsel so glaring,
Gaudy and worn;
Leaving the colors, once pretty
Pallid and white;
Changing to grief without pity
Joys of the night.

You who with plotting and scheming
Live all the day,
Spending your wasted nights dreaming
Ideas that pay,
Who, 'mid the traffic's harsh rattle
Scramble and fight,
You keep the day for your battle,
Give us the night.

Give us the night with its gladness,
Pleasure and rest;
Day is for toil and for sadness,
Night is the best.
Music and dancing and laughter,
Why should we fret
Thinking of now and hereafter?
Let us forget!

W. G.

Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. was very fortunate in having the privilege recently of listening to Mr. Swan of Steubenville, O. The subject of the evening was "Christ's Call." After a few remarks by the leader Mr. Jamison, the meeting was given over to Mr. Swan, who emphasized the searching of the Scriptures as essential to a Christian life, and spoke very decidedly against the rejecting of certain parts of the Bible as myths.

WHO'S WHO AT WESTMINSTER

"BROOKS" SHAFFER

We had a distinguished phrenologist for dinner at our club the other day. After running his long fingers over Bill Pitts' massive intellectual cranium and examining Law's skull for evidence of criminality, he called me aside and said: "I want to state that your club president, Mr. Shaffer has all the ear marks of a great man. Not only his ears—note his square, determined jaw—the sure sign of a twenty-four carat man. With a jaw like that, Hannibal defeated Frederick the Great, "Andy" Carnegie discovered America and "Muggsy" McGraw discovered Mathewson.

I readily seconded the motion.

"You're there," I said, "you're a credit to the profession. You have out-sherlocked Sherlock." And then I told him about Brooks and the Chautauqua circuit last summer.

You see, Shaffer signed up with the Pinkpath Blockway Chautauqua last June as stake driver and professional bouncer. When some of the audience got over enthusiastic over Bill Bryan or the Tyrolean Yodelers it was Owen's duty to walk down the aisles and stick out his jaw. That always restored order. One day "Doc" Gunsaulus took a July Cramp from eating green peas and sardines and consequently failed to show up at the tent and deliver his thousand dollar lecture on "War is Gehenna-plus." The manager was as excited as a newly wed over her first burnt biscuit. "Can you do it?" he asked Shaffer after he had exhausted his ingenuity." "Can you go on and plagiarize Gunsaulus?" "Can I do it?" said O. V. S. with a smile. "Can a katydid jump over a four leaf clover?"

Brooks went back of the scenes, substituted his red sweater and overalls for the ministerial toga of the Dr. and bowed to the crowd. The manager introduced him pomously as General Shaffer in order to give it a military aspect. Brooks has a marvelous memory for historical dates and straightway he cut loose a la Webster. From the time Cain killed little Abel with a club to the sinking of the "Maine," Shaffer pictured war in all its' hideous and gruesome colors. Yes, his imagination grew some during the speech. He described every skirmish from a son's of veteran Sham battle to the Boxer rebellion and he boosted old man Creasy's fifteen decisive battles to fifty-one.

When he had finished, the audience bowled the center pole over in it's endeavor to reach the man of the hour. Brooks was no coward, mind you but his nerve began to ooze out of his finger tips as he watched that tide of humanity ready to engulf him.

A girl in real curls and a polka-dot dress jumped onto the platform and threw her arms around Shaffer. "You dear Spanish American hero," she murmured. "I kissed Hobson in Harford, Con., and Funston in New Orleans and now General Shafter I offer you the osculatory tribute of a loyal American Girl."

LAMENT OF A FRESHY

"I'm strong for our noble old college
(I'm strong of course for the frat)
But I think it is grand to sit up in the stand
And root for the team and all that:
I'm full of the Westminster spirit,
In class you can bet I'm no fool,
The Profs. are immense, but I can't see the sense
Of going six days to school!

I'm a wonder at wild celebrations
Whenever we capture a game,
Iv'e been cuffed mor'n once, for my high school stunts
Pulled off in the varsity name;
But our French teacher's strong for child labor,
Five days we must study Francais;
Great heavens, they think we are Shaw's supermen,
When we're only poor mortals of clay." —1918

SOME GAME SATURDAY

Seniors Down Freshmen 38-34

In the most thrilling game ever witnessed on the local floor, the Seniors defeated the Freshmen five of the Class League Saturday night by the score 38 34. The contest was no mild, inocuous, tete a tete, with pink tea and lady fingers served between halves—not if we know the rules of the game. From the shrill blast of Referee White's tin whistle at the opener, to the dramatic climax, it was a toss up who would be the winner. The first period ended 17-15, with the Freshmen smiling. Capt Shaffer, undaunted, retired his warriors to the dressing room for a council of war. Dan McQuiston, having indulged in a dill pickle and ice cream soda prior to the game, was allowed to sit on the bench and Joe McNaugher, alias Stingo, was elected to carry the message to Garcia. The Freshmen grabbed the lead with youthful eagerness, but as the contest advanced the Senior artillery began to take effect. With his team nine points to the good "Horsey" Harold became wind-broken and whinnied vainly at the time keepers. Five minutes to play! Everybody stood up and cheered like a Dutch submarine crew at the sinking of a H. R. M. dreadnought. Then it was that "Kid" McLaughrey landed a knockout blow with three well planted jabs to the bread basket.

As the Freshmen writhed in the arena the Hillside howlers with true Roman courtesy gave a thumb's down decision. All except two. Sickened with the gory spectactle, Mary Newlin fainted in Herb Jamison's arms, and above the tumult of the moment came the shrill, paraiyan wail of "Dot" Murray—"And George was captain tonight!"

The lineup:

Seniors—38		Freshmen—34
Braham	F	Shatto
Stewart	F	Douthett
McLangrey	C	Button
Shaffer	G	Igo
McQuiston	G	Harold
McNaugher	G

Summary—Field goals, McSaughrey 8, Stewart, 4, Shaffer 4, Braham, Shatto 8, Douthett 6, Button 2. Foul goals, Shafter 4. Shatto 2. Referee, White.

SECOND GAME

The Sophomores and a picked team played a game which resulted in a victory for the Sophs—score 41-33, The lineup.

Sandwich Sale

Who said the Westminster girls weren't altruistic? If you had been up at the Dorm one night last week, Doubting Thomas, I'm sure you would have been convinced. No, it wasn't a knitting bee for the Belgians, nor a rally of the mile-of-pennies-campaign to keep ltttle One-Lung, the Chinese waif. in tooth brushes and tuition at Mrs. Mowry's Select Boarding School—although that would indeed have been very creditable. Bob Rice originated the idea. Mike Wherry wrote back from State that the Sandwich Islanders were badly in need of charitable efforts, and Bob, generous, unselfish Bob, got up a ham Sandwich sale for the poor benighted sons of Ham, with the result that 90c is now in the treasury awaiting the first savage claimant.

SENIORS TAKE THE LEAD

Sophs Strike the Toboggan, The Juniors Take a Sudden Spurt, and the Freshies Play Well.

The Senior basketball team by defeating the Juniors Saturday night 35-31, took the lead in the Inter-Class League. As the games progress the race grows more intense and exciting. The feature of this last week was the sudden spurt of the Junior team which has developed into a championship contender and the unexpected slump of the Sophs, last year's champions. The Seniors played whirlwind basketball from the toot of the whistle. Capt. Shaffer and "Tuss" McLaughrey led in the scoring and both worked the floor well. The addition of McCreary to the Junior team strengthens it materially.

The lineup:

Seniors 35		Juniors 31
Stew't, Brah'm	F	Mercer
Shaffer	F	McCreary
McLaughrey	C	Buckley
D. McQuiston	G	C. McQuiston
McNaugher	G	Grundish

Field goals—McLaughrey, 7; Shaffer, 7; Braham; McCreary 4; Mercer, 4; Buckley, 3; Grundish. Foul goals—Shaffer, 5; Mercer, 7. Referee—White. Umpire—Tinkham.

SECOND GAME

The second game between the Sophs and the Freshies was a hard fought contest. The Freshmen were finally victorious 45-31. The Sophomores led till near the end of the game when the Freshmen five got their "second wind" and came back with a garrison finish. Shatto played a great game for the Freshmen, his floor work being the best of the evening. The Freshmen are making a strong bid for the championship.

The lineup:

Sophs 31		Freshies 45
Cummings	F	Wherry
Coulter, Steele	F	Shatto
McCracken	C	Button
Strathearn	G	Igo
Sniff	G	Neal, Harold

Field goals—Shatto, 12; Wherry, 6; Button, 2; Igo; McCracken, 6; Steele, 3; Strathearn. Foul goals McCracken, 9; Wherry, 3. Referee Tinkham. Umpire, White.

Schumann Quintet

All tickets for the Lecture course were punched for the fourth time, Friday evening when the Schumann Quintet appeared. The program was very well arranged for the entertainment of the audience. A trip through Europe with a short program of the typical music of the different peoples, concluding with "Old Black Joe," and "Just a Song at Twilight" gave the audience a very pleasant evening. The effect of the reed organ with the stringed instruments was very good.

BUCKETS OF BLOOD

The katydid and the bumblebee,
Collecting their eats from an apple tree,
In conversation they both engaged
In the course of events became enraged.
They took to fighting with might and main,
And watched each other, advantage to gain.
They struggled along as best they could,
But yield to each other they never would.
The katy used her wing for a goad
And received a beating A-la-mode,
With a broken wing and a broken sting
At each other in fury they continued to spring,
But the fight was cut short and ended ere long,
For a pretty, spry robin closed the scrap with a song.

Just a Plain Sewer

A certain young lady, an ardent admirer of Shelly, while wandering dreamily in the realms of fancy saw a vision of a sparkling, crystal fountain in Braham's cow pasture. Upon inquiry as to the nature of this miracle of beauty, she learned that, instead of an artesian well, it was an ordinary sewer. You've got to hand it to the realist once in a while.

The Log of Adam and Eve

[ED. NOTE:—Not long ago the world was surprised at the unearthing of an archaean rock in Neshannock Falls quarries, which was pronounced by Prof. Donnewetter of the Curnegen Institute, as containing a record of the Garden of Eden. We have secured the exclusive right to publish Prof. Donnewetter's translation which we assure our readers will throw an intimate light on the hitherto unknown inner life of the Adamses. The 2nd installment is given herewith.]

THE ETERNAL FEMININE

BY MR. ADAM

I have a habit of procrastinating and saying, "Let Cain do it." 'Yesterday the Spare Rib asked me when I was going to carve a second installment of our dairy, and I said "Tomorrow Eve." So finally I take my hatchet in hand to let you know, etc., etc. This tropical climate is more conducive to siestas and lotus—sandwiches than journalistic efforts. But—I was destined to be homiletic. What I started out to say was that women are more mysterious than an eclipse of the moon. Take Eve frinstance.

I know every bird that sings, every insect that crawls about the garden, and I can tell a dinosaur from a three-toed Tchytyosaurur in the dark, but good heavens, that soulmate of mine is as enigmatical as a soft-shelled bi-valve. I can never tell when Eve is going to turn her jealous orbs on me and accuse me of flirting with Clara Stoneface, the tree-dwelling debutante. Altho the forbidden fruit is supposed to be my hoodoo. I'm more afraid of green eyes than green apples.

But it seems that no woman is a mystery to another woman. Swift as light travels, each penetrates the heart and mind of another, and sifts her sister's words of their cunningest disguises.

One morning Cain knocked his stone hammer on our granite slab and lo and behold he had a strange lady on his arm, whom he introduced.

Eve took her daughter-in-law aside, and lifted a classic eyebrow.

"The land of Nod," said the bride, languidly flirting the leaf of a palm. "I suppose you've been there of course?"

"Not lately," said Eve, absolutely unstaggered. "Don't you think the apple sauce they serve over there is execrable? I rather like that mulberry-leaf tunic effect, dear; but of course the real fig goods are not to be had over there. Come over behind this lilac bush while the men split a celery tonic. I think the catterpillar holes have made your dress open a little in the back."

That will show you that woman is as clear as glass—to other women, but somehow she can palm herself off on man, as a mystery.

I will close this before Eve gets back from a 4 o'clock tea, Glady's Hair-Lip is holding on her bamboo roof garden. That fire-worshipping tribe does nothing but spend their hours in staging chafing dish parties and dinosaur barbecues. Such are the ways of women. Me for the fireless cooker, and the skull of wine, and the old knarled hickory club. This is the life for me!

ODE

By a Pilgrim of Eternity. (Probably Charlotte Orr.)

The class in British Poets
Today is sunk in woe. Its Awful premonition
Of the examination
Was something terrible.

How they boned on Alastor!
How they skipped meals to master
The subtleties of Shelley!
Why Smith knew very well he Could never stick them.

But finding nothing funny
In Thursday's Pittsburg Sun, he Decided to derive his
Day's humor from a freak quiz.
I weep for them.

Tips to Young Writers

(Conducted by Prof. Eisenwine)

HOW TO WRITE A COLLEGE STORY

Anybody can write a story about college life. If he has not attended a college the better. His imagination is less trammelled. A few simple rules must be observed, however:

1st.—All heroes are named Jack, Stanley or Dick.

2nd.—All college men wear sweaters always and smoke short, fat bowled pipes.

3rd.—There is always a "Fatty" who is a funny fellow.

4th.—College men always refer to father as honorable "pater"

5th.—College men always call each other old hoss.

6th.—The heroine is generally known as Peg or Betty and she plays tennis and eats fudge.

7th.—The hero always is substituted for an injured gridiron star when the game is in doubt and of course makes the touchdown that wins the game.

8th.—As a rule always have your hero swear to die for his frat and his "deah old Alma Mater."

9th.—There is always a girl who is a "shark" in "psych" and a grind who eats "Chem" and the binomial theorem alive.

Thursday's Game

On last Thursday the Sophomore girls played the Freshies. As the Sophomores and Seniors were busy helping the faculty to run the school, and with various other serious occapations, the frivolous Freshies and juvenile Juniors were the only ones who turned out to witness the game. Did you ever hear of such a thing as the power of suggestion or mob psycholygy? Well, those things and a Freshman score-keeper won that game 7 to 6.

The Young Poet's Corner

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

BY STANLEY STEVENS '18

I wandered in Manhattan, Tom,
Adown that same old street.
I saw the ancient corner, Tom,
Where oft we used to meet.

I gazed upon the buildings, Tom,
Now rusting in decay:
A row of motley signs, "To Let"—
And this was once Broadway.

The Baseball Outlook

The outlook for baseball this year is exceedingly bright. With a majority of last year's team as a nucleus Coach Tinkham will have good material out of which he can build a championship nine. Of the new men in school Bush, Forney and Dart of New Castle High School should make a strong bid for regular births. Manager Jamison has boooked a strong schedule including games with Grove City, Carnegie Tech, Waynesburg, Duquesne, Kiski, University of Pittsburgh and St. Johns.

Track

Manager Lindsay of the Westminster Track team is enthusiastic over the outlook for track this spring. Track meets will be held with Grove City, Geneva, Carnegie Tech and University of Pitt. There is very good material in school at present and we are expecting the Blue and White to "clean up" just as of yore.

SCISSORED.

Luck is usually against you; it is your business to beat it.

Even a brave man when he makes a bluff, hopes his bluff will win peaceably.

The saying, "O, we all mak mistakes," is often accepted as an excuse for too many.

You are frequently annoyed because the people do not "do better." Try doing better yourself, and you will realize why the people are so slow about it. But everything that is true and important slowly gains ground.

Life

"Our life is likened to a silver strand,
With precious pearls to deck it near at hand;
If poor and worthless beads appear instead,
'Tis poor philosophy to blame the thread."

—ALONZO RICE

THE COMING DEBATE

The First of the Intercollegiate Debates to Occur Here on the 23rd.

The first of our intercollegiate debates will be held in the chapel auditorium on March 23. Our home team composed of Walter Braham, W. I. Grundish, F. W. Orr and Arthur Jewell will uphold the affirmative of the following proposition: Resolved that the United States abandon the Monroe Doctrine. The team from Geneva College will maintain the negative. March 26 the same Westminster team will defend the same side of the same question against Penn State at State College. We as students of Westminster should realize the difficulties which our team is facing in defending the affirmative of this question. In the first place the caliber of their opponents will be the best that either Penn State or Geneva can produce. Penn State having been defeated by us last year by a 3-0 vote will be very desirous of comming back at us. Geneva has not consented to debate with us for a number of years, but if she is as anxious for victory in this debate as she was to defeat us in football, we can look forward to an interesting contest on the 23rd of March.

But the other difficulties which our team faces are made doubly hard by the very nature of the proposition itself which they shall defend. It will not be an easy matter to discredit that time worn policy of the U. S., known as the Monroe Doctrine. In every other intercollegiate contest where this proposition has been discussed, the affirmative team has lost. Hence we shall learn how to appreciate the ability of our team when it wins, as we are confident it shall.

We need "the old Westminster Spirit" shown in these coming contests just as much as in any athletic game. The whole-hearted confidence and trust of the entire student body is a much larger factor in winning a debate than any other contest. So when the opposing teams mount the platform on March 23rd, let every student face shine with perfect faith. And all will be well.

Der Deutsche Verein

Der Deutsche Verein held its usual meeting, Tuesday evening, March 9. The general subject of the program was "The German School System," and essays relating to this subject were read, as follows: The Common School, Don Igo; The Girl's School, Margaret Wylie; The Gymnasium, Edmund Shott; The University, Vera Toy.

The social part of the program was conducted by the class in German methods, whose members are prospective teachers. Several groups were formed by the members of the club and a teacher was placed in charge of each group.

On Tuesday, March 23 there will be a joint meeting of the French and German clubs at the Hillside. At this meeting the faculty will be entertained as guests of the two clubs.

Neal—I've got a peach of a job out in Yellowstone National Park, next summer, if I want it.

C. M—Better go. You could have a swell time in Chicago on the way back, too!

Neal—Chicago nothing! I'd go straight to Boston.

"Doc" Campbell (in history)—Mr. McNaugher, why were you late this morning?

Joe (same old excuse)—I was over at the Science Hall, and there is something wrong with the bells.

"Doc"—I didn't hear about it. What is the matter with Minnabel?

Prof. Soott (as peals of laughter emanate from the History room)—I'll have to buy a victrola for competition.

THE GENEVA GAME

Westminster Basketballers Lose to Geneva Five Last Thursday.

Mt. Union College cancelled their game with Geneva for last Thursday night. But in order to humor their local fans, Geneva requested Coach Tinkham to pick a team out of the class league and fill the date, and to say the least the said fans were not disappointed. To say that the game was fast and furious would be putting it mildly. In the first place, two little football games of recent date seemed to act as a "thorn in the flesh" with the Geneva tossers. In addition to this they have not lost a game this year on their home floor, their opponents comprising such teams as Pitt, Tech, and Ohio Wesleyan, and they were keyed up to championship caliber for this, their last game of the season.

On the other hand the Westminster team was composed of men who had never played together before, and since the team was chosen in but three or four days, anything like a smooth running machine was impossible. Besides these disadvantages, the team was to play on a strange floor almost twice the size of our own. However, from the first "toot" of the whistle that mysterious something which we call the "Old Westminster Spirit" was everywhere in evidence, and displayed all kinds of "pep." Any way you look at it the Westminster team was a credit to the old school. McCracken was easily the star of the game, roping in baskets from all angles; and the manner in which Cummiugs, Strathearn, and the rest, played the floor, was a caution. At the end of ten minutes of play the score stood 9-3 in Westminster's favor, but the size of the floor and other disadvantages began to tell on the endurance of the players, and the half ended 13-16. During the second half the Geneva team gradually increased their lead, though every point was hotly contested and the game was not won until the last few minutes of play.

A feature of the game was the rooting of "Herb" Jamison. From somewhere up among the co-eds the lusty lungs of this lanky lad boomed out in thunderous applause which fairly drowned the Geneva cheers.

The lineup:

Westminster 24		Geneva 36
McCracken	F	McCarter
Cummings	F	Todd
McLaughrey	C	Buchanan
Strathearn	G	Perrott
Neal	G	Loeffler

Substitutions—Shatto for Cummings, McCracken for McLaughrey Wherry for McCracken, McQuiston for Neal, Johnston for Todd.

Field goals, McCracken 6, McLaughrey, Wherry, McCarter 5, Buchanan 5, Johnston 2, Perrott.

Foul goals, McCracken 8 out of 14, McCarter 8 out of 13.

LET's stop talking about what we're going to do and do it.. Every one of us is planning to do better some day, but we forget to "do it now." All we have to do now is to live today in the best way possible, planning to do better tomorrow. But day after tomorrow is so far off that we can't be sure of it.

DR. WATSON told us Saturday morning that thoroughness was the keynote of all real living. If that is the case, a number of us "clear off the key." Why do we not get in harmony with life and do our own work more conscientiously?

Y. W. C. A. Cabinet

Mrs. Russell again entertained the Y. W. C. A. cabinet at dinner, Monday evening. The girls always look forward to these evenings with Mrs. Russell, and they especially appreciate them now, when they think of her leaving Westminster. Her interest in the association work and in the girls themselves has always been an inspiration.

At Pittsburgh.

Dr. Russell has gone to the meeting of the Board in Pittsburgh that he may tender his formal resignation from Westminster.

Dr. Chas. R. Watson

For a few days Dr. Chas. R. Watson, Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board was with the students. He spoke at a short service Friday evening on the need of a real valuation of life and a realization of the power given us. As a concluding talk on life work he spoke Saturday morning of the proper investment of life for service. Saturday was spent in conference with different students concerning the mission work. Sabbath evening Dr. Watson spoke on the mission work among the Moslems, the service being held in the Second U. P. church.

WHO'S WHO AT WESTMINSTER

MARIAN KITCH

Lest this column become over inflated with masculine eulogies, let us consider the virtues of a Westminster Co-ed. There is a rumour afloat today that women of our age are to be valued as well as desired. This is the central fire of the Feminist movement, a broad side of which probably killed the Hon. Horace Bushnell.

Marion Kitch is a type of the modern girl who rates her sex at what it can do or contribute rather than at what they can induce some men to think about them.

You can't sidestep her ratiocination. Listen fellows, to this one:

"Even Nietzsche admitted woman was a riddle to him. No man pretends to understand her. Is that why you feel so competent to represent us in politics?"

Marion is equally popular with every faction of school. You need not know her to feel her influence. Verily, nature never cast her for the stuff that saved Eliza from drowning, for her temperament is anything but gelid. She has a sunny, cheerful disposition. She has ready wit, repartee, and her ability to thaw all social ice and lead couversation along any line is not the least of her accomplishments.

She gives herself to others, and knows whether they wish to talk or listen. On occasion she can monopolize conversation, but all talent is brighter for the added lustre of her own. This simplicity, this utter frankness, this complete absence of self consciousness is like the flight of a bird that never doubts its power because it never thinks of it.

Wherever you find "Kitchy," you will invariably find Bob Rice. Tho two are as inseperable as the Siamese twins. If Marion ever aspires to literary heights she may do as Montaigne and bestow immortality on her friend by telling the story of their friendship. In that instance we can look forward to a Bobs and Kitch for our own Westminster Abbey.

Marian approaches every subject with the open mindedness of William James, and therefore she has breadth of vision. She has turned her attention to a little of everything from ancient philosophy to crocheting and is cultured in all. But in seeking wisdom she has found that the wondrous erudition of man has failed to offer a satisfying solution to the primary problem of suffrage Algebra—

"If one half of the race must continue to live under feudal conditions while the other progresses upward toward real democracy, how soon will humanity reach the light?"

And Marian, like a few other maids, is curious to know.

JUST SUPPOSING

"A recurrence of his throat trouble necessitated the Emperor's return. Exposure to bad weather aggravated his ailment, and it is the advice of attending physicians that he keep away from the battle front until the weather is warmer."–Berlin press dispatch.

Prrkytzsche, Poland.

Hans Hofbran, corporal of the 124th regiment infantry left last night for his home in Munich. "I am not precisely ill," said Hans to his commanding officer, but I feel an attack of tonsilitis coming on—and I think I will be better off in a warm room in Munich than in a damp trench on the firing line." Hans says that if he feels right he will join his regiment the latter part of June.

Filetmignon, France.

"I suppose I was a little careless," mused Paul Chatnoir of the Sacreblue Zouaves, "but in that last charge, I do not look where I am going and I get my feet sopping wet. I go over my rubbers twice in the icy water of that dear Alsace. Sacre nom de plume! Did I not know what would happen? My old complaint of neuralgia in the face. My dentist's warning—it come over me like a what is it you call it—a flash, and sapristii here I am." Paul thinks it would be foolish to return to the front until the frost is out of the ground.

Last Thursday evening, the local High School Seniors defeated the Crescent Club basketballers———

——. The game was fast and furious, Vance and Conway starring for the High School, while Grundish and Patton distinguished themselves for the Crescents.

The lineup;

Crescent 17		Seniors 31
Ashbrook	F	Brandon
Grundish	F	Conway
Alderman	C	Vance
Kerr	G	Porterfield
Dixon	G	Minteer

Substitutions—Patton for Ashbrook; Milligan for Dixon; Orr for Alderman. Field goals—Patton 4; Grundish, 2; Ashbrook; Conway, 7; Brandon, 5; Vance. Foul goals—Grundish. 3; Conway. 5.

The second game between the High School All Stars and the Neshannock Club team resulted in a victory for the Neshannock boys 39-22. This contest was replete with thrills, the High School players giving the Collegians a hard struggle. The Igo forwards and "Stubby" McCrumb did most of the scoring. Johnston and Beighle proved a good combination for the High School. A large crowd witnessed both games.

The lineup:

Neshannock 39		All Stars 22
Shaffer	F	Johnston
K. Igo	F	Beighle
D. Igo	C	Phillips
H. Igo	G	McKean
McCrumb	G	Evans

Substitutions—Smith for H. Igo. Field goals—D. Igo, 8; K. Igo, 6; Shaffer, 4; Beighle, 6; Johnston, 2; Phillips, 2. Foul goals—D. Igo, 3; Phillips, 2.

Artists

On the evening of March 8 the annual Fresh.-Soph. debate was pulled off in the chapel.

When Prof. Moses started the struggle the whole audience settled back in their pews for a three hour seige but as some of us Freshmen, outside in the hall, keard those poor Soph debaters, who were suffering on the platform with no hope of victory, how could we continue to amuse ourselves with their torture? We immediately and kindly left—thinking not of rest but of midnight labor.

So when this peaceful little village was wrapped in slumber; when the police had traversed their beats and found that all was well; when the jitney busses having earned their last jitney for the night, had chugged away to their garages, half-a-dozen stealthy forms gathered for whispered consultation in a dark corner of Old Main. Plans were completed, the company divided. One bunch set to work improving sidewalks; the other climbed by fire escape to the third story and there a masterpiece was delineated.

Our deed was done. The clock from the tower struck three, the time for retirement. Then, having signed with blood our oath of secrecy we buried it where the shadow fell from the highest chimney of Austin Joe's abode; and when we had completed the solemnity of the occasion by shooting each other the high sign, each one stole noiselessly away to his separate domicile.

The morning sun announced to the world that the Freshmen class owned some real artists. Two perfectly-formed '18s adorned the western eaves of the college building. Everyone who went to chapel that morning gazed heavenward like an English officer looking for Zeppelins. The Old Main held up her head so high in pride that Jake, amazed by her beauty and struck with the artistic taste of adorners, is still searching for the latter, high and wide. that he may gain helpers in his work of improving the public buildings and grounds.

Annuual Alumni Banquet Held at Pittsburgh Friday

McCREERY'S THE SCENE OF A BRILLIANT GATHERING

Dr. Russell Throws Out Challenge to The Alumni to Raise $75,000 for the New Gym, if They Raise Like Amount to Pay Debt.

On Friday evening, March 26, Westminster alumni, students and friends gathered in the spacious McCreery dining room in Pittsburgh for their annual alumni banquet. About two hundred fifty people were present to enjoy a social time together and to recall past college life. At seven o'clock the company sat down to partake of the substantial and appetizing delicacies which had been prepared. Easter lilies, narcissi and white carnations adorned the centers of the table. While the meal was in progress the orchestra played many favorite airs such as "School Days" and "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," ending with the popular strain "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

After the banquet, Harold M. Irons, '97, presided as toastmaster. He pleased the company with his appropiate and well pointed jokes. The first toast was given by Hon. C. H. Smith '00 who spoke on Westminster's Output. Then the guests were charmed with Prof. W. W. Campbell's rendition of "The Ould Plaid Shawl." His clarity of tone and usual ease and composure delighted everyone.

Miss Mary E. Turner '00, gave the College Rhyme. Many happy memories came back, as the rail road track, Shaky Hollow, the cinder path and Furnace Hill were spoken of. The poem was a parody on Hiawatha, and as the toastmaster said, the production showed the ability of Westminster's women.

Then followed two solos by Miss Mabel King '13. Miss King sang "The Quest" and "The Wind Song." She has a clear enunciation as well as tone, and pleases with her wonderful interpretations. Miss Mary Douthett presided at the piano.

The next speaker was Dr. J. D. Rankin '82. His topic was Looking Back. Dr. Rankin told of the faithful work Dr. Russell had done, and of the way in which the College had been built up. In behalf of the Alumni Dr. Rankin presented Dr. and Mrs Russell with a beautiful tea service. Lawrence M. Stewart '15 followed Dr. Rankin and in behalf of the faculty and students of Westminster presented Dr. Russell with a handsome gold loving cup. Mr. Stewart spoke in a graceful and pleasing manner of the help Dr. Russell has been to the college and extended him best wishes for success in his new field of labor.

Miss King and Mr. Campbell sang a duet "Ah, I'alto ador," then Dr. Russell responded and extendtended his thanks for the tokens of appreciation Mrs. Russell and he had received. Dr. Russell's assigned subject was "As it Looks to Me Now." The President told the amount of money he had raised for the college during his administration and extended a challenge to the alumni. He agreed to raise $75,000 for a new gymnasium if the alumni would raise $75.000 to pay off the debts which now rest on the college.

After Dr. Russell finished speaking Raymond Kistler '12 led a cheer for the Doctor and a good Ki-Yi Blue. A short social hour was held and the company departed with an increased love for their Alma Matter.

PENN STATE WON

Monroe Doctrine is a Hard one to Down

The Monroe Doctrine was again the subject of discussion at a debate between Westminster and Penn State at State College, Pa The same team which debated Geneva upheld the affirmative of the question for Westminster. The decision was rendered in favor of State by a vote of 2-1. It seems almost an impossible task to discredit the Monroe Doctrine in the eyes of a majority of judges. A large crowd was present to witness the contest which was hotly contested from beginning to end.

Another team from Westminster will maintain the negative of the same question against Pitt and W. & J. The contest with the former institution will be held in Pittsburgh on April 16. At this writing the time of the W. & J. debate is not yet definitely fixed but will take place at Westminster probably some time during the week of the twelfth of April.

Exhibited Loving Cup Received at Alumni Banquet

DR. RUSSELL TELLS OF ITS RECEPTION AT CHAPEL

The Occasion was the Doctor's Fifty-Seventh Birthday Anniversary, which was Observed with Special Music and With Hearty Good Will.

Among Dr. Russell's most pleasant memories of Westminster College will be his fifty seventh birthday. He conducted morning chapel as usual and during his talk he exhibited the Loving Cup presented at the recent Banquet in Pittsburg by the faculty and students. He thanked them in very gracious words for the remembrance and said that he appreciated it highly. He added that as this was his fifty seventh birthday he considered the cup as a birthday gift from the faculty and students and that in his new home in Chicago, the Cup would represent to him the regards and good wishes of Old Westminster. He said that altho the Cup bore the name of Mrs. Russell also, he would consider it in the same light as the woman who presenied her husband with a sewing machine on his birthday or the man who bought himself a new silk hat as a birthday present for his wife, he said, she always liked him to look well.

The students applauded heartily thus giving sanction to his considering the Cup as a birthday gift.

As a further token of their regard, a large number of students made a short pilgrimage to the Manse to serenade the good Doctor. They gathered at the Hillside, arranged the program, and proceeded to the manse. Assembling quietly before the dimly lighted house, they began. Those who could sing, or thought they could, started the music and the others joined in. The first number was "Loves Old Sweet Song." The music had not been going on very long when the porch lights were snapped on. The students out under the trees, just beyond the light, seemed to be the audience of a theater of which the softly lighted porch was the stage.

In quick succession other songs followed in this order: "Pass Down the Field," "It Looks to Me Like a Big Nite Tonite," "Hark, I Hear a Voice," "Tipperary," "John Browns Body," "Westminster Will Shine, Tonite," "You're a Grand Old Team," "The Old Westminster Spirit," "Boola Boola" and "Our Mother Fair Westminster." Then to give the occasion special significance, two "Bible Songs" were sung, "Safely Guarded" and "To the Hills I Lift Mine Eyes." The Doctor seemed to enjoy this and came out on the porch. Then some yells and cheers were given: "Ki Yi Blue," "Blue and White, Rah, Rah," "Whats the Matter With Dr. Russell?" Whats the Matter With Mrs. Russell?" and "Whats the Matter With the Whole Family?" In conclusion the serenaders counted up to 57 with three Russells on the end.

Then Dr. Russell in a short speech thanked them for the regard shown him and told the story of a man who upon leaving his pastorate was honored with a farewell and when he heard himself praised so highly retracted his resignation because the people loved him so dearly. (?) Dr. Russell assured them that he was signed up in Chicago and would have to leave but he also said that he would continue to work up to the last day of his stay in the College.

He invited the serenaders in to listen to the Victrola and after hearing a number of pleasing records, the students took their leave wishing Dr. Russell many more happy birthdays and Dr. and Mrs. Russell much happiness and enjoyment in their new home in Chicago.

GRADUATION CREDITS

Only One Hundred Twenty Hours Now Required

The faculty have been making some radical changes in the curriculum credits for next year. The same amount of work will be accomplished in every department but the credit will be reduced. 120 hours will be necessary for graduation instead of 126, and no student will be allowed to take more than 15 hours a week. The science students, however, will have to take 16 hours the first year and 14 in the Senior year. This will take awav the difficulty of the overloaded schedule and make the work more uniform.

MISS MARTIN RESIGNS

Will Take Up Missionary Work in India

Friends of Miss Helen J. Martin will be sorry to hear of her resignation from the position of Dean of Women. Miss Martin graduated from the college in 1913 and for the suceeding two years held the position from which she now resigns. While still in college she volunteered as a foreign missionary and has been planning ever since for doing this work. She does not know definitely where her field will be, but has received appointment from the board to work in India. We all hope that Miss Martin may be highly successful in her chosen field of service.

The Holcad Enters Its Second Volume In Enlarged Form

FOR THIRTY-TWO YEARS HAS IT BEEN IN EXISTENCE

First as a Semi-Monthly, Then as a Monthly and for the Last Year as a Weekly. Ralph Miller was the First Editor of Weekly.

By a Staff Reporter

The weekly edition of the Westminster Holcad has passed the first milestone in its history. In celebration of that event, we are placing the paper before you in a new and enlarged form, which we believe will meet with your approbation.

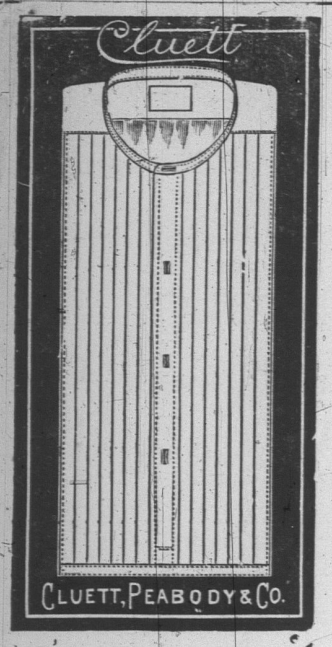

Journalistically speaking, we have cut our eye teeth. Consequently we have a larger vision, a vision of a college paper that will carry the news in an efficient and wholesome manner to every alumnus, and which, moreover, will go out into the highways and byways to tell the public of the efficient work of our educational institution. We are justly proud of Westminster and we want the Holcad to be as good as the school it represents. To this end we ask and expect the hearty cooperation of the faculty and of every student of the school.

As a matter of school loyalty — of the "old Westminster spirit" every student should be a subscriber to the Holcad. If YOU are not a subscriber, you should be. School patriotism—we must admit—is sadly lacking where a student will borrow his neighbor's Holcad rather than to secure one of his own.

One year ago Ralph Miller, assisted by Miss Keast, W. I. Grundish, Wm. C. Moore, Hall Braham and others launched the weekly edition, after the monthly had outgrown its usefulness. Many were the prophecies of the early death of the venture, some even said that it wouldn't survive the initial issue. But editor Miller was equal to the occasion and placed the paper upon a successful foundation before leaving school.

This year, under the efficient direction of Miss Keast, and the capable management of Hall Braham and Charles Bell, the Holcad is showing a steady advance, and its prospects are bright. Especially are we indebted to Mr. Bell, whose recent successful advertising campaign has made this enlargement possible. A campaign will shortly be inaugurated for subscribers, so be ready to do your part in the work of the pa-

Brannigan's Scalp

Being the Adventures of a Romantic Young Man in a World of Realism

He was visibly disappointed with his first impressions of the place. To be sure, the town was walled in by a range of foreboding and mysterious mountains, but Fort Morgan wasn't a fort at all. It was nothing more than a peaceful looking little village, like a thousand he had seen from the car window, except that there was a mile strip of black loam that bisected the hamlet, and served as the main thoroughfare, and, as he was soon to discover, there were more saloons prospering, than Sunday schools.

He had the feeling that he populace were regarding him critically as he strode conspicuously down Cody Avenue. It was well he did not hear their conclusions.

Across the street several local loafers passed judgment on the stranger's appearance.

"Some fancy postcard," observed one fellow, "must be a movin' picture man or a Eastern hardware drummer."

"Naw," said a sheep herder, "its another of them ma • rder cowboys."

Had the sensitive Dan Brannigan overheard these remarks, the scalp hunting expedition would doubtless struck a snag right then and there. But unconscious of public sentiment, he walked bravely on until he came opposite a new yellow pine house with a card in the window reading:

MRS. ELIZABETH SEELEY
BOARDING AND ROOMS
BY THE DAY OR WEEK.

Thus was Dan Brannigan's invasion of the West, and thus he became a "regular" at Ma Seeley's festive table. Of the boarders there were only three which interested him.

First of all a large, whiskered, red faced man by the name of Bill Henderson, who ran a harness shop, and smelled of lard oil and axle grease.

Secondly, the Rev. Joshua Slemens, who's stomach rebelled at anything stronger than pea soup, and whose communications were confined to yea, yea and nay, nay.

Last, tho not least interesting, was the Rev. Joshua Slemen's only daughter, Miss Lucy, a pale-faced, golden haired girl whose taste ran to Shelley and soft-boiled eggs.

Brannigan idealized Henderson, laughed at the Rev. Slemmen's negative goodness, and was somewhat susceptible to the charms of Lucy. He soon became aware that Lucy was also admired by a certain Doc. Snaggs, the town's lone pathologist, who patronized Ma Seeley's cooking occasionally that he might be near the fairy of Ft. Morgan.

Brannigan's optic nerves were disturbed the first time they sighted Snaggs. It wasn't jealousy, for Cupid never dare venture into the sacred chamber where the dripping scalp of a brave was to hang.

There was something in the round squatty fellow's very atmosphere that was offensive. He was awkward and lumbering. His trite sayings, his ridiculous, pompous airs, and his vile breath, scented of whiskey and cloves, combined to furnish a noxious aura. He wore thick lensed glasses and a fur cap, and as he had a license to kill, he might have posed as a chauffeur. So tht Brannigan, but later atiributed the idea to auto-suggestion.

Bill Henderson it was who enthralled Brannigan. The harness maker, was sometimes known as "windy Bill" and of a truth his discourse was as blustering as a prairie gale. In the little harness shop he entertained the young Easterner with vivid tales of skirmishes with the red men, of hand to hand struggles, of ambushes and of dark and bloody deeds.

"And are there Indians still around here," asked Brannigan excitedly, "not the reservation or cigar store variety; I mean real savages with war paint and glass beads, the kind that say 'Ugh!' when they scent a pale face?"

"Plenty of 'em," assured Henderson. "That old hawg-back over there on the Kiowa mountains above us is jest plumb lousy with 'em. Gen-u-ine Araphoe red men too, and all waiting for old Chief Afraid-of-the-Dark to give the signal to hit the war path. On a still night you can hear the medicine men thump-thumping on the tom-toms. I've heerd it many a time 'an last night I couldn't sleep for thinkin' about it."

The young man felt a sudden thrill run through him, and goose flesh appeared on his skin.

"Good gracious." he exclaimed, "Why don't the people wake up? Some midnight—maybe this very night—old Afraid-of-the-Dark and his five hundred braves will creep down and massacre the whole town."

BASKETBALL

The Last Girl's Game of the Season

Coack Tinkham, feeling that he had not crowned himself with enough laurel on account of the prowess of the Class League, called a farewell tea party of the girls basketball enthusiasts on the afternoon of March 23. The hostesses were the Freshmen who entertained the Sophomores and Juniors. There was one fellow there who volunteered the information that the game was rather fast, and really it was exciting—considering. When the whistle blew at the close of the final third, the official score keeper announced it was 21-12 "in favor of Mary Shaffer."

The lineup:

Freshmen 21		Sophomores 12

NEW OFFICERS

Der Deutsche Verein Elected Officers at Last Meeting

Der Deutsche Verein met Tuesday evening and elected the following officers for the season of 1916-17. President, Fred McCrumb, vice president, Marion Kitch; secretary, Agnes Little; treasurer, Fred Reed. The new officers will be formally installed at the next regular meeting to be held April 20. This meeting will be the last of the year. The club invites the first year students to this meeting in order that they may acquaint themselves with the kind of work carried on by the club. The program will be in charge of the class in Ferman methods.

All literary manuscripts should be addressed to the Editor-in-chief. All business communications should be addressed to the Business Manager.

TERMS: $1.25 per year if paid in advance otherwise $1.50; single copy 5 cents.

CAN YOU recognize our paper? You may put away that last issue of the Holcad very carefully, because you will never again see one in diminutive form. Without even the stimulus of a "fire sale" the Holcad decided to get some new Easter clothes and "sport" them for the first time just after vacation. So if you think the garb is becoming and suited to all needs and all weathers we'd like you to drop in and tell us so. Our paper has always tried to stand for all things which would further the interests of Westminster, and in enlarging the Holcad we have thought only of the need of making our weekly more fitted for the needs of the school. In 1884 the Holcad was first issued as a semi-monthly periodical; within a few years it was changed to a monthly; in 1914, it became a weekly, but it soon outgrew its small form, and will appear now in the size you see it today.

THE HOLCAD is published "in the interests of the students and alumni of Westminster College." We, as a staff, only represent you in presenting the affairs of the college thru the paper; we cannot support the paper alone but ask for your cooperation. Whenever you know any news or matter of interest we would consider it a kindness if you would tell us of it. You can show your interest, also, by boosting the paper and subscribing for it. DO YOU?

IT IS ONLY thru our advertisers that we are enabled to have this enlarged paper. We have been fortunate to secure through our business manager an increased advertising list and a new set of advertisers. In order to hold their patronage and their interest, it will be necessary for the students to show their interest by "patronizing the Holcad Advertisers." When you do your shopping, be sure to mention that you saw their ad in the Holcad—it will be of great help to the manager of the paper in his further work.

per. Every subscription means the spread of Westminster kultur and a boost for the college.

The writer ventures the prophecy that at the end of its second volume the Holcad will have proven itself indisdensable to Westminster. Let's ALL boost!

BONE

At the urgent request of the umpire, the pitcher wended his weary way to the club house.

"I lost my head I guess," he vouchsafed as he hesitated near the manager.

"I saw a dog gnawing something outside the gate," sympathized the manager.

FACULTY ENTERTAINED

Cafe de Hillside the Scene of a Brilliant Affair

The Cafe de Hillside was filled to its capacity, Wednesday evening, March 24th, with a crowd of French and German students and faculty members,—the occasion being the annual Easter meeting of the combined French and German clubs at which members the faculty are entertained as guests.

The guests began to arrive at about eight o'clock and were received and conducted to the parlor. Here they were given irregular pieces of cardboard which they were to match for partners. The two pieces of cardboard when matched showed the design of an egg bearing a German or a French quotation. The matching was so arranged that each couple was formed of a guest and a host. When the partners were secured both guests and hosts retired to the dining hall where the program of the Cafe was carried out.

In order to foster, in a way, the spirit of rivalry between the French and German clubs, which is so plainly manifest between those nations represented by these clubs, a short song contest was held the French students singing a French translation of "Tipperary" and the German students "Die Watch am Rhine." The general opinion of the spectators was that the Germans were winners. For the next number a one act farce, having its setting in France at the time of the Franco Prsusian War was staged. The two characters, a French peasant girl and a German soldier were excellently performed by Miss Agnes Burton and Mr. Robert Smith, respectively.

After the play white-coated waiters served the "eats" which consisted of delicious French and German cakes and coffee with whipped cream. As a souvenier each person was presented with a miniature white rabbit.

Shortly after ten o'clock the party broke up. Everyone insisted that they had been royally entertained.

The program of the Easter meeting of this year was considerably different than it has been heretofore. The cafe in France and Germany is a very important feature of the continental life and the Cafe de Hillside modelled after the foreign pattern was both interesting and entertaining. The dining hall was nicely decorated with French and German flags.

THB SILENT NIGHT

BY CO-ED.

The silent night was bright and fair
With moonlight and sweet-scented air
Blown from the blooming lilac tree;
No sound marred its tranquility,
'Twas wonderful to linger there!

Always Bob came up at eight,
(You can trust to Bob for being late.)
But what cared we for lecture date
On such a night.

I'd dressed with most discerning care,
From silken gown to scented hair,
Then sweeping down the Hillside stair,
For I had hopes it might not be
The silent night.

But when he came I did not dare
Confess my gladness—or despair;
For I did all the talking—he
Smoked in the moonlight silently!
Oh love sick maiden pray beware
The silent knight.

News has been received of the death of Miss Bertha Kirkham after a long illness.

April 29 has been selected as the wedding of Miss Bell Cameron Smith of Sharpsburg and Rev. David Laughlin McBride '14, of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Meade Lininger '94, of Sharon is our first woman graduate to enter the legal profession. After study in her husband's office and in Dickinson Law School she has lately been admitted to the Mercer County Bar and passed an examination entitling her to practice in the State Supreme Court.

William Moore '14, has been working hard "stocking" his farm near Hickory and has had the misfortune to have two of his horses stolen. His friends are sorry to hear this and hope that he may be able to recover his loss.

At a tea party given by Miss Florence Hutchison at her home on Saturday afternoon the announcement was made of the engagement of her sister Miss Austa Hutchison ex-'16, to Edward A. Daum '12.

Braham Secures Situation

Special to the Holcad

On Wednesday Prof. J. S. Furry tendered his resignation as head of the department of English at Parnassus High School. Prof. Furry resigned so that he might take up the spring course at the University of Pittsburgh.

Prof. Lefler has been very fortunate in getting Prof. Walter Braham to fill the vacancy. Prof. Braham is a graduate of Westminster College and all through his college course he made the study of Engling literature his specialty. Also, he was a member of Westminster debating team during his college career.—New Kensington Dispatch.

SOPHS ARE CHAMPIONS

Freshmen Downed After an Exciting Struggle

The deciding game of the class basketball league was played on the Thursday evening before vacation, the Sophs defeating the Freshmen and winning the championship 23-22. The game was a hummer all the way—one of those nip-and-tuck struggles that keep the gangloins vibrating like a tuning fork. The old gym rafters creaked with the thunderous din of the loyal class rooters. When the Freshies romped onto the floor one of the first year girls tossed a green covered basket ball into the arena. A moment later the Soph team put in their appearance and the 1917 class yell tore a hole through the welkin.

The game was really more of a wrestlsng match than anything else owing to the small floor and the close guarding. D. Igo and Shatto put up the best game for the Freshmen, while Captain Mc Cracken of the Sophs was mainly responsible for the victory. Time and again this star would toss a goal from an impossible angle. Captain Wherry for the first year men exhibited some gilt-edged foul shooting. Neal, who usually plays his best before a large crowd, had some difficulty in maintaining an equilibrium, probably due to a bottle of pop before the game.

The line up:

Sophs—23		Freshmen—22
Cummings	F	Wherry
McCracken	F	Shatto
Button	C	F. Button
Strathearn	G	Neal
Sniff		D. Igo

Substitutions—Button for Sniff, McCracken for Button, Igo for McCracken. Field goals—McCracken 9, Cummings, Strathearn, Wherry 3, Shatto 3, F. Button 2. Foul goals—McCracken 3, Wherry 6. Referee—Tinkham.

When Coach Tinkham tooted his whistle for the close of the struggle the curtain was rung down on inter-class basketball for Westminster. We have it on good authority that Westminster will be represented by a floor team next year, and judging from the stars developed this year, we should have a five next season that will bring honor and glory to the Blue and White.

Community Opens The Campaign For Local Option

BIG TEMPERANCE RALLY IN THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Dr. J. O. Campbell Brings a Report of the Fight for Local Option Going on in the State Legislature.

Local Option Sunday was celebrated by a Union Meeting of the congregations of the town in the Presbyterian Church. The speakers were Dr. J. O. Campbell and Dr. R. M. Russell. The keynote of both addresses was that the citizens have awakened to the dangers of the liquor traffic, and that they are backing the William's Local Option bill to the finish.

Dr. Campbell brought a report of the recent local option campaign at the State Capital, where six thousand men gathered to show the legislature the sentiment of the voters. In this movement Dr. Campbell had an active part, being a speaker at one of the meetngs, and he was able to present his report very vividly and effectively. He told how Gov. Brumbaugh had delayed the vote on the William's Bill until the representatives should hear from the voters in their districts, and how the supporters of the measure were gradually overcoming the lead of the liquor interests. If the members of the legislature refuse to heed the demands of the people, keep such men out of the legislature.

The speaker enlivened his report with many incidents and anecdotes of his recent visit to Harrisburg. Commenting on the motto of the liquor interests—"Give us a rest"—he said that the "drys" were doing their best to "give them a rest." Dr. Campbell also told the opinions of several of our leading public officials whom he met while at the capital.

Dr. Russell spoke briefly of the

Our New Heading

Much interest was shown in the new heading, which made its appearance on the new Holcad, last week. Many comments were heard, from various sources, all expressing the approval of its readers. For the originality and uniqueness of the heading we are indebted to Harold P. Igo, the designer. The Holcad wishes to add its approval to the rest, and to express its sincere thanks to Mr. Igo.

BIBLE CLASS

College Girls Have Interesting Meeting

The College Girls' Bible Class met Monday night in Adelphic Hall to discuss important business. The constitution used in the Bible classes of the U. P. denomination was read and adopted, thereby admitting the class to the organized work of the Church.

Margaret McCurdy was appointed as chairman of the membership committee and Gertrude Shane of the devotional committee.

Heretofore the collections have gone to the 2d U. P. Sabbath School; but the girls have now decided to use one-fourth of the money for class literature, one-fourth for social service in New Wilmington, and the other half for the use of Miss Annie McFeddries, for her rescue work in Pittsburgh.

The girls also decided it was time they were having a party so they could get better acquainted socially With Gladys Milligan as chairman of this committee there ought to be a fine party arranged.

THIRD FLOOR PARTY

The S's are Given a Surprise Party

Thursday night all the Third Floor was in a state of subdued excitment—that is all except the principal actors in the scene to to be, the new occupants of room 33. At 9:30 there was a patter and rush for room 23, a giggle here, a sh! there, a clatter of spoons and plates interspersed with "shut that door" or "do you have a piece of cake?" And then the procession, led by the celebrated Vere de Toi, carrying plates for the guests, pranced down the hall and in the door of 33.

There stood the S's, mouths and eyes open, hair standing erect, looking as if their last hour had come. But the next minute plates of good things were thrust into their hands, and Romeo whispered (?) "Welcome to third floor."

By the time the eats had disappeared, a book containing the secrets of fate, came from some mysterious place, and each girl by unfolding the petals of a daisy, found her chief desire, characteristic, and that momentous question, "whom shall I marry?"

At ten o'clock, the roof rose a little to give room for the cheers for the two S's, and then—there was quiet (?).

There are two kinds of firms—wide awake ones, and others that are behind the times. The up to date ones advertise in the Holcad. Give them your business and boost the paper.

Remaining Debates Set For Friday And Saturday Nights

UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH AWAY AND W. & J. AT HOME

Westminster Will Have the Negative of the Same Question as Was the Subject of Former Debates.

The debates with Pitt and W. & J. this week will mark the close of the debating season at Westminster. On Friday evening our team will meet the representatives of the University of Pittsburgh in Thaw Hall and the contest with W. & J. will be held in the chapel Saturday night. Both debates will be on the question "Resolved, that the United States should abandon the Monroe Doctrine," our team upholding the negative in both contests.

Westminister will be represented by D. McQuiston, Patterson, Patton, and Stewart. McQuiston and Patterson have already had some debating experience, the former appearing against Grove City two years ago, and the latter being a member of the team that defeated Pitt by a unanimous decision last year. "Hubbard's" ability as a public speaker is shown by the fact that he won a place on the Junior Contest last Commencement. Patterson is a "dark horse" but the fact that he took first place in the preliminary contest proves him to be a debater of much power.

The team has been working hard during the past week under the direction of Prof Moses, and will go into both contests confident of victory. The strength of the Pitt and W. & J. teams, however, is not underestimated. It is said that Pitt will place the best combination at her disposal against the Blue and White, Friday evening, in order to avenge their defeat of last year. The W. & J. team has had much experience in debate, and is coming fresh from a victory over Pitt. Our team, however, hopes to take advantage of all the points in their favor on the negative side.

It is hoped that the contestants will have the hearty support of the entire student body. There is nothing so hard as to speak without the attention of the audience—unless it be to empty chairs. So let every student be out Saturday evening with the intentions of helping the team in every possible way.

"It's coming—Xmas? No. The Athletic Carnival."

JUST A WORD.

In the establishment of a larger and better Holcad the staff has incurred an increased expense for the publishing of the paper. The advertisers have done their part to meet this cost. Are the students, for whom the paper is maintained, ready to do their share? We are making a special effort to give you, for the remaining weeks of this term, a paper which you will be proud to take home to your parents or send to the girl back home. There are at present on the subscription list the names of about 100 students. This leaves about 125 who do NOT subscribe, and who are willing to read their neighbor's paper. Are YOU one of these? We are inaugurating a campaign for subscribers for the remainder of the year, for which we are asking 40 cents. We want ALL who are not subscribers to take advantage of this offer. Do not wait for some one to come to see you, give your 40 cents to some member of the staff. All together—BOOST.

The Business Manager.

SOPHOMORE PARTY

One of the Most Pleasant Ever Given by the Class

The Sophomore party Saturday night was quite the nicest in the annals of the class—and that's going some. The festivities were held in the Hill-side dining room which was artistically decorated in red and black. The guests, greeted by the social committee, were presented with Sophomore sleeve pennants. On the principle that two heads are better than one, one puzzle was assigned to two people, and thus the ice was broken. Various games followed, carefully carried out under the eyes of those stern chaperons, the Tinkhams. The color scheme was carried out in the candies which were served, and the ice cream and cakes were made more delicious by the red seventeen which adorned them. The Freshmen have evidently learned the futility of interfering with the Sophs, for they displayed no sign of freshness except in the somewhat impudent and childish way in which the Freshmen girls bade the departing guests farewell.

M. H.—Simmy, can't we have another big spoon?

A. B. (in English class)—My, you can't help loving the girls they look so sweet.

The First Game Of The Baseball Season is Played

THE BASEBALL OUTLOOK AS SEASON JUST OPENING

Rifle Club For Westminster is One of the Probabilities of the Near Future. Field Meet Friday, April 23rd

The outlook for a winning baseball team this season is particularly bright. Coach Tinkham has been working hard all week with the new recruits, of which there are a goodly number. Nearly all of last year's veterans are back and the scramble for berths promises to be a lively one. Of the new men the following are putting up a good game—Bush, McCreary, Nelson, Armitage, Stamper, Williams; Dart, Forney, Smith and Anderson. The addition of "Chuckle" Anderson, the star town twirler, is going to strengthen the pitching staff mamaterially. Hitherto Westminster has been lamentably weak in stellar moundsmen, but this year with Captain Mercer, Forney and Anderson to rely upon, the Blue and White looks to be well fortified. The Yanigans are showing lots of pep and although Tinkham can't emulate Barney Dreyfuss with cigars, the youngsters declare the chewing gum will be on him after the first game with the regulars.

Manager Herb Jamison has arranged a good schedule and some of the strongest college teams in Western Penn'a will be met on the diamond. The schedule follows:

"Just as I've warned them," said Henderson, "but it's no use, They are as blind as moles. They are dancin' to their own death. As for me, I'll fight to the last ditch, come what may. I'm goin' to barricade this old shop with planks and bales of hay, and I cal'clate I kin wing a hunderd red devils before they get me. By the way, Mr. Brannigan, couldn't I sell you a crackin' good Winchester repeater?"

In his little room above Ma Seeley's kitchen, Brannigan fondled his new possession affectionately. He oiled and cleaned it at least a dozen times, and secretly vowed to steal a march on the enemy some fine day and avert the coming catastrophe.

At the table, the Rev. Slemens frightened Dan with his uncanny prophecies of future punishment.

"Seems as if the old fellow knew of Chief-Afraid-of-the-Dark's intentions," said the young man to himself. The Reverend reveled in sombre Biblical texts and the boarders to a man hailed him and his "verily, verily's" as a common nuisance.

Lucy was very different from the grim old man she called papa.

There was nothing attractive about him except his long wavy black hair and his Nile green vest.

Lucy was round and plump as a prairie chicken and she had eyes velvety as pansies. She could give her opinion equally on Shelly and Swineburne, or Tolstoi and arrapin. And oh how she laughed! It was that sweet, sophisticated laughter which begins with the musical scale and ends with a long coo.

Brannigan fell into the habit of taking a long afternoon walk with Lucy while her esteemed Papa was busy with his itinerant missionary duties. The two had much in common. They shared with each other the secrets of color and harmony which nature confides to the attentive. They were thrilled with the same wondrous rhythm that throbbed in every living thing and they stood with down-cast eyes before the God of the burning bush.

Lucy would recite "Locksley Hall" and Brannigan reciprocate with a passage from Wordsworth. Then one day the Easterner ventured upon his favorite topic, and with ferver recited "The Revenge of Rain-in-the-Face," at which Lucy shuddered and remarked:

"Heavens, Mr. Brannigan, its just horrible, isn't it?" Thereafter Doc Snags occupied most of her spare moments.

For days Brannigan had planned to invade the Kipwa mountains and bring back to the amazed populace the bloody scalp of Chief Afraid-of-the-Dark. He would go tomorrow. Then it would rain. He would make the trip the next day, and then a slight attack of indigestion would confine him to his room. Always something seemed to keep him from the undertaking.

One evening in the rear of Bill Henderson's ill-smelling shop, the harness maker came forward with a tempting proposition.

"Mr. Brannigan," he said, "I have a friend, Sol Susman, who's made a rich find over in the hills. He's struck a spot as rich and yellow as a roll of butter, but doggone it, he aint got a cent to get it recorded. Now Sol says to me, 'Bill, you borrow a hundred from one of your friends, and we'll go three of us on equal shares. Its good for a hundred thousand at least.'"

Brannigan thought long upon the proposition. If he would go into the project he must give up his scalp-hunting, that was certain. Indian chasing and gold mining didn't mix.

At last he answered: "No Henderson, I don't think I'll invest. But say, what about those Arapahoe Indians? When are they coming to town?"

For the first time Bill Henderson snapped him off coldly.

"Not until Election day," he said and continued his work on a fancy saddle.

The very next day as the young man was cleaning his Winchester back of the boarding house, Lucy came tripping along, and asked if he would take a walk that afternoon.

He was so surprised that he said he would before he had time to think it over.

Out on the bloom scented highway, the red menace was forgotten in the joys of comaradie. They walked along arm in arm, each conscious of a deep pleasure in the other's presence. Thru sheltered glades they tramped and along crooked little trails hedged in by scented grasses. The air of the summer land was a wine sweetened with primeval baisams and cooled by the everlasting snows of the Rockies. At last they rested on an inviting knoll beside the winding silver of the Williamette.

Lucy was delightfully effervescent in her emotions. She quoted Shelley for every little over bird that uttered a frightened chirp. She tossed some Swineburn's sea froth to the babbling runnels at her feet, and suddenly she turned with a toss of her golden curls and threw her plump white arms around her companion's neck.

"Dan," she murmured,—"Mr. Brannigan I mean—I love you—and this is leap year, I belong to the 'Catch-my-Pal-Club,' and I've done my best to catch you. Now tell me quickly, will you marry me?"

PLAN FOR WORLD PEACE

As Advocated by the Editor of the Independent.

Hamilton Holt, of New York, editor ot the Independent, in an address before the students of the University of Pittsburgh recently, outlined a plan for future peace. In the strongest terms he deplored the "mob hysteria" for increased armament within the United States. On the other hand he did not advocate disarmament by any nation until there is some league of peace to take its place. He recommended the following plan: A league of peace for mutual defense formed by four or five of the eight chief, and a half dozen of the secondary powers; the privilege of membership freely open to all; pro rata disarmament within the league to an aggregate strength slightly superior to that of any one nation or alliance likely to menace its integrity and the gradual enlargement of the league by an admission of new nations until it literally becomes a world federation. He argued that it seems to be the destiny of the United States to lead in the political organization of the world.

WE ARE ALWAYS PROUD of the standing of Westminster graduates so we were not supprised to hear of their prominent part in the great mass meeting in favor of the local option bill in Harrisburg last week. Wherever we go we can find our graduates taking an active part in the cause for right.

WHEN OUR ALUMNI are so busy we cannot expect them to be thinking always of their Alma Mater; but surely we can hope that the needs of our school here should not be forgotten in the rush of outside interests If the graduates were more interested in the Association work, in the growth of the college equipment, in the teachers and students and in the athletics, we could expect to have greater progress in our college activites. The alumni are, indeed, responsible for the support of their school. The new athletic field is in readiness to be graded and fitted for work but the funds are not at hand. Dr. Russell's challenge to the graduates to raise $75,000 for this work on condition that he do the same, ought to meet with some response.

Y. W. C. A. Notes

At the Y. W. C. A. meeting called for Tuesday evening, April 13, the new annual officers were installed. The following is a list of the names of the old officers and opposite each, the name of her succesor.

Pres.—Janet McCalmont, Mary Newlin. Vice Pres.–Mary Jamieson, Jeanette Smith. Secretary and annual member–Nora Kerr, Agnes Little. Treasurer–Tamar McMurray. Treasurer Protem–Elizabeth Whitmarsh. Social Service Chairman–Jeanette Smith, Elizabeth Whitmarsh Bible Study Chairman–Agnes Little, Gertrude Shane. Prayer Meeting Chairman Katherine Barr, Vera Toy. Poster Chairman–Dorothea Keast, Margaret Noble. Missionary Chairman–Emily Johnston, Emily Johnston. Social Chairman–Mary Newlin, Mary Sloane.

Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. meeting Tuesday evening was addressed by Dean Freeman, who spoke on the subject "Keeping the Other Six." The gist of Dean Freeman's remarks was that the real Christian kept every day in the week holy.

President Jamison of the Y. M. C. A. has appointed the following cabinet—Vice-President, Grundish Secretary Steele, Treasurer, McLaughrey, Committee Chairmen, Armitage, Patton, McClurg, Schnable, E. Mercer and Nelson.

THE FIRST GAME

minster got away Saturday on the local diamond when the "Hash Slingers" of the Hillside defeated the Crescent Club nine 4-3 in an exciting contest. The game resolved itself into a pitchers duel between Williams, formerly of the Blue Grass League and Orr of Charlotte, North Carolina. These two young Southerners pitched air tight ball all the way and not until the "lucky seventh" did the Kentuckian get the decision. Armitage was on the receiving end for the Hash Slingers and on more than one occasion his confident chatter kept Williams from emulating the Wright Brothers.

The work of Stamper and "Simmy" in the outfield is worthy of mention. Time and again the crowd was electrified by the skill of the Atica wonder as he pulled down screaming line drives from the ozone, apparently without any exertion on his part.

Grundish for the Crescent infield made Hans Wagner look like an old cart horse. At the bat he walloped out three three baggers.

Coach Tinkham believes he has solved the first base problem in Jameson, a Pittsburg recruit. Young Jamison kept the large crowd on its feet by his lightning work around the initial sack and some of the old faculty fans were heard whispering comparisons of Chase, Jameson and Konetchy.

The Rifle Club

A rifle club for Westminster seems now practically assured. For some time Coach Tinkham has been corresponding with the officers of the National Rifle Association and the result has been wholly satisfactory.

The National Rifle Association is an organization of civilians for the purpose of encouraging rifle practice among our citizens.

The association is fostered by War Department, and Congress has authorized it to issue to its local organizations army rifles of the model of '98 together with a suitable supply of ammunition. Membership in the organization does not involve any military drill or organization, and the members are not pleged to any military service. The local club will have to pay the carriage on the rifles and ammunition, buy the sub caliber ammunition used in practice and pay the National organization $5.00 per year. The annual expenses of the individual member here can scarcely exceed $1.00. All members attaining the required percentage of hits will be classified as marksmen, sharpshooters, and experts and will be awarded the regulation badges.

In a few days the Coach will hold a meeting for all those who are interested or who wish to investigate. This meeting should be attended by every student who cares to take up high power rifle shooting this spring.

Full account of the Athletic Carnival to be held on April 23 next week.

Nurse—"Why Bobby, you selfish little boy. Why didn't you give your sister a piece of your apple?"

Bobby—"I gave her the seeds. She can plant 'em and have a whole orchard."

Nice old Lady—"Will you kindly tell me if the lady who writes the 'Mother's Page' in your paper, every week, is in? I want to tell her how much I enjoyed reading her articles on 'The Evening Hour in the Nursery.'"

Office Boy—"That's him over there, with the pink shirt, smoking the pipe."

At the Presbyterian Church Sunday night. First Usher—"The gallery is full."

Second Usher—"And this is Temperance Sunday, too."

Little Boy—"How old is that lamp, Ma?"

Ma—"Two years."

Little Boy—"Then turn it down. It is too young to smoke.

Mama, may I go swimming?

No, son, stay away from the water until you learn to swim.

Can you keep a secret?

Yes, but unfortunately, I always tell some one who can't.

Advice to young men—If you are in love, be sure you don't write, then go ahead.

At a village meeting at which improvements were being discussed, an old German rose and made the following brilliant remarks:

"Ach mein fellow Germans, why can't we do somethings? Just look at those Irishmen in Doonville, how they have made a cement sidewalk. Ach, let us put our heads together and make a block pavement."

$100.00 REWARD—For information leading to the arrest and conviction of the unscrupulus wretch who painted the village fire plugs a sickly green.

Hewitt—His words moved me.

Jewitt—Whose?

Hewitt—The Landlord's.

Instructor—"Is the rain purer when it falls in the city or in the country?"

Freshman—It's purer when it falls in the country meadows."

Instructor—"How do you explain that?"

Freshman—"Because it's pasteurized.'

It was commencement evening. A youth rose to deliver his commencement oration. His subject was "Light." He began: "In the beginning God said 'Let there be light: and there was light' Now let us consider some of the modern improvements."

"For the making of billiard balls, five hundred elephants are needed every year," said a famous big game hunter in a lecture on India.

"How strange," said one lady to another, "that people can teach such great beasts to do such delicate work."

"The time will come,' thundered the orator, "when women will get men's wages."

"Yes," sadly muttered a man nearby, "next Saturday night."

"They want $1.25 for the Holcnd."

"Well, it's worth it."

'Sure, but I ain't."

One good thing about prohibition is that it dosent prohibit.

LOCAL OPTION CAMPAIGN

prohibition movement in a more general way. He said that such movements as this might be cited as proof of the worlds progress. In his address various phases of the temperance cause were presented in a new and striking way.

Dr. Kirkbride was in charge of the meeting, and was assisted by Rev. Graham and Rev. McMinn.

The attention and applause of the large audience showed clearly how the majority of the citizens of New Wilmington stood in regard to the question. Realizing themselves the benefits to be derived from prohibition, they are anxious to extend the chance for such benefits to the citizens of the entire state.

ECHOES FROM THE RALLY

Rev. Kirkbride—We are still able by legal means to get all the liquor we need.

(Expression of pleasure from the gallery-gods.)

"Tub"—Why don't you stand up during the singing?

Bill G.—I'm afraid of bumging my head on the ceiling.

Rev. Kirkbride—After such a report we ought to sing in order to arouse the people from drowsiness and weariness.

"Doc" Campbell—I was the only fellow that came through without getting his coat tails pulled.

Weak voice from rear—Do it again tonight, "Doc."

ADVERTISERS' NUMBER

THE WESTMINSTER HOLCAD

Published by the Undergraduates of Westminster College

Vol. XXXII | New Wilmington, Pa., April 29, 1915 | No. 4

The Value of Advertising

DEMONSTRATED BEYOND A DOUBT

The Holcad the Best Medium In This Vicinity

Often you hear the query, "Does advertising pay?" There can be but one answer when results are considered. Advertising does pay or else manufacturers of best sellers are wasting thousands of dollars every week in the advertising columns of our newspapers and magazines. And did you ever stop to consider that the brands of manufactured goods that you use—the goods that are used every where, are the ones advertised the most extensively in the different advertising mediums?

There is an old saying to the effect that if you have goods to sell, customers will come in course of time Let us examine the principle underlying that adage. In the early days of our nation's history the manufacturer had little or no competition. But now in the industrial world competition is keen, there are many different varieties of every article on the market. There are, for example, three clothing stores in one block. Each carry a good stock. The goods must be placed before the customers. There must be advertising in order to persuade the people to give your stock a trial. The wide awake merchant does not wait for customers to come to him he seeks out the customers, and tries to persuade them to try his goods. Then if the goods are advertised, the satisfied customer always returns.

There are two kinds of advertising,—printed and personal. Consider the first kind briefly. There are few persons who will not admit the psychological value of printed advertising. Why do some brands of breakfast food or some kinds of clothing remain fixed in your mind? Because of their constant repitition and reappearance in newspapers and magazines,—often the mere picture of a trade mark suggests the rest of the ad. The secret of successful printed advertising lies in the suggestive power,—the natural psychological working of the human mind. The constantly increasing mail order business in our small town is due in a large measure to the lack of efficient advertising in the local papers.

To the Students

We plan to have this special Advertisers number of the Holcad mark the beginning of a new era in the history of the paper. In the future we want to publish the best college weekly in the State.

In order to do this we must have the support of every student. The advertisers in this number have shown their willingness to cooperate in making a bigger and better paper. Are you willing to do your share?

We believe in reciprocity. If a man puts an ad in our paper we want him to get the student trade. The best firms in the vicinity are represented in this number of the Holcad. It will pay you to read their ads, and to take your trade to their stores. Make it a rule to do business with the firms who are interested enough in you to seek your trade.

Reciprocity! Cooperation! Mutual Satisfaction! We want everybody concerned satisfied with the paper. And we want to boost Westminster College! So help us all you can by taking your trade to our advertisers.

"In Lighter Vein"

"In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thots of love," and why not? Adam first loved Eve in April, sang his love song in the balmy days of May. and Eve became a sweet "June Bride." This has ever remained a dominant character in the human family and has always bred true. In the Springtime love is rampant everywhere. The sun looks down in love and touches the dormant sparks of life which, responding burst forth into verdant beauty.

We sense the feeling in everything: we taste it in the maple syrup, the sweet love nectar of the trees; we smell it in the perfume of the flowers; the love songs of the birds awake us in the morning and we hear it there; nature robes the earth in beautiful sparkling colors and we see it there; finally; there is born within us a feeling of love, love for everything, everybody. Love then is universal. Why should not the fancy of youth and maiden turn to thots of this wonderful feeling.

Conducted Services

The services at the United Presbyterian Chruch of Liberty, Ohio, last Sabbath were in charge of Herbert Jamison, J. C. Fulton, L. M. Stewart and W. I. Grundish. In the morning these men gave short addresses on the different steps in a christian life. The evening meeting was more informal, talks being given along the lines of personal experience. Both services were well attended.

Wrestling and Boxing Carnival Great Success

ONE OF THE ATHLETIC EVENTS OF THE SEASON

McQuiston Wins from Coach Tinkham in the Big Event. Many Interesting and Amusing Features on Program.

The big Athletic Carnival held last Friday night in the Chapel was a success in every way. A large crowd greeted the boxing and wrestling bouts and applauded enthustiastically. "Tus" McLaughrey managed the show and made as good an announcer as Tim Hurst. The novelty of the entertainment appealed to the audience. Even some members of the faculty held ring side seats. The affair came near going on the rocks when quite a commotion was rasied over Herb Jameson squealing out of a ten cent bet with Doc Campbell. Finally order was restored by Janitor Weber and the fistic festival was on. In the first wrestling bout Strathearn of Braddock. Pa, and Coulter of Strawberry Ridge, N. Y., went for five minutes to a draw. The next attraction, D. Igo vs. McCrumb proved very close and interesting It also ended in a draw. Then Igo and Strathearn boxed three rounds without spilling any blood.

The fourth number on the program kept the crowd in a laughable mood. Stamper from Kentucky and Clarke from Penn'a refought the Civil War with pillows. The bout became ferocious and when Stamper began to draw blood from his opponent the referee interfered to save the stars and stripes from another Bull Run defeat. In a short wrestling contest Shields threw Harold after two minutes of grappling. H. Igo and McCrumb boxed three rounds to a tie.

Neal and Berry middle weights went after each other like polar bears knocking the plaster off the ceiling in Prof. McElree's room in their ardent effort to obtain a fall.

Westminster Wins Out

MERCER'S TEAM SHOWS FORM

Pitchers Duel Between Anderson and Riley Saturday Afternoon

On Saturday afternoon, the first real base ball day of the season, Westminster ushered in its 1915 base ball season, with a victory over the Terrace A. C. This strong amateur team, hailing from New Castle, played excellent ball but were unable to solve Anderson's assortment of curves. This was Anderson's introduction into the sphere of [illegible] ball, and just here we would say, that he has the promise of developing into one of the greatest of Westminster's pitchers of all time. Other features of the game were, a spectacular bare hand catch of a foul fly back of third base by K. Igo, in the third inning, and a scentillating catch of a line drive, by D. Igo in the sixth. Added to these was the playing of Cummings on first, who dug up the earth and extended himself to the limit, in spearing some rather wild throws of his team mates, some of whom have not yet recovered from the soreness of the short spring training practice. Nelson, a new man at short accepted several hard chances without a slip up and handled himself like a veteran.

Westminster scored in the first inning, when K. Igo the first man man up got a clean single down along the third base line, and stole second and third and scored on Cummings sacrifice. In the second inning, Terrace evened the score up, when Fair misjudged a difficult fly in middle field Phillips circling the bases. The boys from New Castle jumped in the lead in the fourth, when they scored a run on three errors. However, Westminster came back in the sixth and evened the score, by a couple of clean hits. There was no more scoring until the ninth inning, both sides being retired in one, two, three order. In their half of the ninth Terrace was absolutely at the mercy of Anderson who struck out the first three men to face him. Then, in their half Westminster came thru with the old base hits which won the game, Cummings, the first man up hit a hard grounder to the shortstop and reached first, when he juggled the ball for a few monents. Then Judge C. H. Smith, who has been taking a leading part in Steubenville's municipal house cleaning, graduated from Westminster in 1900. Judge Smith will be remembered as a speaker at the recent alumni banquet in Pittsburgh.

Ralph Miller, '14, spent last Friday and Saturday visiting some of his friends at the college. Miller was editor of the Holcad last year, and was the originator of the weekly.

Mildred Burns, Margaret Murdock and Dorothea Keast spent the week end with Ruth Houston, '14, at Darlington, Pa.

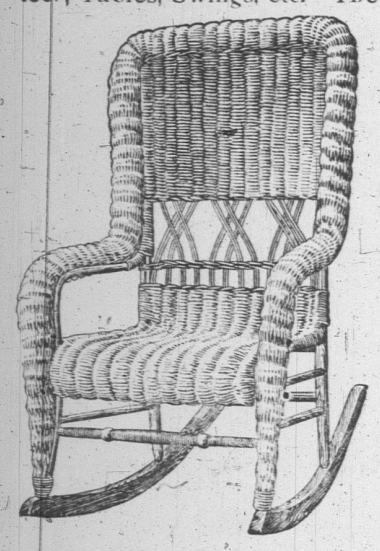

ELECTED OFFICERS

Sabbath morning the Boy's Bible Class elected the following officers for next year: Pres. Haskell Patton; V.-Pres. Herbert Armitage; Sec. Fred Reed.

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED

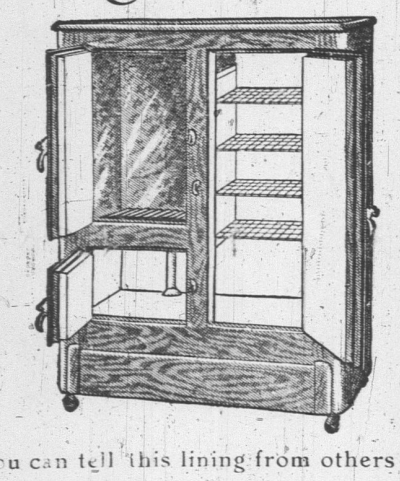

In Porch Furniture

You will find much pleasure in seeing our new spring stock. We show many new styles and all in the new Baronial Brown finish. We have Rockers, Chairs, Settees, Tables, Swings, etc. The styles are unusually good and the price surely low enough to suit you. Our warm weather is close at hand. Warm days will mean "Veranda Days," for it is there that many of the leisure hours of yourself and others are spent. On the veranda you will receive your friends and entertain them, and it is there the visitor will get the first impression of your home; therefore you should choose the furniture carefully. We recommend this new line of porch furniture because it comes in endless line of handsome, graceful, elegant styles, and in a soft rich coloring which will never fade. It is practically indestructible, being made of toughened fibre, carefully put together by hand. Every detail is given thorough attention and the result is a sound, substantial piece of furniture that will successfully stand hard knocks and rough usage. We want you to see this line for we know it will please you.

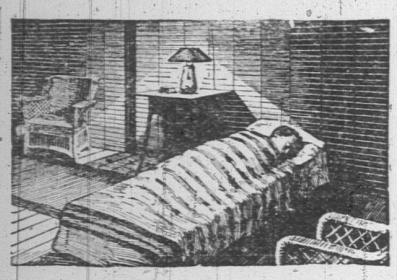

Like a Clean China Dish

Is the LEONARD
REFRIGERATOR
With its one piece porcelain linings—seamless —so[illegible]ess—everlasting [illegible]e delight of every woman's heart. There are no joints, no cracks, no crevices to harbor germs and give out odors. You wash it with soap and water, as you clean a dish. You can tell this lining from others for it cannot be scratched or marred, even with a hat pin or a knife blade. The LEONARD is made in Grand Rapids, the home of good furniture. It has led for years and is further ahead this year than ever. Its new trigger lock which automatically closes the door air tight, is a wonderful improvement over locks used on other makes. Call and let us explain the merits of the Leonard.

Vudor Porch Shades

Vudor
Porch Shades
ARE IDEAL FOR SLEEPING PORCHES

Add another room to your house, an out-door living room that you'll vote is the best of all. Here you can work or play or rest and enjoy the summer day secluded from outsiders and free from the stuffy rooms. It is always quite cool and nice and shady on a "vudorized" porch. You never feel shut in for you can see out readily and get all the air and light you want. Vudor shades are very durable and will outlast many seasons. All the staple sizes.

This ad deals only with a few seasonable articles. They take up but a very little of the 30,000 sq ft. devoted to Furniture, Carpets, Stoves and Dishes.

Personal advertising also has real values. The mouth to mouth transmition of the faults or merits of an article often makes or breaks a merchant. You have heard the remark, perhaps, that the Ford automobile is not advertised extensively in the various publications. Yet the Ford is the greatest advertised automobile in the world today,—the advertising methods are personal and unique. Newspaper articles about Henry Ford's profit sharing plan, magazine articles about Henry Ford's revolution of industrial methods, occasional articles about Henry Ford's generosity,—the best kind of personal advertising. Perhaps the last joke you heard about the Ford originated in the company's advertising office. This kind of advertising cost many thousands of dollars, but who will say it was not worth it?

Just as either kind of advertising pays the large producer, so on a smaller scale, does advertising pay the producer or merchant in a small community. Take our own paper as a medium, for example. There is an idea that the HOLCAD is not a good advertising medium because it is a College paper. Yet the HOLCAD offers both a printed and personal value as an advertising medium. Of course a small ad (in any paper) running unchanged month after month will not yield enormous profit,—the size and merits of a store are often jugded by the size and appearance of it's ad. And again, the policy of the paper might not have aimed to give the advertisers results. But under our new policy we are going to try to make the HOLCAD an efficient, paying advertising medium. This is possible for two reasons.

First, a college paper is read with more interest than anyother magazine, because of a certain intimate atmosphere about college life which appeals to every person. Second, the students feel partly responsible for the paper, and will show their appreciation of the advertisers by their support. Then there is the trade and good will of some 1700 alumni, some of them in positions of prominence. Thus the paper has both a printed and personal appeal.

We do not claim the sensational results of a series of full page ads in the Saturday Evening Post, but we do believe that the HOLCAD will give a return in proportion to the relative amount expended. And under our new policy we want to introduce our advertisers to our readers. In this we need the support of both. We thank our old advertiser, we welcome the new, and we solicit your support in the future for our mutual satisfaction.

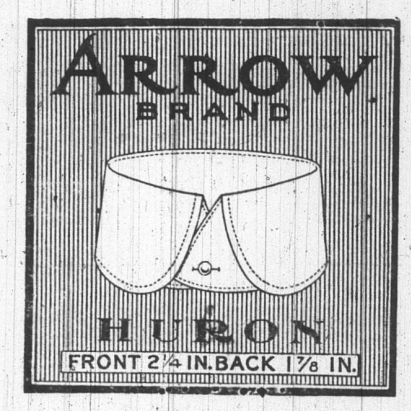

Good Road's Day

Don't forget that Wednesday, May 26, is Good Road's day in Lawrence County, and that everybody is expected to help in the good cause. Plans are being made to secure a State Engineer to supervise the work. There will be no classes at the college, and the students are planning to use picks and shovels instead of dictionaries and test tubes.

Last Saturday Grove City College defeated New Castle High School 3 to 1 in a close game.

WHEN A PAPER is enlarged the usual policy of the staff is to fill the front page with articles telling how it was done. We have decided to depart from the customary routine, believing that this special Advertiser's number speaks for itself. Just a word, however, concerning the purpose of this edition! We want this number to mark the opening of a new policy in regard to the HOLCAD,—a policy that will give the students, alumni, and friends of the college a wide-awake, readable paper, and a policy that will furnish the advertisers a medium by means of which to reach the College community in a personal, appealing way. We want to put out a paper that will be satisfactory both to readers and to advertisers. This cannot be done without cooperation. The advertisers certainly have done their share in this number. Will you do your share by reading their advertisements? In them you are sure to find information of value. We believe that in this number are presented the best goods of the best firms, and we also believe that if you do your buying in an efficient way it will pay you to study these ads. The aim of our paper is to please the readers, to pay the advertisers, and to boost the College.

Just a word to the students! The advertisers in this number have given the HOLCAD their support and assistance in making a larger and better paper. In return we want to give them as much of the student trade as possible. This is not a charity proposition! In our advertising columns are represented the very best firms in the vicinity,—their ads are adapted to student needs, and they will give the best of attention to any orders from this community. Moreover, several of our advertisers have made wonderful offers to customers from New Wilmington. It should be noticed in this connection that there is good train service to the stores of some of our largest advertisers. It will pay you to buy only from the firms that advertise in the HOLCAD. We are sure that in this way you will be better served, and the advertiser will be satisfied with his investment.

One of the crying needs of the College is a new American flag to display on Decoration Day and other holidays. In these days of world war the flag means more to us, possibly, than ever before. Patriotism is more than a matter of sentiment,—it is a spirit upon which the efficient existance of a nation depends. And besides, now that we have the flags of the various foreign nations displayed in the class rooms of the Modern Language Department, it is fitting that an American flag should float over the campus. The HOLCAD suggests that the powers that be consider this matter. And may we make the further suggestion that the flag should be purchased from one of our advertisers.

When you make a purchase from one of our advertisers, please mention the HOLCAD. Such a thing helps the paper because it shows the advertiser that he is getting results. We are trying to give you the best College weekly in the State, and we need your help in such matters as this.

Fair, finding the first offering of the opposition to his liking, lined a clean hit out over second base, Cummings going to third. After a moments hesitation, Forney, selected a choice war club and with one strike on him, drove a clean hit thru the second base which scored Cummings and Fair and thus brought defeat to his former team mates.

Diamond Dust

That game was a daisy boys. Keep it up!

After everything has been said you will have to acknowledge that the little Welsh are game to the core.

Brown the Terrace A. C. first baseman is one of the fastest men ever seen on the local diamond.

K. Igo played a good game at third and pulled off a sensational one-hand catch in the fifth.

Miz Dart vows he will never again attempt to run down a Welshman after the third strike. Its harder than stopping a greased pig in an alley, he says.

Cummings put up a brilliant game around first. Dave is at home on any infield position.

What has become of the fair fan? Maybe strolling is more conducive to health than the danger of overexerting one's lungs at a home ball game.

Phillips was presented with a valuable amethyst pin by his team mates for his home run in the fourth inning.

Frank Forney has our sympathy in his endeavor to coax a few tooth brush whiskers into growth. Never mind the gossip "Fink." They are still passing the story around that Adam had two wives.

Don't forget the game with Slippery Rock Saturday. Come out and support the home team!

The Silent Salesman

I am the silent salesman and my nickname is "Ad." Everyone knows me in New Wilmington and vicinity. I shine thru the pages of the Holcad like a fire in the forest. I promote progress, keep the arteries of Old Man Business from hardening, and make everyone happy. I am a Missionary of the religion of business. I go into the homes of the rich and poor and I seek to balance potential differences in finance. I am in league with the law of compensation. By my unspoken word a man parts with a portion of his earthly goods that he may receive it's equality in some thing he has not, and desires. They call me the silent salesman but certainly I am not deaf and dumb. I represent a score of reliable firms in this great work-a-day valley and I carry their message direct to YOU. "He that hath ears let him hear!"

The Sign ⟨W⟩ of Quality

Every individual---every store---has some characteristic that sets him or it aside from other people, or other concerns, as the case may be. Our business has been established over 35 years, changing ownership once. We have always stood for unquestionable dealings with our fellowman---that's our characteristic. Secondly, we have always handled only the first quality merchandise that the world produces. Thirdly, we employ only specialists in our our mechanical department.

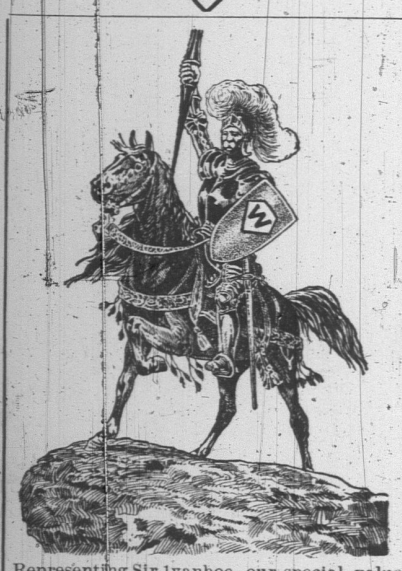

We would call your attention to a marvelous feat of engraving executed by our own Mr. Paul P. Wentz, so far as is known, the best of its kind on record.

On the head of a common pin he engraved the entire Lord's Prayer. The feat was accomplished with the ordinary engraving tools used every day in our shop. The Pennsylvania Historical Society, 1300 Locust Street, Philadelphia, Pa. asked for and received the curiosity the same being on display at that institution. The society acknowledged the gift with a certificate which we now hold.

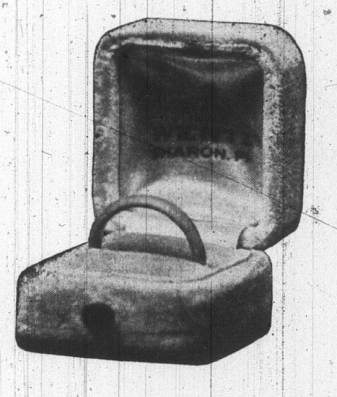

We invite your inspection of our lines when in our vicinity.

Brannigan's Scalp

Then he rose, threw the medicine in the ash box and slowly dressed himself.

"Very clever," he sneered. "very clever, I must say, but he's not quite sharp enough for Dan Brannigan. He thought he would put me to sleep with this portion. He planned to wait until the poppy was moving languidly among the rivers of my blood and then elope with Lucy. Well, we will see."

Once outside, the dizziness and fever seemed to leave his head and he drew in great breaths of the keen mountain air. It acted as bracing as wine and it acted as fuel to his run down engine.

He could not find anyone at the boarding house—not even Ma Seeley. So Snaggs had probably carried out his sinister plan. Well, what was love anyway, Brannigan said half aloud, to his early ambitions?

He hurried to his room and found his winchester hanging in its usual position above his bed. Shouldering it, he started bravely and boldly up the mountain trail—up into the dark, mysterous Kiowas where the Araphoes sat in council. Jack rabbits scampered across his path, and once a shaggy, shambling brown bear trotted across a clearing and plunged into the deeper forest.

The great shrouded pines seemed to whisper warnings in their gentle rustle, but his impetuous nature heeded them not. A red shouldered hawk screamed premonitions above in the blue, and little bush birds cheeped nervously around him.

Not until he reached the crest of the hill did he halt for a breathing spell.

Then his heart began a terrible fluttering for down below him in a sheltered ravine he glimpsed a band of blanketed Indians huddled in a semicircle and in their midst was a tall, painted warrior, haranguing and gesticulating. It could be no other than Chief Afraid-of-the-Dark, and his Araphoe braves and they were plotting to descend upon the unsuspecting inhabitants of Fort Morgan.

The idea nerved Brannigan to action. Nervously he brought to light a long, razor edged knife which he had stolen in Ma Seeley's kitchen and which for some time he had kept hidden in his high-topped boots.

He clutched its handle in a vice-like grip, and uttering his old college yell, dashed down the slope upon the assembled council.

The Araphoes fled in panicky confusion leaving enough red blankets behind to satisfy the Socialist party. Chief Afraid-of-the-Dark lay prostrate on the ground and Brannigan bearing the coveted scalp at his belt, proudly hurried homeward!

He found Lucy crocheting under a pear tree in Ma Seeley's back yard. Snaggs was not in sight.

Brannigan, true knight that he was, camly and modestly lay the trophy at her feet.

She gave a queer little note of suprise and threw her arms about him and kissed him tenderly.

"Daniel, you would go into the Lions cage for Lucy, wouldn't you sweetness? Well, come along into the kitchen and we'll have a little lemonade and you can help me pick our garden seeds from the Catalogue. Look at those dear little house wrens, Dan, they're building their little nest's over the eaves."

Dan Brannigan and Lucy were married and lived happily ever afterwards as you have surmised. But I assure you, Cupid dosen't ride on plush the whole way.

Shortly after the cereomny when the couple were still under the spell of the blissful coma know as the Honey Moon,

Brannigan said:

"Lucy, I want to make a confession to you. And I love you none the less after saying it. It was not cupid that brought us together. It was the little heathen God that sits smiling tonight in a grey room of my cerebrum. I had an ambition, foolish as it may seem and it was bigger than love. Your note inspired me I confess, but not until I laid the scalp of Chief Afraid-of-the-Dark at your feet, did I wholly surrender to loves call."

Then Lucy placed her dimpled forefinger under Brannigans chin and uttered her special laugh.

"That was manly of you, Dan," she cooed, "and I agree with you that there should be no secrets between us. I also will make a confession.

The day you brought home the scalp you were still delirious from the fever. You paraded down street with that horrid old gun and everyone wisely took to cover.

Then Doc Snaggs followed you up and saw you swoop down on Father and the Araphoe Bible Class. You know Papa has been holding out door meetings with some of the reservation red men and to gain their tribal respect he painted up and wore a red blanket.

Papa wears a wig and I hah an awful time hushing him up for your sneaking up on him and stealing it."

Tennis Team at Grove City

GOOD GAME ON THURSDAY

A TIE WITH GROVE CITY.

Tennis Team Plays the Crimson Net Men to a Standstill.

Last Thursday the tennis team played the fast Grove City net aggregation to a tie, each team winning two matches in the singles and one in the doubles. The teams were well matched as a whole, and the spectators were treated to some clever playing.

The match between Byers and Grundish was won by the latter 6-4 and 6-2, the Westminster man's work at the net giving him the victory. Braham put up a hard fight against Thorn of Grove City, but lost 7-5 and 6-3. Kirkbride seemed to have an off day, and was taken over by Turner in straight sets 6-1 and 6-0.

McNaugher and Durstine played the closest match of the afternoon. "Joe" started well and took the first set 5-3, but Durstine got his fast serve working and took the second 6-4. Both men played fast tennis during the third set, but the Grove City man forged ahead and looked like a winner. But McNaugher made a spurt and took the set 7-5.

Both matches of doubles were hotly contested, as both teams were pulling hard for a victory. McNaugher and Grundish kept up their winning streak by taking the match in straight sets 6-2, 6-4. The superior teamwork of the Blue and White combination gave them the edge on their opponents and their placement work kept the Grove City net men guessing. Thorn and Turner managed to nose out Braham and Kirkbride 2- 6-3.

Second Church Social

On last Thursday evening the Y. P. C. U. of the Second Church, held its alumni annual social at the home of Dr. Cummings. An outdoor social was an agreeable change from the usual kind held in the church, and the crowd showed their appreciation of the change, and of the hospitality of the family. The old-fashioned kind of games we used to play at school were entered into heartily, even by dignified seniors.

A few persons whom the Colonel would characterize as "undesireable citizens," were kicking about in the shadows, but were not successful in their foul designs to such an extent as to disappoint any person's appetite.

TEAM SUFFERS DEFEAT.

Makes a Poor Showing on First Long Trip of Season.

Manager Jamison and Coach Tinkham escorted the base ball team on an extensive tour thru Western Pennsylvania last week, but returned with nothing to their credit but a few alibis, and a string of defeats. Strikeouts, errors, pop flies, and mistakes in signals make up the sad tale of the disastrous trip. In four games the team scored seven runs, lined out twenty hits, and perpetrated twenty-one errors.

Duquesne started the trouble, Tuesday, by scoring 12 runs before the locals realized that the game was over. The feature of this game was the pitching of Howard, who struck out 13 men. The game with Waynesburg, Wednesday, was called off on account of rain.

The game with Kiski, Thursday, was the only bright spot on the entire trip. In spite of the fact that the Saltsburg aggregation won 6 to 4. Both teams played good ball until the final inning, when Kiski managed to send two runs across the pan. Four errors by the Blue and White infield helped the Kiski players materially. In this game Cummings laced out a two-bagger. Forney held Kiski to 5 hits, and struck out 9 men.

Indiana had an easy time winning 13 to 3, Friday afternoon. Harrick played a fine game for the Normalites, allowing but 5 hits, having 9 strikeouts, scoring 2 runs, and batting out two hits, one of these being a circuit swat. Dart came into the limelight with a home run.

Saturday afternoon St. Vincent took another game 10 to 0. In this game Westminster garnered but 3 hits, while the Beatty combination pounded out 16, including a double, two tripples and a homer. Our infield contributed four more errors.

MEAN QUIBBLER.

"I must say that these are fine biscuits!" exclaimed the young husband.

"How could you say those are fine biscuits?" inquired the young wife's mother in a private interview.

"I didn't say they were fine. I merely said I must say so."

Science Hall Dedication.

The formal dedication of the remodelled Science Hall will take place Saturday afternoon, June 12. At that time the building will be opened for inspection by Commencement visitors. Dr. John Brashear, who is connected with the Allegheny University, will make an address on "Fifty Year's Reminiscence of Scientific Discovery and Invention."

Thiel Defeated at Greenville Last Tuesday

Although out-hit, Westminster put up the best article of ball Tuesday afternoon and trounced Thiel 13 to 9. The game was a slugging match. 33 hits, 9 of them being two-baggers, being registered during the engagement. Wherry scored 3 runs for the locals and his teammate, D. Igo, repeated the performance. McCreary laced out 4 hits, one of the hits counting for an extra base. Snyder and Lynch played whirlwind games for the Greenville aggregation.

WINS TRACK MEET.

Every Event Very Hotly Contested.

A persistent inability to win first place in the track meet with Grove City, Saturday, brot defeat to the Westminster Athletes. It was comparitively easy to secure seconds and thirds, but even the combination of these in the final count do not offset the firsts. Westminster must develope a larger number of star men if she wants to win success in future meets. The finish count, Saturday, was 80 51.

McCune, Vincent, Ferguson and McCracken, each, scored a first. Buckley followed with three seconds. Thru the ignorance of the starter the contestants were forced to run the 100 yard dash four times before it was satisfactory to both sides; this winded "Ted" at the very beginning of the meet. Mechlin, Mercer, Berry, McLaughrey and McCracken, each, secured seconds. Shields surely had an off day, falling about five feet short of his Geneva record which would have taken first place. Berry came out well, breaking his previous record by a foot and a half. Ferguson easily took the quarter making good time. Alter, of Grove City, made good in the 2-mile, finishing in 10:49; if you don't think it was fast ask Johnny Mercer, who finished a close second.

Results:

100 yd. dash—Moreledge, G. C. Buckley, W., 10 2-5 sec.

⅔ mile run—McCune W., Robinson G. C., Wiley G. C., 2 min. 11 seconds.

220 yd. dash—Moreledge G. C.,

Journalism Conference.

The third annual Journalism Conference of the Middle Atlantic Association of College and School Newspapers was held at the University of Pittsburgh last Friday and Saturday. Friday afternoon the session was devoted to a discussion of various editorial problems. On Friday evening the conference was addressed by Dr. Walter Wilson, Dean of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri The business session was held Saturday morning. The conference was attended by delegates from twenty or more papers, the Holcad being represented by the editor.

PRESIDENT NOT CHOSEN.

Committee Has Not Picked Man for Dr. Russell's Place.

As far as can be learned from the most reliable sources, the situation in regard to the presidency remains unchanged Rumors are plentiful, but the committee has made no definite announcement, and Dr. Russell, who interviewed, stated that he had heard any news and did not think that anything definite had been decided.

Settling down from the hurry following the resignation, the committee seem to have taken a position of "watchful waiting," as Dr. Russell terms it. This inactivity can have but two meanings. Either the committee has not decided the man to ask, or someone already asked is considering the proposition.

There are persistent rumors that the new president will not take office until next winter, thus leaving the institution without a head next fall. Such a course should be avoided if at all possible. The fall term, during which the new students enter and courses are decided, is possibly the most important of the entire school year. It is imperative that the new president should step into office without stopping the machinery of school government for an instant. There is no better time for making such a change than at the beginning of the fall term.

Occasional remarks are heard on the campus that indicate radical changes in the school policy next year. Of course such rumors may have no foundation, but there is a feeling among the student body that a crisis in the college is impending. The general desire is that the new president be chosen, and his name announced as soon as possible.

Initiative and Referendum

University of Pittsburgh students, who have self-government, have adopted a new constitution which provides for the initiative, referendum and recall. Only a few students are not in favor of direct legislation in student affairs. The total vote in six schools was 577 for the constitution to 51 against. The first election under the new constitution was held Wednesday of this week.

THE "BLACK AND MAGENTA" has the following to say in regard to the Tri-State Contest: "In the past Muskingum has set a high mark as a winner of first place in this contest. Three times within four years she has won first place. Within a period of three years she has ranked so low as third only once." The "four years" doubtless refer to the contests from 1910 to 1913 inclusive, during which time Muskingum did make a splendid record. But our fellow editor seems to forget that before and since that time Muskingum has not taken a single first place. On the other hand, out of the nineteen contests since the organization of the Association Westminster has won first place six times and second place on seven occasions. We congratulate Muskingum on her excellent showing, but we cannot admit that he representatives have set a "high mark" record in the Tri-State Contest.

THE BASEBALL situation cannot be called promising, to say the least. It is hard to determine just where the trouble lies. There is a wealth of good material, enough players with reputations to start an intercollegiate Federal League, but it seems impossible to find a winning combination. The sad part of the whole business is that the team is booting games away. four to eight errors being the average. What is needed more than anything else is a lot of good, old fashioned pep and ginger,—the kind of stuff that sent the Braves into the World's Championship. The team can't be expected to play baseball if the school isn't backing up like the rock of Gibralter. So come out and do your share. There's no use knocking,—the team is beyond that stage. So come out and boost!

Y. M. C. A. BIBLE CLASS

Will Hold a Picnic in the Near Future.

Read Christ's Sermon on the Mount: Matt. V, 6-7, and then come to bible class next Sabbath morning at 9:55, a. m., and listen to Prof. Troup's analysis of it. It is the greatest sermon of history, because the greatest man composed it.

The picnic which the Y. M. Bible class owe the Y. W. Bible class is forthcoming just as soon as Dr. Freeman will give us a date. Be patient, girls, the boys have never gone back on their word yet.

Junior Party.

The Junior girls were very royally entertained last Thursday evening by "Vera, Neva, Agnes and Betty" of the third floor. Promptly at 9:30 all Juniors laid aside their bible note books and French outliner and made their way to room 26. They were received by a charming little French lady in cap and apron, who ushered them in with much decorum. Every one at first supposed that she had been imported for the occasion, but later they discovered that she was simply Agnes Burton's long-suffering Freshman room-mate.

After all the guests had arrived they were ushered into room 25 where games and guessing contests were in order. Ritchy won the prize, and was presented with a "man," which she promised faithfully to love and cherish, altho not to obey. At this juncture another French maid appeared to usher the guests to room 23, where a dainty luncheon was served by the other Freshman room-mates garbed as French maids. Decorations were of blue and gold crepe paper and bunches of blue and yellow violets graced each table Orange lolly-pops tied with bows of blue ribbon served further to carry out the color scheme.

It was not until after eight bells that the merry crowd dispersed, but good nights were finally given in stage whispers, and the junior girls tip-toed off thru darkened corridors to their respective rooms.

Good Roads Day.

Don't forget the Good Roads Day, May 26th!

That seems to be the prevailing slogan everywhere. Even the automobiles are advertising it. Westminster has declared it a holiday, and the students are expected to work with hands instead of brains (?) for once. That decision was made Saturday morning when a majority of the men of the faculty and student body, under the spell of rousing speeches from Prof. Barr, Dr. Ferguson and Dr. Campbell and of stirring music, pledged to support the movement with picks and shovels. It will be a good advertisement for the college to show that we have the interest of the community at heart as well as our own. So let us all be philanthropists for once boost G. R. Day.

Miss Mabel Boaks, dean of the Hillside during the year of 1912-13, was the guest of Prof. and Mrs. Smith over the week end. Those who remembered her former residence here were very glad to meet her once more. Mrs. Smith entertained the Junior and Senior girls on Monday afternoon at an informal tea in her honor.

The Greatest Baseball Game on Record

The day arrived. The Spanish arena was jammed to the top tier with coffee-colored "fans" and a sprinkling of khaki-clad soldiers. Captain Cunningham had taken the affair as a barracks room joke, and so refrained from any military interference. All the fair ones of Caraco were in the dobe stands, addorned with ostrich plumes and glass beads, and their faces glistened in the sun with grease and charcoal talcum. Just back and above the catchers box, where the Honorable Pedro Herando, Spanish Governor, used to witness the weekly bull baiting, was perched Jacquelina.

Her dress was a naive blending of Igorotte style and American fashion. She wore a merry widow hat with green grapes and sweet pea trimmings; about her delicate curved, ebony neck was a grinning necklace of human bones; around her slim waist was a leopard skin girdle couched in pink chiffon and Worcester lace, and brass bracelets encircled her slim, trim ankles.

When Private Riley and his eight fence breakers trotted out on the diamond, the princess stood up in her box and waved a tiny American flag. The Malays applauded each move as Riley's men had their preliminary workout, they shook the crumbling old coliseum when Bailey and his team came thru the turnstiles.

Bill, himself, headed the procession, dressed quite as gaudy as any Spanish matedor. You know nothing tickles a Philipinmore than a bright color, unless it be a jug of mescal, so Bill captivated them from the first start, with his gold braid and his turkey-red sash.

Behind him in single file and marching lock-step came his picked team, flourishing their fungo clubs like Modern Woodmen of the World, and last of all was Rosie, led by a twelve-year old Sulu youngster, and waltzing to the native's band.

They say that Jaquelina cheered and stamped her pretty feet, and spilled her lemonade down on the King's unprotected pate in the excitement. Bailey paraded his heroes three times around the sandy course, and then bowed to the crowd and threw a handfull of courtsies to the princess. Finally after the confusion had simmered down, King Jose announced the batteries and the game was on.

Talk about your world's series! Well, this affair was more exciting than the time the Baltimore Orioles burnt up the circuit. Bill was chucking them over for his outfit, and from the first beat of the tom-tom, had his opponents clawing the air like the wings of a Dutch windmill.

But Captain Riley was long on judgment if he was short on Spaulding's rules. He had rounded up Felix Mallendez, who was six feet and eight inches in his sandals, and had shoulders like a piano mover. Felix was one of of those amberdextrous fellows who are usually worked on cold days or in double-headers. Well, sir, when they got to touching Felix's right hand offerings, he just shifted to windward and gave them a sample of his southpaw.

For three sizzling innings not a man on either team got a man as far as first base. Then Don Jaime, Riley's swarthy, bow-legged shortstop got in the way of Bailey's jump ball, and the king gave him a walk down the line. Now, Don Jaime was an ex-matedor and as lively on his feet as a clog dancer. While Bill was taking the bush-league windup, that reminds you of a coal mine windlass, Don Jaime streaked it to second.

A dozen rebel yells split the air as Bailey turned and pegged to his second basemen. The fleet Don Jamie ran ten yards past the keystone bag and then calmly trotted back to the base, where San Sacrimento was waiting with the ball.

"You're out," barked the King. a la Hank O'Day.

"Not on your daguerotype," says Don Jaime, his little pig eyes flashing, red "I turned right, didn't I, Senor Riley?"

Riley came out on the field and kicked like Frank Chance over the decision, but it wasn't no use. The King sent him back to the bench and chased Don Jaime from the lot for arguing the point. The crowd shrieked and cat-called and yelled "bully" for the King but Riley disdained their jeers and escorted his disgruntled player to the bamboo gate.

After that the runs began to accumulate so rapidly that the chief score-keeper used up three war clubs in cutting notches. The struggle see-sawed back and forth and kept the bleachers straining like a hound at the leash with expectation and excitement. The 'dobe stands creaked under the tense strain. Twice, when the game seemed won, Jacquelina fell into a hysterical swoon.

Never had the natives witnessed such speed, such skill and daring! Bill Bailey was twirling like Matty in his prime. Manuel Quintana had several home run hits to his credit. Luzan Lupericio boosted the score with thirteen runs in three innings. Alphonso Rollondo caused the band to play "A Hot Time in the Old Town" every time he caught a high fly with his bare hands.

Along in the seventh inning the score stood 196 to 154 in favor of Bailey's chocolate soldiers. A little handicap of 43 runs wasn't disastrous to the optomistic Riley. Men responded nobly to his "up and at 'em, boys," and when the eighth stanza appeared they had closed the breach up to eighteen runs.

MOVING PICTURE SHOW.

Artistic Film Performance Invades New Wilmington.

Last Thursday the sacred quiet and peace of this hallowed little town was rudely broken. With the swiftness of the Kaiser's favorite Zepelin the invader swept into our midst, and before Jake Weber realized it, the tents of an enterprising moving picture merchant were adorning Henderson's back lot.

For three evenings feature pictures of love and hate, of peace and war, were portrayed to enraptured audiences. Would-be John Bunnys and Mary Pickfords and Charlie Chaplins flitted upon the screen, while the staid inhabitants of the village looked shocked with one eye and pleased with the other, for no one can resist the lure of the "movies."

"Jimmy" Kerr and his Freshmen cohorts gave the show "the once over" Thursday evening, "Bob" Stewart holding down a front row seat as usual. Friday evening the college was represented by George Neal and Fred Button, who were seeking inspiration for English themes. "Hubbard" Stewart tried to "bum" his way in, but was unsuccessful. "Tub" Fulton cheated the gatekeeper out of a "jitney," Saturday night, and thus managed to get inside of the ropes. We advise "Tub" to send the "jitney" to the Red Cross Fund.

Freshman Hats Reappear.

And the hats came back!

Many a Freshman girl's face was wreathed with smiles Friday morning to see their possessions reappear. They had come to chapel early with the expectation of seeing their headgear strung up in the auditorium; but when no unusual sight met their eyes they began to cluster in little groups in the halls, and to whisper and wag their heads seriously. They had been especially proud of their cranial propensities and must have the n back. Little did they dream that their precious valuables were safe in Leagorian Hall, having been transported their from the Hillside in the "wee hours." Finally just before Dr. Campbell announced the first p-lam, in marched the Sophomore boys decorated with the hats and loooking for all the world like the Juniors on the first Friday in May. After chapel the Freshies hastened across the auditorium to claim their own.

Students Work on Roads

College Closes on "Good Roads Day"

Hillside Girls Furnish Lunches

College Men Prove Their Ability to Do Hard Work

There were no recitations at the college, Wednesday, the majority of the students, and all but one of the faculty members, working with pick and shovels to make "Good Roads Day" a success. Everyone will admit that they did their share of the work.

About two hundred men from New Wilmington worked upon the roads, over half of that number being Westminster students. The High School contributed two squads of nine men each.

The college contingent was divided into squads of six or seven men each, controlled by a foreman. All of the squads were taken to and from their jobs in automobiles. Various comments showed that the farmers were surprised to find that the students were willing and able to work at manual labor. The college men proved their ability, however, if the many compliments received are to be believed. Not a single student quit his job.

One of the most enjoyable features was the lunch served by the ladies of the town and the Hillside girls. According to a competent judge, the committee of Hillside girls brought order out of chaos as far as the distribution of lunches was concerned. It is certain that everyone had more than enough to eat.

Dr. Campbell deserves unlimited credit, not only for his efficient organization of the student contingent, but also for his efforts to make the day a success.

Y. M. C. A. Meeting

The weekly Y. M. C. A. meeting, Tuesday evening was led by Chas. Markle, the subject being, "Past and Present." Short talks were given by Robert M. Russell, Jr., and Dewitt McEchron. Both men emphasized the necessity of looking back over the past to learn lessons from our experience that will help us in living better Christian lives in the future.

A New Instructor

Edward French Hearn, who graduated from Westminster in 1907, has been secured to take the place of Miss Mary Douthett as Instructor in Pianforte next year. Mr. Hearn is an artist and teacher of much ability. He is at present a member of the faculty Fairemont Seminary, Texas.

COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM.

Bishop Berry of Philadelphia is Commencement Orator.

Arrangements have been made to make Commencement this year the biggest affair in the history of the school. The first event on the program is the senior reception, Thursday afternoon, June 10. From that time until June 15, every moment is taken up with one event or another.

In addition to the usual exhibits and recitals, the oratorio, "Hiawatha," the play, "The Man from Home," and the Glee Club concert deserve special mention.

On Saturday afternoon, June 12 Dr. John Brashear of Pittsburgh, will deliver an address at the dedication of the remodeled Science Hal . Bishop Joseph F. Berry of Philadelphia, will address the graduates on Tuesday afternoon.

Many class reunions are being planned, the chairmen of the various class committees being as follows:

1865, Rev. John B. Francis, D. D,
1870, Rev. M. M. Patterson, D. D.
1875, Rev. W. D. Irons, D. D.
1880, Pres. R. M. Russell, D. D.
1882, Rev. J. D. Rankin, D. D.
1883, Rev. W. H. McMurray.
1884, James A. McLaughrey, Esq.
1885, Hon. J. A. VanOrsdell, LL. D.
1890, Prof. James J. McElree.
1893, Prof. Chas. E. Robertson.
1894, Herbert C. Barr, M. D.
1895, Rev. C. D. Fulton, D. D.
1900, Mr. J. E. McCalmont.
1905, Rev. D. Chalmers Fulton.
1910, Mr. Norman C. Thompson.
1912, Rev. Raymond Kistler.

Walter Braham, who has been teaching in Parnasus High School for the last few weeks, came home yesterday evening.

Prof. Shaffer Recovering.

Prof. James M. Shafter, who was operated upon for appendicitis last Saturday afternoon, is reported to be on a fair road to recovery. The crisis is past and his full return to health seems to be a matter of time.

The attack came upon Prof. Shaffer suddenly, for on Friday he met his classes as usual. After the operation his condition was reported to be extremely serious, and much anxiety was felt at the college. There is no longer any imminent danger, however, of disastrous complications.

"TOUR AROUND THE WORLD"

Y. W. C. A Entertainment Proves A Big Success

"The Trip Around the World" was a success even though it did rain. "Tub" Fulton, the expert train dispatcher, started everyone of his trains on time. The first one left at 7:45 p. m., and one continued to leave every fifteen minutes thereafter. The tourists were guided under the leadership of Margaret Murdock, Jean Kerr, Mary Jamieson, Janet McCalmont, George Clark, Dorothy Murray, George Neal, Margaret Noble, David McQuiston and Herbert Jamison.

The Hillside porch made an ideal station, with its signs, baggage and correct weight scales. The first point of interest after leaving Hillside station was Japan. The lawn of Perry Kuhn looked like one of the cherry orchards of Tokio. It was lighted by means of Japanese lanterns, while the porch was decorated with dogwood and oranges. The "eats" were rice and tea.

After leaving Japan Germany was next visited. After the fashion of the Germas, the porch of Mrs. Robertson was lighted by means of oil lanterns and decorated with red and black paper. According to the custom of the country, coffee with coffee-cake was served. During the meal the aids gave a short song feast of German music.

The travelers wishing to see a little of revolution infested country, went to Mexico. Here, under shelter of Dr. Freeman's, porch which was decorated with rugs served a Mexican salad, "Navajo," which surely deserved the name.

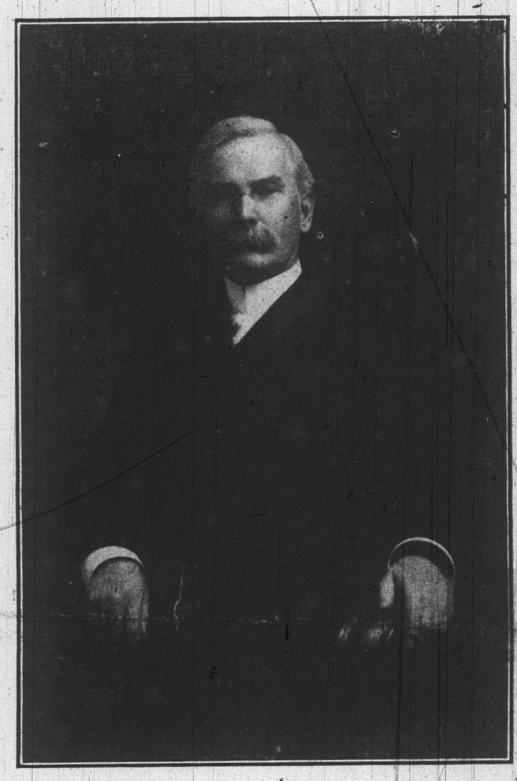

It took the passengers some time to go to Ireland on account of the sea journey. But when they did arrive at the home of Mr. Cleland, the tourists were well supplied with potato chips, and buttermilk. Before leaving every one kissed the "blarney stone."

The last stop was U. S. A. Here the travelers greeted the stars and stripes with open hands and ice cream and cake with open mouths.

DR. R. M. RUSSELL
Whose sermon at New Castle last Sunday created favorable comment

NOT THE LAST WAR.

Dr. R. M. Russell preached in the First M. E Church of New Castle, Sabbath morning, on the theme of the present war in the program of prophesy. His sermon revealed careful study both of the bible and of world conditions, and his remarks were listened to intently by a large audience.

Dr. Russell said in part:

"The old world war that is now raging is not the Armageddon of phrophecy, it is not the last great war. The last great war of the world will be one in which Israel; a reunited nation will figure. At some time in the future Israel will be given national existence, but not until that time will it be possible in the light of prophecy for the last great world war to occur. There will be national jealousy against this restored Israel and a gathering of nations for her destruction, which will constitute the Armageddon of prophecy. We are living in the rule of the Gentiles, but is it nearing the end of that era."

High School Commencement

The High School Commencement will be held in the Second U. P. Church next Thursday evening. Owing to the fact that this is the first commencement since the institution of the four year's course there are but two graduates. Dr. J. O Campbell will deliver the address of the evening.

Daum-Hutchison

The marriage of Miss Austa Hutchison and Rev. Edward A. Daum '12, was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents. Thursday at noon. Rev. R. C. McMinn performed the ceremony, assisted by Dr. J. Alvin Orr of Pittsburgh. Miss Florence Hutchison '11, attended her sister as bridesmaid. The best man was Rev. Raymond Kistler '12, of Pittsburgh.

Rev. Scott to Speak

Rev. Charles E. Scott, who has been engaged in missionary work in China for some time, will deliver an address in the Presbyterian church next Tuesday evening. Owing to the strained conditions of affairs in the Far East today, and the importance of China's position in regard to world problems. Rev. Scott's address can not fail to be timely and interesting.

There never was a tight-wad who wasn't poor.

The Annual Oratorio.

The Oratorio, which is one of the feature events of Commencement week, will be held this year, Monday evening, June 14. The Chorus will render "Hiawatha," an oratorio by Coleridge Taylor, based upon Longfellow's well-known poem. According to Prof. Campbell, the chorus is the best and largest in the history of the music department, and its appearance should be an even greater success than in former years.

As usual, the solo numbers will be cared for by artists of note. Miss Pauline Donnan of the Caria Rosa Opera Company, London, has been secured for the soprano parts. Prof. Campbell is trying to secure Albert Lindquist, who is at present touring with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, for the tenor role. Royal Dadmun, Baritone, one of the most famous of American singers, will complete the trio, if present negotiations prove successful. Mr. Dadmun is now on tour with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

EARNESTNESS is the salt wherewith all effort should be savored

MAY DAY EXERCISES

Will be Held Saturday Evening on the Campus

The May Day evercises will be held next Saturday at 6 p. m. The College Orchestra, assisted by members from the New Castle Symphony Orchestra, will repeat part of the program which they played at their last concert. Miss Mildred Burns will play for the dances, in which 85 girls will take part. The Freshmen will dance "Valse Brillante;" Sophomores, "Parlowa Gavotte;" the Juniors, "The Nightingale;" and the Seniors a Russian Folk Dance—"Cschboga." Girls from all classes will dance three folk dances,—"The Russian Crane Dance," "Picadilla" and "The Vineyard." There will be one special dance, "Moment Musical" After the winding of the May Pole by the Seniors, the last years May Queen, Mary Long, will crown this year's queen, Marie Lytle, who will be assisied by six Maids of Honor,—Martha Vincent, Margaret Murdock, Josephine Keast, Mary Caldwell and Charlotte Logan; by Mary McCune as "Queen of the Year;' and by Master Elbert end Lowell Moses as attendants. The entire program is in charge ot Miss Charlisa Hunter.

First Church Social.

On last Thursday evening the Y. P. C. U. of the First Church held its annual spring social at the church. The affair was carried out along the lines of a sea shore party. The dampness of the evening, however, was about the only thing that resembled the sea shore. The guests were met at the door and each one was given the name of some illustrious person. They were then shown into the office of the Lookout Inn where they registered. A number of games were played, after which lunch was served a la cafeteria. A number of the less daring ones avoided an amber colored liquid which was served in glasses until they were assured that it was nothing stronger than iced tea. One of the features of the evening was the debut of J. W. Hutchinson into society life at Westminster.

MY AUTO' 'TIS OF THEE.

My auto tis of thee, short cut to poverty—of thee I chant. I blew a pile of dough on you two years ago, and now you quite refuse to go, or won't or can't. Through town and countryside, you were my joy and pride; a happy day. I loved thy gaudy hue, thy nice white tires so new, but now your down and out for true, in every way. To thee, old rattle box, came many bumps and knocks; for thee I grieve. Badly thy top is torn, frayed are thy seats and worn; the whooping-cough effects thy horn I do believe. Thy perfume swells the breeze while good folks choke and wheeze, as we pass by. I paid for thee a price 'twould buy a mansion twice, now everybody's yelling "ice"—I wonder why? thy motor has the grippe, thy spark plug has the pip and woe is thine. I too have suffered chills, ague and kindred ills, endeavoring to pay my bills since thou wert mine. Gone is my bank roll now. No more 'twould choke the cow, as once before. Yet if I had the mon, so help me John-amen, I'd buy myself a car again, and speed some more.—Ex.

Schedule for Next Season

The University of Buffalo is the Most Important Addition

Graduate manager Campbell and manager Coulter have announced the 1915 football schedule. There are nine games in all, six abroad and three at home. Hiram and Slippery Rock have been dropped from the varsity program, their placed being taken by University of Buffalo, Waynesburg and Bethany.

The team will open at Penn State on September 25. Last year the locals held the Center County boys to a 13-0 score, and both teams anticipate another hard game. The following week Pitt will be played in Pittsburgh.

The managers were successful in concluding negotiations with the University of Buffalo for a game in Buffalo Octer 9. This is the first contest between the two institutions, although Buffalo has met Allegheny and other Western Western Pennsylvania Colleges. The next week the team will meet W. & J. at Washington.

Waynesburg will be the first team played on the local field. Westminster won the last game played between these institutions without much trouble. Geneva, Thiel and Bethany will be played in the order named.

The season will be closed by a game with Grove City on the home field. For two years the Blue and White have won easy victories, but the Crimson aggregation is preparing to come back, and the game is likely to be close and exciting. The schedule is as follows:

ABROAD

Sept. 25—Penn State, at State College, Pa.
Oct. 2—University of Pittsburgh, at Pittsburgh.
Oct. 9—University of Buffalo, at Buffalo, N. Y.
Oct. 16—Washington & Jefferson at Washington, Pa.
Oct. 30—Geneva, at Beaver Falls, Pa.
Nov. 13—Bethany, at Bethany, W. Va.

AT HOME

Oct. 53—Waynesburg College
Nov. 6—Thiel College
Nov. 20—Grove City College

Trips for the Scrubs

The Scrub team, under the command of Britt, is planning to invade Volant the last day of this month for a double header with the baseball aggregation of that place. The boys expect to come back with a couple of victories to their credit. Stewart is planning a more extensive trip. Dates are being arranged with teams in Oil City and Franklin for June 8 and 9.

UP TO THE MINUTE

"Dr. Cuttem keeps up with all of the latest inovations, doesn't he?"

"Well, I seould say he does; he has even installed a pay-as-you-enter system in his hospital."

The Pitt Meet.

The track team went to Pittsburgh, Saturday, to compete in the University of Pittsburgh Invitation Meet, but did not have a chance to try out against the larger institutions, as the meet was called off on account of rain. The men report that the track was covered with more than an inch of water, so that running was out of the question. The authorities tried to have the meet postponed, but the visiting teams were unable to remain over. The members of the local team were somewhat disappointed, as they felt confident of coming home with a few medals.

Football Prospects For Season of 1915 Are Very Bright

The completion of our football schedule has brot to our minds the prospects of Westminster's eleven on the gridiron during the coming season. As we permit our eyes to run through the ranks of the champion bunch which represented us last fall, we are startled by a number of gaps. Hubbard Stewart, Dan McQuiston and Joe McNaugher melt from the line, and we are compelled to imagine husky scrubs of last year or big, tousel-headed Freshmen whom we have never seen before, advancing to fill up the gaps. As the back field passes before us, our hearts seek refuge in our shoes, for we fail to see "Tus" McLaughrey and Humm. Alas! gone but not forgotten. But in in spite of all these losses, we can, without fear, look forward to a victorious season, for we still have a staunch and firm nucleus about which a splendid team will be developed. Charley McQuiston remains in the middle of the line, flanked by the "gold dust twins," "Miz" Dart and Jim McLaughrey; beyond these two worthy fighters, Stoops and Harold holding down the end positions; on the back field "Ted" Buckley, quarter-back, will again make his sweeping end runs, and "Mike" Wherry, half-back, whirling line plunges. With these men, backed by the scrubs and the new material which will come in, we may, with hard work, expect to go through another championship season.

From the Periscope

"Till" Tallant '14 is planning to bring up a team from Mannington High School to compete in the meet Saturday.

Talk about team work! Jimmy Kerr says the girls go thru their Day Day evolut ons like one man.

Westminster vs. Grove City

The tennis teams will meet the Grove City net aggregation in a return match here next Tuesday afternoon. The match will be played on the courts of the Crescent and Kelly Clubs, Westminster will probably be represented by Braham, Kirkbride, McNaugher and Grundish. The match at Grove City two weeks ago resulted in a tie, and both teams will go to the limit to take this contest. For this reason some fast tennis is anticipated.

Annual Track And Field Meet On Saturday

Saturday Afternoon marks the close of the season of track and field athletics at Westminster. The principle clash of muscle and skill will take place between the men representing Westminster and the visiting team from Car-Tech. There will probably be about twenty-five men representing each institution and the struggle for the deciding points will be close. Tech is by no means a weak antagonist, and our team will find it necessary to exert ourselves to the utmost if they want to make a good showing. Aside from the dual meet between the aforementioned colleges, at least seventeen High Schools will compete in an interschoalistic track and field meet. These include the following: Beaver, Brookfield, Cortland, Grove City, Kinsman, Lisbon, Mannington Monaca, Monongahella City, New Brighton, New Castle, New Wilmington, South Youngstown, East Palestine, Allegheny, McKeesport and Gustavus. A large crowd is expected to view these contests, and also the May Pole dances which take place in the evening.

Chapel Service.

The chapel services Sabbath evening was under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Dr. Thomas F. Cummings spoke on "Mission Work in New York City," telling of the experience of various workers in the slums of that metropolis. Robert M. Russell, Jr., told of Christian work in various colleges. Herbert Jamison led the meeting.

The College Quartet

The members of the Westminster Quartet this summer will be Fulton, Cummings, L. M. Stewart and J. K. Stewart. A series of dates have been arranged in New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania. It is rumored that the quartet is to travel in a Ford.

Lyceum Extension Course

Plans are already on foot to establish a Westminster Lyceum Extension Course consisting of five numbers to be put on in the churches of the Westminster constituency. The talent will be local, as far as possible. Fuller annoucement will be made as soon as definite arrangements have been completed.

Slippery Rock the Winner

Westminster Drops Second Game to the Normal Team

The base ball team threw away another game Tuesday afternoon to the Slippery Rock aggregation by a 6-2 score. The local boys garnered eleven hits against 9 by their opponents, but errors gave the Normal team easy picking Five mishaps were chalked up against the locals.

The one bright spot of the game was the hitting of Forney, who swatted the pill three times for safe hits, one counting for an extra base. The New Castle boy also played an errorless game on the defensive. Don Igo managed to come across with two hits and two runs. Mercer, K. Igo and Cummings were responsible for a two bagger apiece.

Anderson pitched a good game, holding Slippery Rock to 9 hits, and striking out 9 men, but his work was useless while his teammates booted the ball around the bat.

Barclay and McNally starred for Slippery Rock.

From the Periscope

"Bob" Russell, after four gruelling sets, remarked that the tennis court was no place for a truck horse. How much? One hundred ninety eight? Shades of Falstaff!

What has become of the old-fashioned interclass relay race?

Negotiations are under way to arrange a football game between Slippery Rock and the Reserves on October 9. On that day the varsity team plays in Buffalo.

There was just about as much meet in Pittsburgh Saturday as the average Irish policeman eats on Friday.

They say that "Tuss" tackled a rock pile Good Road's Day with the same grin that he wore during the Penn State same. No wonder the geological appearance of the country has changed.

Marie Lytle the May Queen

Bad Weather Keeps Many Away

Good Performance and Great Enthusiasm

While threatening weather kept many people from coming to the May Day exercises, which were held in front of "Old Main," it did not prevent the girls from dancing. The procession left the Hillside at six o'clock, led by Miss Jane Russell and Miss Katherine Bird on horseback, and Masters Lowell and Elbert Moses as pages. The maids of honor, the Misses Margaret Wylie, Margaret Murdock, Mary Caldwell, Josephine Keast, Charlotte Logan and Martha Vincent, preceeded the queen with their quaint polk bonnets and shepard's crooks. The queen, Miss Marie Lytle, carried a bouquet of pink Killarney roses and wore a gown of white point despri lace, with a satin train and a lace veil. Miss Lytle's neice, Miss Margaret Perry and Miss Margaretta Barr were the queen's train bearers.

After the queen's attendants the classes came according to rank; the Seniors in their pink, yellow, blue and green dresses; the Juniors dressed as nightengales; the Sophomores with red, white and blue dresses; and the Freshman in green with morning glory garlands. The procession marched from the Hillside to the queen's throne on the campus. Here the queen, in a bower of pine branches sat on her throne attended by her maids of honor, while the rest of the classes did the grand march. The college orchestra together with several members of the New Castle Symphony furnished the music for the occasion. After the invocation by Dr. R. M. Russell the Freshmen danced the Valse Brilliante; the Sophomores the Parlowa Gavotte and the Juniors The Nightengale. Girls from the Junior, Sophomore and Freshman classes danced the Picadilla Crane Dance and the Vineyard Dance, after which Misses Hunter, Smith and Miller danced the Moment Musical. These girls representing morning, noon and night, perform- most beautiful dance of the The applause did not he dance was repeat-

Sheakley Hollow

The Scene of Bible Glass Picnic

Last Monday afternoon and evening the final scene of the contest between the Bible Classes was enacted in Sheakley Hollow The Boys' Class, which finished goodness knows how many points behind the Girls, gave the long-promised picnic to winners. And everyone present will agree that the boys proved themselves to be good loosers, and that they entertained royally

Of course "Jamie" acted as commander-in-chief, and his endeavors to serve salad without soiling his new wash tie were the delight of the entire party. Now and then "Jamie" was heard to mutter something like "lazy quitters," which remark was taken to refer to a bunch of undegenerates who were picnicing by themselves on the other side of town. But on the whole he seemed to be happy. "Butch" McQuiston proved a worthy second, carrying and eating food with equal zest. It is said that "Butch" liked the ice cream so well that he returned for more about midnight.

When the Holcad reporter looked over the scene of action everyone seemed to be having a mighty good time, except the regular cases, which were not visible. They were probably enjoying themselves to the fullest extent, however, if their stories of good times are to be believed. And it is interesting to note that they came out of their seclusion in time for supper.

Dr. Russell at Pittsburgh

Dr. Russell spent the week in Pittsburgh in the interests of the College. He is endeavoring to insure for the school the most successful commencement in its history. Dr. Russell made several addresses during the week.

Coach Tinkham Has Decided That He Will Leave

Coach Frank L. Tinkham, who has held the position of Physical Director for the last two years, has decided not to take up the position again next year. This decision he has announced to Dr. Russell as final. The exact reasons for the action has not been revealed, but there are persistent rumors of friction between the coaching staff and the athletic management.

Coach Tinkham has been highly successful as a coach, and enjoys the confidence of players, students and alumni. Coming into charge when the school was in an athletic slump, he developed the two best football teams that ever represented the institution. His track and baseball teams have made creditable showing, considering that he had to coach both squads. He enjoys the reputation of being one of the best football coaches in Western Pennsylvania and it will be exceeding difficult to fill his position.

REV. SCOTT LECTURES

At the Presbyterian Church Tuesday Evening

Tuesday evening Rev. C. E. Scott of China delivered an address in the Presbyterian Church. For many years Rev. Scott has been a missionary in Thantung, China, being there associated with Dr. Watson E. Hayes '79, who is one of the greatest figures in the Chinese educational world.

Rev. Scott began his address by showing the importance of China as a coming world power. He sketched the reasons why Japan and Russia were endeavoring to secure as much of the country as possible, saying that the Far East is the center of world problems. By statistics, illustrations and stories Rev. Scott showed his audience the tremendous importance of China's unlimited natural resources and vast population. In this part of his address the missionary revealed a remarkable knowledge of Chinese affairs, and he added to his own observations the opinions of the world's greatest diplomats and publicists.

Rev. Scott addressed the Y. W. C. A. meeting Tuesday avening, also the chapel service Wednesday morning.

Westminster Shares Fund

Part Apportioned To this College

Cleveland Nevt Meeting Place of Assembly

The General Assembly in session at Loveland, Colorado. has voted to apportion about $31,000 to the five denominational colleges,—Cooper, Monmouth, Muskingum, Tarkio and Westminster. This amount is the balance of the educational fund after $6,000 had been provided for the expenses of the board, and after $2,000 each had been given to the Pittsburgh and Xenia seminaries.

Just what Westminster's share in this will be has not yet been decided. The amount given to each school depends upon the number of students in the collegiate department, and other technicalities. A conservative estimate places the share of our college at $6,500. It is probable that the money will not be available for use until next fall.

The Assembly voted to meet next year in Cleveland, Ohio. The income of the Church for the coming year was estimated at $525,000.

It is interesting to note that more than one fourth of the delegates to the General Assembly are former Westminster students.

Y. M. C. A. Meeting

Prof. B. W. Bridgman gave a talk in Y. M. C. A. meeting, Tuesday evening, on the subject, "Science vs Religion." He said that contrary to popular belief the majority of the best scientists are believers in Christianity, thus showing that a thorough study of science does not necessarily produce unbelief.

Charming Porch Party at the Hillside On Last Friday

In honor of their guests the Misses Alice Nuger, Harriett Aiken, Katherine Kenedy and Mary Hunter who were week end visitors at the Hillside the Misses Katherine Bird, Charlisa Hunter, Anna Bone and Dorothy Murray entertained at a charming little porch party last Friday evening. A most enjoyable time was had by everyone present.

The porch was hung with Japanese lanterns and chairs and cushions were placed carelessly about. The affair was very informal and there was much gay talking and laughter—at least until refreshments were served. Only one thing occured to cause undue excitement and that was when one of the Japanese lanterns burned up and created a general stir in one corner by dropping bits of burning paper down on the guests. Clara McClellan effected a deed of daring and heroism by inoculating the balustrade with an umbrella whice she waved rather ineffectually in the air about the burning mass until it went out of it's own accord.

Later on in the evening the crowd repaired to the music room where an impromptu program was rendered. Especially interesting and unique was the clever whistling of several selections by Miss Erma Stoody of Carrolton, Ohio.

"Who succeeded Edward VI?"
"Mary."
"And who followed Mary?"
"Her little lamb."

High School Concert

A very enjoyable concert was given by the local High Schol in the Second U. P. Church Wednesday evening. The Girls' Quartet sang several pleasing numbers and the Boys' Glee Club aroused favorable comment. Roy Beighle revealed more than ordinary ability in his solo. The singers were trained by Prof. Howard of the Departments of Music.

Mrs. Armour Lectures

Monday evening in the Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Mary Harris Armour delivered a very interesting temperance addresss. She emphasized the degenerating influence of alchol upon the human body and especially upon the brain. Mrs. Armour said that the motto "A Saloonless Nation by 1920" is by no means too optimistic, but that it is a definite possibility.

There will be but one more number of the Holcad this school year, to be issued either Monday or Tuesday of Commencement Week. If present plans prove successful, this number will contain all the Commencement news, and will prove more than usually interesting. Look for it!

THE HOLCAD does not often devote its editorial columns to its own affairs, but this week will have to be an exception. If the paper is to be a real success it must have the support of students, faculty and alumni. The students and faculty can help by giving items and news articles to the members of the staff. The alumni can help by sending in interesting notes and letters of criticism. Praise the work of the paper if you can, point out faults if you want to, but, above all, drop us a line to show you are interested. Or better still, when you are back for commencement tell some member of the staff your opinion of the paper. Help us boost!

EDWIN E. MERCER

We owe to Mt. Lebanon, that little, unknown, forsaken hamlet, situated somewhere in the smoky circle of Greater Pittsburgh, one of Westminster's foremost (?) students. Some twenty odd years ago, in that little town, where it is said the sun always shines, one bright morning when the orb of day shown perhaps more brilliantly than usual, its rays illumined, for the first time, the smiling countenance of Edwin E. Mercer, the subject of the present sketch.

During his boyhood days, Ed. was a shining star among the bright youths of his native village, standing head and shoulders above his classmates. While in the grades he showed a marked inclination toward the great national game, and early in his career was the chesty Mawtheson of the "back lots" league of Mt. Lebanon.

Girls never troubled Eddie much when he was a "kid," but shortly after entering the Freshman class of the high school romance claimed him for its own and he became acquainted with a fair-haired maiden, to whom he promptly lost his heart. Dame rumor says that he has never yet recovered it.

During the summer of 1910 Mercer determined to enter Westminster, and so, one morning in the fall of that year, he packed his trunk and boarded a train for New Wilmington. That night he was registered as a second prep, and his college life was started. Edwin's ability as a student and athlete became almost immediately apparent, and in the spring of 1911 he played with the Reserves on the baseball squad. In 1912 he won his letter, on the Varsity team, and he has been a steady and consistent performer every spring since, having been honored this year, with the captaincy of the team. In other lines of athletics his ability is well known. For five years he has been a member of his class basket ball team, and was captain of the fast Freshman aggregation of 1913.

In the class room Edwin also takes high rank. He wades thru the intrinsic formulae of Trignometry and Calculus like a 42 centimeter gun thru a board fence. Especially does he stand out in public speaking. His oratory is such that would pale Patrick Henry's into insignificance.

It would take pages to tell of the doings of this brilliant young man, but our allotted space is already filled, and it is necessary that we hasten to a conclusion.

In summarizing we would say that to such men as Edwin does Westminster owe the stamp of approval that the people have put upon her. An always willing and earnest worker, with a constancy firm as a rock, and with a friendly and cheerful nature, we predict for him a brilliant career.

Dart Stars in Tuesdays Game on the Local Field

Big Back Stop Garners Three Hits Against Theil

Westminster took Thiel's scalp on the local field Tuesday afternoon, the final count being 5 to 2. The team played real baseball, in striking contrast to the wierd exhibitions of past weeks.

"Miz" Dart was the individual star in the slugging line, having three hits, one counting for two bases. The big catcher handled the home station duties like a veteran. Anderson held the visitors to three hits, and managed to hammer out two hits on his own account. Mercer and McCreary fattened their batting averages by a couple of hits apiece. "Ken" Igo brought up the total number of safe bingles to ten, besides fielding his position faultlessly.

GROVE CITY HELD TO A TIE

Tennis Team Plays Another Tie Match

The tennis team played another tie match with the Grove City net aggregation, on the local courts Tuesday afternoon, each team taking three contests. Every one of the matches was close and interesting, and the spectators were treated to some snappy tennis.

Grundish started the ball rolling by defeating Turner of the visiting team in three close sets 6-3, 4-6, 6-4. McNaugher took over Durstine in straight sets 6-4, 9-7. This last set was the best of the afternoon. With the games 5-3 against him, "Joe" made a grandstand finish and nosed out a victory.

Black defeated Braham 6-3, 6-2. Kirkbride put up a hard scrap against Byers, but lost out 6-2, 8-6.

Both of the double matches were exciting. Black and Turner took the longest match of the day from Braham and Kirkbride 6-1, 6-8, 9-7. McNaugher and Grundish kept up their winning streak by defeating Byers and Durstine 7-5, 6-3. The Westminster pair has not lost a match this year, winning all of their contests in straight sets

Westminster Trims Volant

A team of Westminster players took both games of a double header from the Volant Athletics, Monday, the scores being 7-2 and 8-4. The games were slugfests for the locals who obtained 11 hits in one game and 17 in the other. D. Igo managed to get seven hits during the day, while Dart added five to his list. Mercer and Coach Tinkham pitched for Westminster both holding the Volant aggregation to few hits.

The May Day Poem

I have come over mountain, through woodlands whose blossoms were waking,
From the cold, bitter rigor of winter to the life-giving warmth of the spring,
I have brought from the gates of the dawn relief from the heart-break and aching,
From desolate feelings of sadness the dull skies of winter must bring.

Now the proud arch of heaven is azure, the birds in the treetops are singing,
In the forests soft breezes are rustling, in the meadows fair flowers unfold,
While the passionate soul of the earth with life re-created is ringing,
The myriad voices of Nature are thrilling with pleasure untold.

From the caverns of earth I have taken full toll of deep-hidden treasure,
And choicest of pearls I have chosen from the star-smitten depths of the sea
I have taken from meadow and field of the sweet, fragrant blooms without measure,—
The earth and the sea and the heavens have given their offering to me.

I have taken the best of the blossoms, their glorious colors all blending
Like the rose-tinted incense of worship, like the flush that is herald of the day;
I have taken the diamonds and beryls with ineffable glow never ending,
And fashioned a star-silvered circlet,—a crown for the queen of the May.

Westminster Men Are Candidates

FOR PRESIDENT JUDGE

Both W. E. Porter and J. A. McLaughrey are Alumni of this College

Local interest in the election next Tuesday is increased by the fact that in both Lawrence and Mercer Counties an alumnus of this college is a candidate for Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. In this county the candidate is William E. Porter, who graduated in 1889, and in Mercer County James A. McLaughrey, of the class of 1884, is candidate for the position.

Judge Porter has been judge of the Court of Common Pleas of this county for the past eleven years, and during that time has established the reputation of being a just and able jurist. His refusal to grant liquor licenses won him the commendation of every thoughtful person in the county. At the same time he gained the enmity of the liquor interests, and it is as the representative of these interests that Mr. Emery opposes him on Tuesday. Judge Porter is admittedly the "dry" candidate; Mr. Emery represents the "wet" faction, and the election will decide whether or not there are to be open saloons in this county. Judge Porter's experienced and clean record should win for him the support of every thoughtful voter.

Thompson House Party

The inmates of the Thompson House and the Hillside waiters were royally entertained by Clarence Cummings on Fridav night. Music was furnished by the famous Victrola. At a late hour the guests assembled in the dining room where a feed was served. After consuming bushels of sandwiches and gallons of cocoa the crowd broke up, voting the affair one of the most enjoyable of the season.

Alumni

When the auto in which they were going from Hartstown to Pittsburgh was struck by a train near New Castle Rev, D. M. Telford '91 and his wife were killed instantly, and their two children were probably fatally injured.

HON. WILLIAM E. PORTER

Bible Class Meeting

Prof. J. D. Barr has consented to take charge of the Y. M. C. A. Bible Class in the capacity of teacher. On acconut of the preaching services which he holds at Leesburg and Harlansburg he will not promise his services later than the Holiday vacation. The members of the class however appreciate the sacrifice which he is making in their behalf.

On last Sabbath morning the discussion centered around the subject: "A Sixteenth Century Ideal for a Twentieth Century College Man." Prof. Barr took the character "Greatheart" in Bunyan's "Pilgrims Progress" and applied it as a standard for present day College Men. Snch men as Warden Osborne of Sing Sing Prison and Judge Ben. B. Lindsay are modern "Greathearts."

Are you going to the Geneva game?

Another Lecture

Don't forget the date, Nov. 1st, R. P. Hobson gives his lecture, "The Great Destroyer" in the 2nd U. P. Church as the second number on the lecture course. He is one of the most popular men on the American platform today. By coming here it is possible that New Wilmington will have the opportunity of listening to the future president of our country. Coming as he does on the evening before election he should have something exceptionally fine on the subject. Don't miss it.

Alumni

Dr. James A. Vincent, for many years a friend of the College, died suddenly at his residence in East End, Pittsburgh. Dr. Vincent was born in New Wilmington in 1855. He was prominent in political and fraternal circles of Pittsburgh. Dr. Vincent was an uncle of Martha Vincent '16.

Dr. Swift Makes an Address

Speaks to Large Audience in Presbyterian Church Sunday

CREATES INTENSE INTEREST

Hon. Charles F. Swift, D. D., Superintendent of the Pittsburgh District of the Anti-Saloon League, addressed a large audience in the Presbyterian Church Sabbath morning. Dr. Swift spoke of t[h]e [d]uty of the Church in the fight against the saloon. The last slogan of the saloon, he said, was "Keep politics out of the Church." His address was a plea for Christian men to vote as the prayed.

The development of nations is the development of individuals out of darkness into light, said Dr. Swift in part. The Church must lead in this development. It was easy for the Czar to make Russia dry but in a republic we must convert the majority. We pray "thy kingdom come," but we do not vote to bring the kingdom here where we need it,—where men bear their crosses, and fight their battles with sin and temptation. The Church must lead in the movement of reform,—its creed to be of value must be a creed of service.

The saloon does not render any service to mankind nor does it give value received. For this reason the saloon should be abolished. A majority of the voters in this state are church members. If the saloon is permitted to stay, therefore, it is the fault of the Church. Christians should stand at the ballot box and pray the same prayer as they pray in church—"thy kingdom come."

Y. M. C. A. Meeting

The Y. M. C. A. meeting Tuesday was led by William Ashbrook '18, whose subject was "Testing." Special music was furnished by a quartet composed of Mercer, Miller, Minteer and Nelson.

Feminine Consistency

A little drama in two envelopes, wherein the views of Rudyard Ripling and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw collide.

Dear Betty:—

It seems like a thousand years since I've had a scribble from you. This place is the limit. You've heard of Westminster Abbey—well there are a few here that aren't buried yet. We have a sorry collection of musty old fossils in our faculty. They never call the roll in classes—just glare at you and mark zero's after your name. I was at the "who's who" reception last night It was about as interesting as some of Rev. Doolittles sermons on infant damnation. The fellows are so slow that the college janitor has to come around to the class rooms and call out like a conductor—"All out for Dr. Campbell s History class—Sleepers in the rear for froshmen boys!" New Wilmington seems to have been over looked by Rand & McNally. All we can boast of is four churches and a jitney bus.

Gloomily yours,
Mary Ann.

Dear Kid:—

I want you to pack up right away and come out for a week-end visit. There's just the jolliest bunch in our old Dorm you could imagine. And Miss Knott, the Dean is perfectly lovely! I'm sailing along in my classes. The Profs are immense—such a dear, considerate lot. Some of them know quite a number of things, besides having a college education. Most of the boys are terrible cut-ups. They serenade us nearly every night with their merry club songs or victrolas. You'll like the town O. K. It's the prettiest little village in Penna. We have the quaintest, cute little railroad, the best drinking water and sermons east of the Mississippi.

Sir Thomas Moore thou art a back number!

Enthusiastically yours,
Mary Ann

This is the first time Mr. McLaughrey has appeared as candidate for judge. For some years he has been practing law in Sharon and during that time he has established the reputation of being one of the ablest lawyers in this part of the state. In the primaries Mr. McLaughrey secured several hundred votes more than his nearest opponent. The liquor interests are making a strong fight against him, but his supporters hope that his experience as a lawyer of note and his reputation for honesty will win the day.

Westminster is justly proud of the fact that two of her alumni are taking such leading parts in the affairs of their state, especially when both mem are fighting for civic righteousness. Their victory Tuesday is assured if thinking me n of both counties vote with a thought for the welfare of their homes. The open saloon has a demoralizing tendency,—that fact cannot be denied. In passing it is interesting to note that J. Plummer Emery, the opponent of Judge Porter, is a graduate of Geneva.

Freshmen Reporter Attends Pie Social

A bunch of us went out to the Pie Social at Neshannock Falls School House last Friday evening, and believe me we had some time. Most of the bunch were freshmen although a few upperclassmen went along to add dignity to the occasion. Every fellow in the bunch bought a pie, and some bought two or three just to help the good cause along—and to have more girls to pick from. I paid $2.25 for my pie, and it belonged to a married lady about forty-seven years old. When I saw her I said "Goodnight, nurse," and ran for the door. Kipling was right when he said that a pumpkin pie is a pumpkin pie, but its owner may be a lemon. Anyway, there was no use courting disaster,—she had a heavyweight husband with fighting blood in his eye. All of us had a good time, though, especially when it came to eating pies. I ate three and one half,—besides eighteen sandwiches, seven cups of coffee and forty-three doughnuts.

Neshannock Party

The Neshannocks held their club party Saturday evening at the club house, with the preliminaries in the way of a chicken dinner at the hotel, where plates were laid for twenty eight. The music of a victrola added much to the entertainment. It is needless to add that the English department seemed very much pleased with the conduct and social ability of the Freshmen and sub-freshmen who made their debut into Westminster society.

On Life's Gridiron

At first I tried the trick plays out—
The road to Easy Meat;
But left end Failure threw me
With a loss of forty feet;
And when I swung out for a run
Around the rival line,
Left tackle Disappointment
Did a tango on my spine.

At last, with Fame's goal far away,
Bereft of every bluff,
I grabbed the Ball of Fate once more
And canned the fancy stuff;
And with a toe hold in the sod
I pointed at some guard,
And started up the field again
To make it yard by yard.

I haven't made a touchdown yet
Or scored a winning goal;
But I have had a corking time
And found a cheerful soul;
And while I may not meet the cheer
Which sounds the victors fame,
No bloke can ever take from me
The pleasure of the game.

THE GAME AT Geneva Saturday will be the hardest of the year, and every friend of Westminster is urged to be present to help the team as much as possible. Students and faculty members should take advantage of the special train. Alumni living near Pittsburgh will find good train service to Beaver Falls, and should come out to renew their youth by watching another Westminster victory.

THERE IS NO ROOM in any college or university for intoxicating liquor in any shape or form. The detrimental effect of even moderate drinking upon the physical and mental activities of students has been established beyond a doubt. Another step in advance was taken last summer when the Associated College Newspaper Publishers, meeting in New York City, voted unanimously to bar all liquor advertisements from their columns. The Association includes thirty-nine college papers, for the most part publications of the larger institutions. Most of these papers are merely making public a policy that they have had in force for some years. Few student publications will publish liquor advertisements,—such ads are neither good morals nor good business. Such united action, however, shows the trend of sentiment in our colleges. And, as one of the metropolitan papers suggested, these college men are likely to carry these same ideas into the business world, especially to the counting rooms and editorial chairs of the nations newspapers.

THERE ARE MANY arguments in favor of woman suffrage, and very few against it. Most of the reasons advanced why women should not vote are repetitions and variations of the old ideas that women's place is in the home and that the majority of women do not want the ballot. Of course the chief interest of women is centered in their homes, but today the cleanliness and health of the individual household depends largely upon the municipal government, which has charge of the water supply, sanitation, and sewerage disposal. A woman should have a vote in order to effectually protect her home along such lines. Moreover, the great conventions and parades held recently show the interest of wemen in the movement. But the greatest argument in favor of woman suffrage is that the liquor interests are opposed to it. Friends of the saloon realize that women suffrage would add thousands of votes to the prohibition cause and few to their own. Woman suffrage is no panacea for all ills, but women generally are opposed to the saloon, the greatest wastrel force in the country at the present time. Woman suffrage and temperance are linked inseparably together.

W. Everett Baker, traveling secretary of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association was in College Friday in the interests of the Association. Mr. Baker held interviews with many of the students trying to arouse local interest in the national oratorical contest and other activities of his association.

I WANT A HUSBAND

He must be around thirty-seven, —the age when a man who has run about a good bit becomes bored with women and prefers the companionship of an intelligent dog.—

He must not write me sonnets.—

He must not look like a Greek god.—

He must never call me "svelte," "lissome," "lithe," "mysterious," "exotic," "fragrant," "a panther," "a serpent." "a gardenia"; he must call me "old dear."—

All the very prettiest women must flirt with him, and make me feel proud.—

He must make love gracefully, no divine madness, no wild frenzies. It must be dolce, piano, cantabile, a bit of vivace, a flavoring of con brio, but no fortissimo, no con fuoco, no crashing crescendo.

He must have no talent, only a tinge of genius. He must be a just-missed, an almost-was a "Raphael without hands."—

He must never say, "You are the inspiration which will lead me to great things," or "Such is your power that you hold my destiny in the hollow of your little hand."

He must prefer beer to champagne, Heine to Goethe, Fremstad to Farrar, a tiny Tanagra figure to the Venus of Melos, Andreyeff to Galsworthy, a pretty cabaret girl to a brilliant suffragette and a pretty suffragette to a stodgy anti, the first act of "Die Walkure" to the second act of 'Tristian," Schnitzler to Hauptmann, Beethoven's roars to Tschaikowsky's wails, pussy willow taffeta lingerie to the laciest batiste, "Der Rosenkavalier" to "Madam Butterfly," Monet to Matisse, Irving Berlin to Ethelbert Nevin, Pater's descrip- of the Mona Lisa to the Mona Lisa herself, a few narcissi in a Della Robbia jar to a garden full of roses, my fetching frocks to my beautiful soul,—

I want a husband!

MYSELF AND ME

I'm the best pal that I ever had,
I like to be with me;
I like to sit and tell myself
Things confidentially.

I often sit, and ask me
If I shouldn't or I should,
And find that my advice to me
Is always pretty good.

I never got acquainted with Myself till here of late;
And I find myself a bully chum
I treat me simply great.

I talk with me and walk with me
And show me right and wrong,
I never knew how well myself
And me could get along.

I never try to cheat me
I'm as truthful as can be
No matter what may come or go
I'm on the square with me.

It's great to know yourself and have
A pal that's all your own
To be such company for yourself
You're never left alone.

I've made a study of myself,
Compared me with the lot
And I've finally concluded
I'm the best friend that I've got.

Just get together with yourself,
And trust yourself with you
And you'll be surprised how well yourself
Will like you if you do.—J. J. W.

EVENING

I leaned against the rude snake fence. Before me the white, dusty road curved onward until it lost itself in the purple haze. On the other side of the road the fields stretched away to the dark clump of hazel and beech that grew beside the brook. The air was heavy with he scent of the red clover and pink thistlebloom that rioted beside the fence. I could hear the chirping of the crickets in the meadow and the booming of the frogs in the distant swamp. The sun sank slowly behind the tops of the the pine and spruce on the faraway ridges, and the twilight deepened into night. The fleecy clouds changed from white to purple, then faded into the darkening sky. One by one the stars appeared, slowly at first and then more rapidly until the heavens sparkled with innumerable tiny lights. In the east the heavens grew brighter. The brilliancy of the stars was dimmed. A bright gleam illuminated the tops of the distant trees. Then ridge and wood and meadow were silvered by the wonderful splendor of the rising moon.

THE STUDENT VOTE

It is a very decided compliment the college students of the nation that the liquor interests seem to fear their participation in public life and repeatedly try to have them deprived of all chance to vote. Year after year, student voters in college towns have been challenged by the wet interests and often have been haled into court to prove their right to the ballot. So continuously have the courts upheld the rights of the students that finally their opponents appealed to the legislatures and in several states have tried to have laws passed disfranchising students or putting such rigid restrictions on their votes as practically to shut them out from its exercise. Thus in Minnesota and Wisconsin the last legislatures were appealed to but failed to respond. And in Ohio, where the Finnefrock legislation has almost debarred students from any participation in public life, this last year saw the repeal of this legislation and the granting of the power of the vote to many students. The action of the liquor men ought to be a constant challenge to college students to show that these liquor men were right in fearing their educated civil righteousness.—Intercollegiate Statesman.

Alcohol and the Athlete

BY IRVING FISHER, PROFESSOR OF POLITICAL ECONONY, YALE UNIVERSITY.

That alcohol increases fatigue is now commonly recognized by athletes. Alcohol gives no increase of muscular power. It is not what we can properly call a stimulant, but a depressant. It is apparently a stimulant, because it puts to sleep the nerves that indicate fatigue, so that the person thinks himself relieved of fatigue. What it does is to make one unconscious of his fatigue. Various kinds of tests and exercises have proved that alcohol is a decided hinderance to muscular or athletic power.

Financially, a young man is a distinct loser if he indulges in the use of alcohol. He loses money, the power to earn money and the power to keep employment worth while.

If personal hygiene is a duty, it is the duty of every man to recognize the danger from alcohol to himself and to society. Instead of copying the habits of others, he may consider the responsibility of causing others to copy his. Today this wiil require very little courage. For so far has the anti-alcohol movement in the colleges proceded that a man who frankly opposes its use is more respected than the man who condones it.

Well, why don't you come in? You need some new Furnishings, and a new suit would'nt hurt any. I've got 'em to sell!

Special Train to Geneva

Every Student and Faculty Member Should Plan to go Saturday

SHOW LOYALTY TO YOUR SCHOOL

Prof. W. W. Campbell has made arrangements with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company whereby a special train will run from New Wilmington to Beaver Falls next Saturday, for the accomodation of students, faculty members, and townspeople who want to see the Westminster-Geneva game. This will be the best game of the year. Geneva defeated Muskingum last week by a 36 0 score, and is looking forward to another victory Fvery student should accompany the team in order to encourage the players.

There will be several mass meetings this week as Cheerleader Kerr is determined to get a bunch together that will make more noise than Geneva. Further announcements concerning the trip will be made at these meetings.

The train will leave New Wilmington at 12:15, arriving in Beaver Falls about two o'clock. Returning, the train will leave immediately after the game, and will arrive here at 6:30 p. m. The total expense, including game and carfare, will be about $1.75.

Coaches Parks and McLaughrey, Captain McQuiston and several members of the team motored to Beaver Falls last Saturday to see the Geneva-Muskingum game.

A Joke That is not a Joke

A saloon keeper said to an old friend, "Well, I see you have been up to the tabernacle and given Billy Sunday your last nickle and now you've got to walk home."

FOOTBALL NOTES

Thiel defeated St. Bonaventure 27-0 Saturday afrernoon.

Bethany beat Franklin College 20 to 6. "Bob" Strathearn was the individual star.

There were two big upsets Saturday, one at Cambridge where Cornell defeated Harvard 10-0, and the other at Ann Arbor where the Aggies swamped Michigan 24 to 0.

Pitt had a harder time than was expected at Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania eleven holding Warner's aggregation to a 14-7 score. Jimmy De Hart was the individual star of the game.

West Virginia added to her list of unsportsmanlike tactics Saturday when she withdrew her team from the held when a Washington and Lee victory seemed inevitable. There was no excuse whatever for the action—just a case of quitting.

Carnegie Tech scored another big victory Saturday, defeating Grove City 60 to 6. The plaid team outplayed their opponents in every department of the game, "Sunny" Kesner revealing a varied attack. Grove City's only score came as a result of a forward pass.

Washington and Jefferson, by reason of the 16-7 victory over Yale Saturday, enjoys the enviable distinction of being the only small college team that has ever defeated Yale two years in succession. Yale was completely outclassed Saturday, and did not have a chance to win. The feature of the game was W. & J's forward pass, which seemed to bewilder the big Blue eleven. In all W. & J. attempted 40 forward passes and of these 23 were successful.

Sammy the Simp remarks, "I don't think my wife should have the right to vote because I have no wife.—Puck.

An anti-suffragist is one who believes that a woman who cooks a fine beef stew is ipso facto not so well fitted to cast the ballot as the restaurant chef who cooks a bad beef stew.—Puck.

The Game Is Canceled

Wapnesburg Calls off Last Saturdays Game Here

Waynesburg College canceled the game scheduled for last Saturday at the last moment and left Westminster without a contest. Director Campbell tried to arrange a game with the University of Buffalo, but the news of the cancellation came too late to make arrangements with that institution.

Waynesburg's eleven has not shown much form this season, and the locals expected to run up a big score. It was probably to avoid an overwhelming defeat that the Waynesburg aggregation cancelled, although the message to the local authorities stated that the team was demoralized by injuries.

As a result of the cancellation Saturday the local team was given a rest, but this week Coaches Parks and McLaughrey have been driving the team hard in preparation for the Geneva game. They have developed some good team work, and expect to reveal an assortment of snappy plays Saturday.

High School Wins

New Wilmington High had an easy time walloping West Middlesex Saturday on College Field by an 83 to 6 score. The visiting aggregation made but one first down, and were helpless against the attacks of the locals. Their lone touchdown came in the last quarter, when Burns intercepted a forward pass, and ran forty yards for a score Most of the locals' touchdowns resulted from forward passes. Lineup:

Physical Training Of the Chinese

Letter From Coach Tinkham Telling of His Trip Across the Pacific

THE PRESSING NEED OF ATHLETICS IN CHINA

This year the Holcad has been especially fortunate in securing letters from alumni and friends who are engaged in work in foreign countries. We are glad to print the following letter from Frank Tinkham, for two years director of athletics at the College, who is at present in charge of the physical training of the students at three government school in Foo Chow, China.—The Editor.

I reached this particular part of the Chinese Empire, or rather Republic—altho it is Republic only in name—last week, on Tuesday, September 21st, after somewhat over a month on the way. I left home August 16th sailing from Frisco the 21st. I spent two days in Frisco, a half day at Honolulu, four days in Japan, and four days in Shang Hai. Yes, I got seasick, but not until after we left Honolulu. We met no storms of any kind, and our Captain declared it to be the calmest crossing in his experience. All of which was very encouraging, but failed to quiet a turbulent inside and a funny feeling in my head. By the time I reached Japan I was brought to a state of firm resolution—sworn to before witnesses—that my homeward journey would be by land to the farthest point in Europe, for I hope to return that way, via the Siberian railroad fron Pekin, and thus complete the circuit of this little old world in which we live.

I am still in athletics, trying to teach baseball, soccer football, basketball, volley ball, tennis running, jumping, etc., as well as drills in calisthenics to the students of three government schools here in Foo Chow. And, if you could only see the little concave chests, narrow shoulders, pipe stem limbs, you would realize just how much they need that very thing.

I began my work last Monday, and of course, this week, there have been many inconveniences to buck up against. They have no athletic material to speak of. A football or two, a few small bats and gloves, and yet I have been able to find out that they are very bright, and quick to learn.

I hope Andy and Tuss are starting off well. The boys will be at Pitt today. I wish I could see them play. Give them my best and tell them I'm pulling for them every Saturday. If you can get them I certainly would appreciate accounts of the games.

Joint Meeting

There was a joint meeting of the Christian Associations in Philo Hall yesterday evening. Miss Margaret Wilson a missionary to India, made an interesting and earnest address. Miss Wilson also spoke in Chapel Tuesday morning.

Husking Bee

An old fashioned husking bee was held yesterday evening in the gymnasium by the Christian Unions of the two United Presbyterian Churches. After all the corn was husked the guests amused themselves by playing various games. Later refreshments were served.

An Important Change

At the faculty meeting this afternoon the matter of doing away with the sub-freshmen year will be discused. Formerly it was necessary for graduates of the small high schools to make up work before entering the regular college classes. At present, however, most high schools have four year courses, thus making a sub-freshman year at college unnecessary.

MUSIC RECITAL THURSDAY EVENING

Charles Washburn Appears in Chapel

The fourth recital of the Department of Music was presented in Chapel Thursday evening by Mr. Charles Washburn, baritone. Mr. Washburm proved a delightful entertainer. While he has a splendid baritone voice he excels as an interpreter. His interpretations of southern negro songs won favor. Mr. Washburn's rendition of Sidney Horner's "Requirem" was excellent. Prof. Edward Hearne acted as accompanist.

A NEW IDEA

The central theme of the mid-year commencement at Butler High School is "Some Western Pennsylvania Colleges." Westminster will be discussed by Isadore Breier.

PROF. HEARN ENTERTAINS

Prof. Edward French Hearn entertained at dinner at the Hotel Wednesday evening in honor of Mr. Charles Washburn. The guests included Prof. Campbell, Mrs. Campbell, Miss Yantis, and Miss Mercer.

John Spargo of New York, author and orator, addressed the Socialist Study Club of the University of Pittsburgh last Monday.

Big Mass Meeting Friday

Girls Lead Best Meeting of the Year, Inspiring Enthusiasm

COEDS REVEAL MUCH ABILITY IN THIS LINE

The best mass meeting of the year was held in Chapel Friday evening with the Hillside girls in charge. The coeds revealed much ability in contriving original stunts to raise enthusiasm. Dorothy Murray and Julia Carnes acted as cheerleaders.

After a preliminary "Ki-yi-blue" the "varsity team" (composed of the sisters and sweethearts of the regulars) marched into the room. The players were accompanied by Vera Moy as Dr. Smyser and by Miss MacLaggan in the guise of a Red Cross Nurse. Most of the players bore evidences of her ability to bind up wounds.

Coaches Parks and McLaughrey gave short addresses, then the leaders called for Captain McQuiston. "Buch" bravely rose to his feet, but before he could move his sister marched to the platform and made a rousing speech. In part she said that the players were "hep" to themselves and would give Thiel the worst beating "in many moons."

Afterwards speeches were delivered by Vera Toy as Dr. Smyser, Agnes Burton as Buckley, Marie Lytle as Wherry, and Martho Vincent as little Tim Holland. Miss Sankey presented a splendid impersonation of "Miz" Dart.

The closing number was an exciting relay race between Westminster and Thiel, and of course the Westminster team won. The girls on the other side were probably too true to the Blue and White to work very had.

Music for the occasion was rendered by the famous Third Floor String Orchestra, each appearance of which was greeted with tumultuous applause.

TO THE JUNIORS

Reprinted from the Holcad of November 2, 1885. It is one of the many articles that have appeared making sport of Junior Orations.

As the Juniors are busily engaged in preparing their orations, perhaps a little advice will not be amiss. First—Don't tell us how civilization traveled from Egypt to Greece, from Greece to Rome, from Rome to Germany, from Germany to England, and from England across the turbid, rolling billows of the stormy Atlantic to the New World.

Don't call back the sad scenes of the crusades. Let the bones of those noble martyrs rest and bleech in peace. Let your aspirations rise higher than to keep up the "rattling of dry bones" in our ears.

Don't heap ignominy and shame upon the poor Mormons. Of course, Mormonism is a disgrace to our nation, but you do not need make our days a burden on their account, especially when they are minding their own business in the great mountain fastnesses of Utah. Consider the trials of a Mormon husband and you will see that Mormon life is not all happiness. If your wife had been cruelly torn from the weeping family by a Mormon outlaw, you might justly perhaps, indulge in the hideous pratices of tearing your hair and stamping your feet. Job cursed his day, and if you don't want us to curse the night on which you speak you had better let the Mormon down easy. Remember, also that the Mormons would have nothing to do with a man of your capacity.

Don't harangue us on intemperance, we have been on your side of the question for the last fifteen years, and besides, we have heard Gough, Finch, Bain and St. John on the subject and now to be compelled to listen to you for half an hour would, doubtless, be very distressing.

Don't nail Luther's thesis to the church door at Wurtumberg, Try Spaulding's glue once.

Don't tell us what grand men our pilgrim fathers were. You had better talk about folks that have a chance to talk back. True they may not have had the glorious advantages of an education, but we don't doubt that they acted decently under very trying circumstances.

Don't tell us about corruption in politics. We know that the returns from Ohio have been tampered with time and again, but the other fellow can shuffle postal cards just as well as you can.

Don't praise the beauties of nature. All of us know the place where the rag-weed flourishes, and the crows warble forth their sweetest songs of praise, and flowers give forth delightful fragrance gently wafted by balmy breezes to cheer the children of sorrow. We all have been in the country and have learned enough about it to know that plowing is done in the spring; that hay seed is found in the farmers hair, and apples are gathered in the fall—by the neighbors boys.

Don't tell us about the formation of character. Are you sure your own has been well taken care of? Perhaps closer attention to mortality might benefit this community, but if you do intend being a missionary, please don't mistake us for heathens.

Don't forget to insist upon the improvement of the spare moments. From the dawn of our existence we have been as prone to forget this advice as the sparks are to fly upward.

Don't tell us about the shackels that were stricken from the limbs of the four million slaves. Please let them lie where they fell. It is too late now to think of pounding them into pruning hooks.

Don't tell about Cromwell or the French Revolution, or about those noble men and women from creation's dawn up to the present. You evidently have overlooked the fact that Ayer's Sarsaparilla cures all diseases and promotes civilization and reform.

Don't forget to lay your hand on your heart and trill your r's. The small boy regards this part with wonder and glee, taking it as a sign that you will get through all right, and the music will start up soon.

Don't forget to throw out some leaders for the Faculty. Some point as to how Euclid elaborated Geometry; or as to the labors of Darwin, Humboldt and J. Stanley Grimes may bring tears, to eyes hitherto dry.

Don't let us escape without a few remarks on the beauties of literature. You should remember that poetical quotations are very impressive and that a reference to the "Garden of Eden" will waken enthusiasm in any town of ordinary intelligence west of the Alleghenies.

Don't tell us about down trodden Ireland, or in war Soudan. We know it is all England's fault.

Don't saw the air, but rather make round sweeping gestures with both hands, and if it needs emphasis bring down your heel.

Don't feel bad if your oratorical powers, when you rise, take the wings of the morning and fly to the utmost parts of the earth.

Don't stir up the people by introducing new ideas. It is well to remember that St. Paul, and St. Peter and several of the other of the saints were put in the stock for stirring up seditions among the populace. Try to keep from raising an insurrection.

Don't forget to tell us of "our departed chieftain," and call back to our minds the noble old philosophers, Plato and Socrates.

Don't bring down reproach on the Pyramids because they have been standing still for 3000 years. The Sphynx has a prettier face than you will have at the same age.

Don't "roll up the heavens like a scroll" and then shove the scroll into the "Gibralter of the ages."

Don't try to disgrace Mr. Robert Ingersoll. He was probably once as popular as you are now.

Don't allow yourself to betray your fiendish anger when you find that you have not been elected as a contestant. Remember that the Faculty did it and thus be reconciled. Save your wrath for the great war which is near at hand between the Catholics, beer-swillers, political "repeaters," mugwumps and Mormons.

Sunrise

Everything is so quiet. There is no sound save a confused, murmurous humming. the rumble of distant traffic, perhaps, or more likely the pounding of blood thru my arteries. For a long time I have been sitting at my table trying to write some letters to the folks at home, but I cannot connect my thoughts. Home seems infinitely distant and remote. My world is limited by the grey walls of my cell—and by sunrise.

To be shot at sunrise! I did not realize yesterday what it meant when the officer read the sentence. All through the trial I seemed to be in a sort of haze, far less interested in the rigid formalities of the military court than in the jagged scar on the officer's cheek. Often I found myself wondering whether he had received the scar in battle or in a university duel. And even while the sentence was being pronounced I could not keep my eves from the scar, which seemed to contract painfully with each movement of the mouth. To be shot at sunrise!

How still everything is. I am filled with an almost uncontrollable desire to run about, to shout aloud. Doubtless I should be writing home or feading my Testament, but my thoughts are fluttering about like toungues of fire. What are home and Testament to me who am no longer of this world? At sunrise they will lead me from the cell, place me against a stone wall some where, and then a file of soldiers will shoot at me just as if I was a beast.

Not that I blame them. They are merely doing their duty. But duty seems a little and trivial thing to me tonight. The men who were with me in the trenches fondly told me they were fighting for their King and Country, that they were doing their duty. But it was not duty that sent them into the ranks. It was the mad lust for fight, the frenzy of martial music, or the fear of the sneers of the women at home. To them duty is nothing more than an empty name. Perhaps those who are to shoot me think differently. The guard was talking to me this afternoon, out of pity, I suppose, and he told me his dreams for his country. He and his comrades have the cause of their Fatherland at heart, and their greatest philosophers tell them that a good war hallows every cause. But to me duty and patriotism are as nothing. At sunrise I am to be shot like a hunted beast.

I remember the evening I enlisted. There was a big meeting in Trafalgar Square. For over an hour speakers addressed the unmoved sullen crowd, appealing, arguing, threatening without avail. Then a band halted nearby, the leader waved his hand, and the strains of "Tipperary" drowned the voice of the speaker. Unconciously the crowd began to keep time. One and another began to sing the refrain until all of us were shouting as loud as we could. The strain was broken. An old sergant, rising to appeal for volunteers, was greeted by a thunder of cheers. When the crowd dispersed I was one of seventy-four who had volunteered to serve King and Country. The music, glamour, and cheers were with us during the weeks in the training camp and followed us out into the harbor the foggy morning we embarked for somewhere in Flanders.

But what have I to do with cheers? I am to be shot at sunrise, because I was a spy and commited the crime of being caught. The colors and motions and sounds of the world have resolved themselves into a vague, murmurous humming. Doubtless it is merely the pounding of blood through my arteries. My world is limited by gray walls—and by sunrise.

I am not afraid of the future. Annihilation or immortality,—I do not know, nor do I care very much. Annihilation would mean nothing ness, and nothingness could not be dreadful. And an eternity of existence is so vague that it ceases to be important besides the tremenduous fact that in a few hours they will stand me up against a wall and shoot at me as if I were a beast.

Once when I was very small I saw the body of a man who had been killed by a truck. Since then in the trenches I witnessed hundreds of death, but a wholesale killing did not arouse the feeling of dread that gripped me when I saw the still, crumpled form lying in the dirty street, with a smear of sticky red blood oozing to the curb. My heart seemed to leap from its place leaving a terrible feeling of emptiness. The sensation comes over me as I write,—just as if somebody struck my heart a sharp blow from below. I wonder if my body will crumble on the ground, with sticky, bright-red blood oozing from the bullet holes.

I hope one of the bullets smashes through my brain. Otherwise

THE WORTH OF AN individual is not to be measured by negative virtues. Of course abstinence from all that is evil is to be praised, but such abstinence in itself is not enough. It is nothing more than a begining, and if practised exclusively will lead to the emaciation of the soul. To abstinence must be added the active, positive virtues; which are, after all, by far the most important. The worth of an individual is measured by willingness to serve. Service of one sort or another should be the keynote of every life.

THE MATTER OF REQUIRING all Juniors to deliver orations has again been brought to our attention. At some other time the Holcad will try to present the various arguments for and against the custom. At present suffice it to say that there is a need for a change of some sort. The orations, as conducted at present, are proving of but little benefit to the students. Either the orations should be made optional with each member of the class, or a choice of some sort between an essay and an oration should be given.

EVERY STUDENT SHOULD read the article on intercollegiate athletics in a recent number of the Atlantic Monthly. The author in a very able manner points out the faults in our present system of athletic competition. One of the worst of these faults, for it strikes at the original existence of athletics, is the habit of devoting all the attention of coaches and trainers to the development of a very small squad, leaving most of the students to get exercise as best they can. In a small college this can be remedied more easily than in a large university. In addition to the varsity teams which, of course, should receive the best training possible, there should be interclass contests in charge of competent supervisors. Then there should be gymnasium classes of some kind, compulsory for underclassmen and optional for others. Every student should have the advantage of exercise under a competent instructor.

From the Periscope

Man's inhumanity to man enables countless thousands to ride in automobiles.

Education has been defined as the process of making over blissful ignorance into inquisitive ignorance.

When a girl is truly in love the size of the stone in her engagement ring is a matter of absolute indifference.

If all men loved foreigners as they love themselves, there would be no patriotism; but then, we wouldn't need it.

When a drama is called simple and wholesome you may be sure that the characters are a set of benevolent ignoramuses.

DR. KIRKBRIDE SPEAKS

Dr. S. A. Kirkbride of the Presbyterian Church preached in Chapel Sabbath evening. He said that while it is hard to practice true Christianity, yet a life of unbelief is harder still. A life of unblief forfeits many things that are desirable. Judas, for example gained his thirty pieces of silver but lost Christ.

Sunrise

my heart will stop beating and my lungs cease working, but I will feel until the blood in my skull becomes vitiated. It is not death that I feel,—it is the last flickering seconds of life. What will I feel as the bullets smash into my body? What will I feel as I lie on the ground with the sticky, red blood oozing forth? I hope one bullet crashes through my brain.

Everything is so still, except for that confused, murmurous humming,—the pounding of blood thru my arteries. I ought to be writing home or reading my Testament. But home and Testament mean nothing to me now. I am to be shot at sunrise!

ALUMNI NOTES

J. A. McLaughrey '84 was in town Sabbath.

Don't forget to give that news item to one of our reporters.

Raymond Kirkbride '13 spent the week end with his parents in town.

Norman Igo '09 is coaching the McKeesport High School eleven which defeated Johnstown Saturday.

Kathryn Barr '15 writes that the new Vocational School at Hickory, Pa., will be dedicated November 10.

J. G. Berry '87 is living in Boise, Idaho, where he is engaged in the business of raising thoroughbred sheep for the market.

The marriage of Miss Ruth Gladys Bridges and Arthur Maurice Tweedie '04 took place in Los Angeles on October 23.

A letter has been received from "Bob" Strathearn ex '17 in which he states that Bethany expects to give the locals an awful beating.

D. H. McQuiston, '15 was a visitor at the College Sabbath. At present "Dan" is teaching Science and Civics in Uniontown High.

A card from Mabel Russel recently tells that she is at Vancouver, B. C., traveling with her grandparents and on the way to both fairs.

Ney McNinn and Courtney Wilson mortored—on a motorcycle—to Slippery Rock, where they spent Sabbath at the home of the former.

Please send in as many alumni items as possible. That is the only wsy for us to secure news for this page. There must be cooperation.

Remember the Grove City game on the Saturday before Thanksgiving. As many Alumui as possible should come back to help the team win the contest.

John G. McKay '07 and G. Edgar Turner announce the formation of a partnership for the general practice of law under the firm name of McKay and Turner with offices at 502 American Central Life Building, Indianapolis.

Helen Martin '12 is on her way to Cairo, her last letter being written from Naples. Mr. and Mrs. Brainard Jamison were detained in Gibralter for two weeks on account of some technicalities in regard to passports.

The football game between Uniontown High and Mt. Pleasant next Saturday is of peculiar interest. The first named team is in charge of H. L. Cleland '13 and Joseph McNaugher '15 is coaching the Mt. Pleasant aggregation, and it is probable that both teams will use some of same Westminster formations.

Christian Association NOTES

Schnable, Braham, Murray and Jamison went to Fay Sabbath evening to aid in the reorganization of a Young People's Society.

Owen Shaffer will have charge of the Y. M. C. A. meeting at the High School Thursday, the subject being "First Things First."

At the Bible Class meeting Sabbath morning Prof. Barr spoke on the subject "The Pestilence That Walketh in Darkness." He spoke of the evils of gambling, especially in relation to students. Murray and McClurg brought reports from the Sabbath School convention. McLaughrey sang a solo, accompanied at the piano by Wallace.

The New Wilmington district held its annual Sabbath School convention in the M. E. Church of Volant on Friday, Nov. 5th. The Bible Classes of Westminster were represented by Margaret Noble and Cherry Moffat from the young ladies, and Basil Murray and Ralph McClurg from the young men's. Herbert Jamison in the evening session gave a very interesting and able address on the subject, "The Relation of the Teacher to his Class." The meeting as a whole was characterized by keen earnestness and interestedness for the promotion of God's Kingdom through Sunday School work.

ARGUMENT—It's the most expressive word in the English language. You are dressing in the locker-room of your favorites gymnasium and on either side of you--like birds calling to each other in the night—rise two presumably human voices.

FIRST VOICE: How is the grub where you are?

SECOND VOICE; All right.

FIRST (rising inflection): Yeah?

SECOND (settling the matter): Yeah. (Pause.)

SECOND: How's grub where you are?

FIRST: Rotten.

SECOND (inquiringly): Yeah?

FIRST (unwaveringly): Yeah. (Pause.)

FIRST: Johnson eatin' at your place yet?

SECOND: Naw, he's gone.

FIRST (with scientific desire for accuracy): Yeah?

SECOND (without hesitation but regretfully): Yeah. (Pause.)

SECOND: He was a good guy.

FIRST: Who?

SECOND: Johnson.

FIRST (pleased if the information is correct): Yeah?

SECOND: (with reminiscent admiration): Yeah. (Pause.)

FIRST: How's everything coming?

SECOND: All right.

FIRST (courteously polite): Yeah?

SECOND (suggesting that it's been a hard struggle but he is still in the ring): Yeah. (Pause.)

SECOND: How's everything coming with you?

FIRST: All right.

SECOND (patronizingly): Yeah?

FIRST (without compromise): Yeah. (Driving the point home as he starts up the stairs) Yeah. (Meditatively at the top of stairs) Yeah. (Reassuring himself as his voice dies away in the distance) Yeah.—Puck

A Footnote for Critics

For humility and poverty, in themselves, the world has little liking and less respect. In the folk-lore of all races, despite the sentimentalization of abasement for dramatic effect. it is always power and granduer that count in the end. The whole point of the story of Cinderella, the most widely and constantly charming of all stories, is that the Fairy Prince lifts Cinderella above her cruel sisters and stepmother, and so enables her to lord it over them. The same idea underlies practically all other folk-stories: the essence of each of them lies in the ultimate triumph and exaltation of its protagonist. And of the real men and women of history, the most venerated and envied are those whose early humiliations were but preludes to terminal glories: for example, Lincoln, Whittington, Franklin, Columbus, Demosthenes, Frederick the Great, Catherine, Mary of Magdala, Moses. Even the Man of Sorrows, cradled in a manger and done to death between two thieves, is seen as we part from Him at last, in a situation of stupenduous magnificence, with infinite power is His hands. Even the Beautitudes, in the midst of their eloquent counselling renunciation, give it unimaginable splendor as its reward. The meek shall inherit—what? The whole earth! And the poor in spirit? They shall sit upon the right hand of God!—Smart Set.

Originality is disagreement with others.

WESTMINSTER'S SPORTS

Westminster Swamps Thiel Last Saturday

Local Defense Invincible. Buckley Contributes Another Feature Run

FIELD IN GOOD CONDITION AN ENTHUSIASTIC CROWD

Westminster upset the dope Saturday afternorn by administering Thiel a 27 to 0 defeat. The Greenville aggregation has made an exceptionally good record this season and was expected to hold the locals to a low score Parks, however, had the eleven trained to the minute and Thiel was powerless against the offensive Buckley sent against them.

The team displayed by far the best form of the season. The backfield worked smoothly and the line opened up good holes for the runners. They excelled in every department of the game.

Buckley played his usual star game, in the first quarter contributing a 40 yd. run for a touchdown, He was finally forced to retire from the game with an injured knee. "Tim" Holland deserves special mention, his good interference paving the way for good gains. The little halfback has proved beyond a doubt his ability to handle a varsity berth. Wherry and Vance contributed a touchdown apiece.

All of the linesmen played good ball, and most of the weaknesses that appeared in the Geneva game appear to have been eradicated. The work on offense was especially brilliant, Thiel making but one or two first downs. Dart, McQuiston, and Neal played their usual strong game. Hoezel broke into the limelight by stopping three plays that were directed at him in succession, for big losses.

The locals showed some ability in the forward passing line. Thiel being powerless against the aerial offensive. One pass Buckley to Loghrey netted thirty yards.

Westminster scored early in the ame, Wherry bucking across for the first score. In the same quarter Buckley ran 40 yards for a touchdown. Holland scored in the second quarter and Vance in the third, both by means of straight football. Lineup:

Westmin.—27		Thiel—0
Loghrey	l e	Cunningham
Neal	l t	Harter
Hart	l g	Riggle
McQuiston	c	Lynch
Berry	r g	Zeigler
Dart	r t	Lucas
Smith	r e	Trumpeter
Buckley	q b	Snyder
Wherry	l h	Callahan
Holland	r h	Kishler
Vance	f b	Jackson

Touchdowns—Wherry, Buckley Holland, Vance. Goals from touchdowns—Buckley 3. Substitutions—Hoezel for Berry, Berry for Hart, McArthur for Berry, Igo for Buckley, Vincent for Smith, Armstrong for Holland, Holland for Igo, Kirkbride for Wherry, Stright for Cunningham. Traezona for Zeigler. Referee—Coulter, Cornell. Umpire—Cosgrove, Yale Time of periods—10 and 12 minutes.

BONFIRE CELEBRATION

According to a time honored custom the Westminster student body celebrated the victory over Thiel by a bonfire on the Hillside lawn Saturday night. Owing to a little opposition on the part of one of the public spirited (?) citizens of the town the celebration was late in starting. Cheerleader Kerr led some cheers and then called on coach Parks and several of the fellows for talks about the game.

FOOTBALL NOTES

We read that Kalamazoo defeated Ypsilanti 19-0 Saturday. Shades of Artemus Ward!

Grove City added another victory to her string by defeating Hiram Saturday.

Buckley manages to bring the crowd to their feet each game by uncorking a sensational run.

Muskingum took over Bethany Saturday by a 19-0 score, while Geneva trounced Buffalo 29-0.

The local High School lost a hard fought game at Sharpsville Saturday 6-0. The score came as a result of a forward pass at the end of the first half.

Barrett of Cornell is probably the best quarterback in the country His work in the Michigan game was faultless, and was a big factor in Cornell's overwhelming victory.

Harvard came back with a vengeance Saturday and defeated Princeton 10 to 6. Tibbott kicked two field goals for the Tigers. Eddie Mahan played the whole game for Harvard. Frank Glick starred on defense for Princeton.

The principals and football players of twenty two secondary schools in the Pittsburgh district were guests of the University of Pittsburgh at the Pitt-W. & J. football game last Saturday. The visitors inspected the University buildings before the game.

One of the most promising players on the local squad is McCullough. Although he has had no experience he is playing a great game for the scrubs, and at times outplays his regular opponents. Many fans wanted to see him in action Saturday; they think that "Mac" will make good.

Coach Steffens and his Techmen had little trouble in settling that Case in Cleveland on Saturday. It was no surprise, for the "I-told-you-so" expert who had predicted all along that the Plaid would "schmier Case" all over the field. Pursuing hit low form of wit he then added that it would be a close shave if Colgate and Williams ever met.

—Pittsburgh Gazette.

Pitt's decisive victory over W. & J. occasioned no suprise. The Smoky City institution has one of the best football machines in the country, and is in a posiiion to dispute the championship with Harvard or Cornell. Saturday Warner's men followed a carefully planned line of action, playing safe in the first half and bewildering their opponents with a varied attack in the second.

Student Volunteer Convention Last Week

A Number of Delegates From Westminster College are in Attendance

CHARACTERIZED BY EARNESTNESS FOR CAUSE OF CHRIST

The sixth annual convention of the Student Volunteer movement of Western Pennsylvania was held at Grove City College, Nov. 12th to 14th. About sixty delegates registered representing the following institutions; Allegheny College, California State Normal, Ediburo State Normal, Geneva, Pitt, two Presbyterian Theological Seminaries, U. P. Theological Seminary of Pittsburg, Grove City College, W. & J. and Westminster.

The convention was characterized by a true earnestness for the cause of Christ and for the evangelization of the world. Able addresses were given by leading workers in missionary work. Westminster is especially proud to have been directly represented by Mrs. McClure, who delivered three excellent addresses, one of which "Work among Women in India," was especially touching and appealing.

Besides being represented upon the platform our College should be congratulated further in its splendid showing toward the interests of such a good movement both in the delegation and the official board. Miss Helen Anderson was unanimously chosen secretary and treasurer of the Volunteer movement. Of three delegates from the U. P. Seminary of Pittsburgh two were Westminster men, Mr. Emmet Alter '12 and Mr. John Milligan ex '18. Westminster herself was officially represented by the Misses Anderson, Beatty, Jamison, Toy and Whitmarsh from the Y. W. C. A. and by Messrs Braham, Love and McClurg from the Y. M. C. A., Miss Anderson, Miss Beatty and Mr. Love being also members of the Volunteer Band. Besides these a large delegation from Westminster attended the sessions on Sabbath Day.

Grove City College is to be especially commended for her excellent treatment and hospitality shown the delegates. Two invitations were extended to the convention as a meeting place next year—one from Allegheny College and one from Westminster. These invitations will be eonsidered later.

Quartet Sings

A quartet composed Miss Martha Vincent: Miss Mary Shaffer, Prof. Howard and Prof. Campbell sang at the Second U. P. Church at Mercer, Sabbath morning.

Westminsner Party

A very enjoyable Westminster party was held at the home of Harold Lucas in Pittsburgh, Saturday evening. The guests included the members of the cross-country team and others.

Football Extra

The Holcad is planning to put out an extra Saturday immediately after the game. In addition to a detailed writeup of the Westminster-Grove City game, the scores of out-of-town games will be given, as far as possible.

EXCITING HUNT

Three would-be sportsmen spent seven hours of their precious time Saturday, in the country surrounding New Wilmington, and returned with two rabbits. They would have bagged another but it ran between Alderman's feet, made an end run around Red Henderson, and got away before Butch could recover from the excitement sufficiently to shoot.

SEE THE GROVE CITY GAME SATURDAY

The Big Game of the Year Will be Hotly Contested

TO THE TEAM:

Remember the score
Of the year before,
When old Grove City was here?
Well, get at 'em then,
And do it again.
We'll raise the roof with a cheer!

The management is making great preparation for the game with Grove City Saturday. All week Coaches Parks and McLaughrey have been whipping the team into shape for the final test of the season. They hope to present a strong lineup against the Crimson aggregation. Buckley, Holland and Loghrey are expected to be in shape for the game.

A mass meeting was held Tuesday evening, and Cheerleader Kerr announces another for Friday. He is planning to make that meeting the snappiest of the season, and is arranging several unique features. A number of alumni are expected to be present.

Graduate Manager Campbell has been trying to get the alumni interested in the game. Some time ago he sent out cards asking if alumni would be present at the game, and received many affirmative answers. This is the biggeet football event in the section, and many Sharon and New Castle people are expected to motor here for the occasion. A special train will be run from Grove City, and the rooters from that institution are reported to be coming in force.

The Grove City team is the best in years, and it is desirous to make up for the defeats of the last two years. In 1913 the locals won a 26 to 6 victory and last year won by a 30 to 0 score. While the game this year is expected to be close, Captain McQuiston's aggregation are confident of adding another victory to the string.

DEBATE WORK COMMENCES

Underclassmen Prepare For Their Annual Contest

VARSITY SCHEDULE BEING PREPARED

The Debating Association has begun active preparation for the season's work. An attractive schedule of intercollegiate debates is being arranged, three debates being secured already. Two of these are at home, Pitt and Penn State being the visiting teams. The other debate is at Geneva. The exact date and the question has not been decided as yet.

Friday a meeting of freshmen and sophomores interested in debate was held, and twenty one men were present. Plans for the annual freshmen-sophomore debate were discussed, and Prof. Moses gave a short talk on the season's work.

The interclass debate will be held Wednesday evening, December 15, the question for discussion being "Resolved, that the United States Should Prohibit the Exportation of War Materials to Beligerent Nations." The sophomore preliminary will be held in Adelphic Hall, Wednesday afternoon, November 24, at three o'clock. The freshman preliminary will be held on the following Friday.

Last year the freshman-sophomore debate was the best in the history of the contest, and was close and interesting. This year the Association desires to excell even the good showing made last year. The winners of the contest have their names engraved on the silver loving cup donated for the purpose.

Ananta Tasa

When a man in the Malway country becomes discouraged and can see no way out of his difficulties some consoling friend is likely to repeat the saying that the Deva sent the Mahratta spear. Students of history will understand that the reference goes back to the time when the Mahrattas entered the country to oppose the Mohammedan invaders under the Mogul Aurungzebe. The average inhabitant of the district, however, is ignorant of the origin of the saying, and will probably tell the consoling friend that today and tomorrow are as God wills. Then, if he is naturally hopeful, he will bind a string of seven scarlet cotton threads and five blades of durba grass around his wrist, and wait for the will of God to be revealed. Or, if his case seems utterly hopeless, he will perform the Gala Nick to win blessed communication with the All-Giver.

But Ananta Tasa was not an ordinary man. He had traveled widely enough to rid himself of the ignorance of the district. And then he was exceptionally well educated, beginning his studies in the Mission School at Oojein and continuing them through the government schools at Bombay. So when he became dissatisfied with the worship of the ten avatars of Vishnu he did not resign himself to an unknown fate, nor did he take up a severe course of asceticism in order to obtain spiritual discernment. Instead he very calmly and methodically, after the manner of the philosophers he had studied in the government college, began to search for the Truth. First of all he went to a priest of the Buddha.

"What is life?" he asked.

"Life," replied the lama, "is a bridge from Nirvana to Nirvana, Pass over, but do not build upon it."

"How then," asked Ananta Tasa, "may I attain happiness?"

"By entering the path to Extinction."

"How may that be done?"

"Rid thyself of the delusion of individuality."

"But," responded Ananta Tasa, "if I do that life would mean nothing to me. Life is nothing, eternity is nothing! You show me nothing but a dreary void."

So he left the priest sitting beneath the pipal tree, and went to a pundit of his acquiantance.

"My friend," he said to the wise man, "I do not know what to believe."

"Deva sent me the Mahratta spear in time of need. He sent rain to the parched fields, He will send thee a faith."

"But what am I to do in the meantime?"

"Adore Brahma."

"Will that bring me happiness?" insisted Ananta Tasa.

"The world is illusion," answered the pundit. "The aspiration of thy heart in prayer is Brahma, is the All, is the truth, is the Over-Soul. That art thou. And all is Brahma."

"Thy words are meaningless, and thy faith is intangible. I am seeking the Truth about life, and death, and eternity."

"Eternity is a shadowy cloud without form, and void. Eternity is Brahma," murmured the pundit.

But Ananta Tasa was already gone. He was not satisfied with the vague, pantheistic philosophy of the pundit. Slowly he made his way along the crowded street until he came to the Court of Fountains. A zwami stood by a pillar addressing a crowd of listeners. Ananta Tasa uncermoniously elbowed his way to the front, and spoke to the teacher.

"Master what is the meaning of life?"

"Life is everything," answered the zwami slowly, "We come from Nothingness, and to Nothingness we go. Therefore, my son, be happy during life."

"But how may I be happy?'

"Desire is the primal germ of happiness."

Ananta Tasa was silent for a while At length he spoke, "and the object of that desire is—"

"Woman," finished the zwami.

Ananta Tasa started back in amazemet.

"Woman!" he exclaimed. "All seats agree on the sanctity of the cow and the depravity of women! There can be no happiness found in them."

"The love of woman," quoted the teacher, "will govern the world from the Beginning to the Abyss into which the nations will fall to waiting hand of God."

Ananta Tasa turned away. The thought of women holding such a high place in the schemes of existence was ridiculous, almost repulsive, to him. He walked quickly homeward, the noise and bustle of the streets wearying him. That night, however, the words of the zwami, came back to him. Be happy during life! That is a wise saying, thought Ananta Tasa. Life at least in certain, even though eternity is unknowable. And although the zwami had supprised him by saying that happiness is to be found in the love of woman, yet it was more tangible advice than the mystic epigrams of the pundit and lama. At any rate it was worthy of a trial, provided he could discover a woman who was educated as well as beautiful. Such a one, he knew, could be found only among the nautch girls at the temple.

The following day, therefore, Ananta Tasa entered the Temple of Kali. The huge interior was lighted by the flickering flames of a thousand swinging lamps, which glowed dully red through the smoke rising from the hanging incense burners. At the farther end of the temple was a gigantic image of Kali, Goddess of Destruction. The place was crowded with white-clad worshippers. Ananta Tasa made his way to the front, knelt with the rest. On his forehead were three horizontal marks made with white ashes, the sign of a follower of Siva.

Suddenly a veiled priest stepped before the statue and began to chant.

"Adoration and praise to the Sacred Triad! One should adore Brahma the Creator with tapas, the glow of devotion. One should adore Vishnu the Preserver with constant worship and prayer. One should adore Siva the Destroyer with sacrifices of fear. One should adore with liquors and oblations Kali, the consort of Siva."

There was a long sigh, as the worshippers prostrated themselves, their foreheads touching the ground. The priest continued.

"Kali, the destructress, with gaping mouth and uncombed hair, with four hands and a garland formed of the heads of the giants she has slain and whose blood she has drunk. Parvati, universal mother, reincarnaiion of the Jagan-Matri. Durga, goddess of fear, delighting in blood and death and terror. Hail, Matra, triune goddess of destruction."

Other priests took up the chant. "Kali, Parvati, Durga, Triune goddess of destruction." The crowd joined in a tumultuous chorus.

Over all sounded the throbbing of tom toms and the screaming of reed-flutes. Suddenly there was a crash of cymbals, and a hundred dancing girls, clad in garments of waving gauze, their limbs covered with glittering jewels, whirled into the temple. Shrilly they broke into a fervor of song, "Kali, Parvati, Durga, Triune goddess of destruction." Finally the flutes shrieked a louder note, the dancers, timed by rhythmical roar of the tom toms, divided right and left, and in the center danced Norama, the most beautiful of the nautch girls. Slowly she glided nearer the breathless worshipers until she was directly in front of Ananta Tasa. Then she began the terrible symbolic Dance of Fear, portraying one of the most passionate and dramatic incidents in the Mahabharata Epic.

Ananta Tasa could not take his eyes from the dancer as she whirled before him in an intricate maze of motion. In her movements, in her expression, in the waving of her rounded arm, she conveyed a sickening sense of fear of the unknown. Through the watchers mind flitted vague, barbaric impressions: voices imploring out of darkness; spirits flitting through the gloom; pestilence, famine, oppression, crime gliding through a gray waste, and, leading them, War, as a shape, with the devouring eyes of a woman. Then the flutes softened to a minor strain, and the dancer began to portray the desire of love and the fervor of passion. Her full scarlet lips were slightly parted, as if receiving the burning touch of another mouth. Her dark-tinted eyes were half closed, as a girl closes them when she sees the lips of her lover descending. And to Ananta Tasa the dancer seemed the very incarnation of love, and of voluptuous happiness.

The flutes, cymbals and tom toms swelled to a barbaric climax. The dancers swept forward and mingled with the crowd, to receive the gold coins of tribute to Kali, the Destructress. Norama, still panting from the exertion of the dance, moved directly toward Ananta Tasa. From his wallet he took three gold coins, and pressed them into her hand.

"One for Kali the Destructress," he whispered, "but two Norama the Beautiful."

The dancer glanced at him, and smiled.

"And will Norama the Beautiful walk in the garden of the Dancers tonight?" asked Ananta Tasa, encouraged.

"Tonight, in the Garden of the Dancers," nodded Norama, and moved back to her place.

So that night, and on many nights following, Ananta Tasa met Norama in the Garden of the Dancers. He found that the girl was not only as beautiful as a Himalayan sunrise, but that she was educated and accomplished as well. At times, when he came to her worn out by the cares of the day, she would take a banjo and lull him to rest with some sweet love song of Krishna, and to him the song was sweeter than the song of a bulbul. For the first time in his life he felt that he was truly happy, and sought the zwami to thank him for the advice, but the wise man was gone to another city. Norama, for her part received Ananta Tasa's gifts of jewels and gold coins with smiles that were sufficient thanks, and returned his caresses with an ardor that surprised and pleased him. For nearly a month he was happy as Krishna, the warmth of Norama's kisses being god, life, and eternity to him.

Then came a period of drought, and the waters of the river receded until a child could cross in safety. From the piles of debris and decaying vegetation along the banks a plague arose which soon swept over the crowded city. Ananta Tasa, however, did not cease his visits to Norama, but found with her relief from the misery of the streets. But one night returning from the Garden his knees began to shake and his teeth chattered with a chill, and by sunrise he was raving in delirium. His servants, after trying in vain to persuade a native hakim to treat the sick man, lit incense sticks in the room, and fled to avoid contamination. One of them, however, who was a follower of the white man's Yishu Masib, went to the little Mission Station, and told the Hadre Sahib of the case. And the young missionary, anxions to win his way into the hearts of the natives, persuaded the servant to lead him to the sick man. He found Ananta Tasa tossing about on a pallet of straw, half choked by the fumes of the incense. Quickly the missionary picked up the sick man, carried him to the next room, and placed him on a charpoy. Going to a well nearby he brought some water, and bathed Ananta Tasa's wrists and temples. From a case he took several white pills, and dissolving them in water, gave it to the patient who drank greedily. Then after ordering the servant to remain, the missionary left, promising to return on the next day. And for three days he returned and ministered to the sick man.

On the fourth day Ananta Tasa awoke from the sleep that had followed the delirium, and looked about him. His eyes roamed the thatched ceiling, the white walls,

EVERY STUDENT AND alumnus is anxious for a victory over Grove City Saturday. But if the team is to win there must be enthusiastic support. Knowledge that the entire school is backing them to the limit will do wonders for the players. We are anxious to have a great many alumni present for the game. Nothing puts a player quite so much on his mettle as the fact that graduate football stars are watching the play. Every student should attend the mass meetings and take all the "pep" possible to the game. The players and the coaches are sure to do their share.

IT IS A HARD TASK to gather advertisements for a school paper, and at times the students put great difficulties in the way of the business manager. A few weeks ago a class committee was chosen to select pins. A jeweler, advertising in the Holcad, sent sample pins to a member of the committee for examination. Nothing was done in the matter until the member who had the samples discovered that the committee had met and ordered pins without looking over the samples. Now of course our advertiser has a right to complain, not because the order was given to another firm, but because his samples were not even considered. The advertiser in question was offering pins manufactured by the two leading companies of the country at cost. After such treatment, whether intentional or accidental, it is a hard thing for the staff to approach business men and ask for their support. The advertisers at present are paying more revenue to the paper than students and alumni combined. If we are to continue to have this support we must have the cooperation of all the students. The best firms are interested enough in you to advertise in your school paper, and they deserve your patronage.

Alumni

J. O. Campbell received a letter Thursday from Ralph Patterson '15 who is teaching in North Warren. Mr. Patterson gives a very favorable report of his work.

Among the Alumni who have written to Prof. W. W. Campbell that they expect to come to the Grove City game are: John E. McCalmont '00, Marian Edmundson '01, E. R. Sampson '06, E. A. Campbell, '01, J. C. Fulton '15, S. W. McGinness '01, J. K. Stewart '12, W. T. Pierce '95, Sec., of Board, Emmett Alter '12, Howard Steele ex '17, Mary Kincaid ex '15, Mabel King '13, Lawrence Stewart '15. Janet McCalmont '15.

Dr. Andrew L. Russell's book "The Freighter" has been a good seller as well as an interesting book. The edition is clear out of the Publishers hands.

When accused in a friendly way with smashing some of our idols of early American History, he returned to the fray with these words I regret to say that everything I said was strictly true—I merely appropiated facts thot fitted in with the scheme of the tale."

Rev. Thos. J. Ferguson, class of 1975, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., has just returned from a visit with his sister in California, Mrs. Rev. Dr. McCormick.

Attract More Trade

(Hints to our Advertisers.)

Your success depends largely on what other people think of you and your business methods. Look at your business as the public does.

A clean sidewalk is sure to impress the passer-by and draw his attention to the windows.

Keep your windows clean inside and out. Change displays often. Many times a customer for a particular article will notice some other article in your window and buy it. Use neat. attractive signs in your windows, calling attention to particular bargains.

Clean floors, show cases, and counters attract trade. The surest way to promote cleanliness is to have good light. The cheapest things in this world are light, air, and water.

Proper ventilation is very important. People are often unconcious of good ventilation, but bad ventilation is undesirable and unhealthy.

Keep your store well lighted. A well lighted store is always attractive, and goods can be displayed to better advantage.

Remember that unusual things advertise your business. You can do unusual things without doing ridiculous things.

People like to see employees with clean collars, and like to see goods handled by clean hands.

Your reponsibility does not cease after goods have been sold. They must be delivered. If you use wagons, remember that people do not like to see dirty delivery wagons drawn by poor horses, driven by careless drivers.

The best advertising is "mouth to mouth." Treat your customers so that they will tell their friends about you and advise them to deal with you.

The next best advertising is in a live-wire newspaper. In this community the Holcad is the best advertising medium along this line. The paper secures and holds readers by printing something interesting and original on every page, by being the first to publish important items, and by being willing to cooperate in any helpful way with the advertisers.

Christian Association NOTES

There are ten members in the local Volunteer Band.

Marie Lytle led the Y. W. C. A. meeting Tuesday evening, the subject being "The Victorious Life."

Owen Shaffer '15 had charge of the High School meeting Thursday evening. His subject was "First Things First."

The weekly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening was led by Oliver Love. The subject for discussion was "Moral Courage."

Mrs. McClure addressed a joint meeting of the Christian Associations of Grove City College Sabbath evening. The meeting was held in connection with the Student Volunteer Convention.

Sabbath morning Prof. Barr discussed the subject, "Faith and Works, Not Two Things but One." He cited the ten lepers who were cleansed, the man at the pool of Siloam, and the man born blind. as men who had just as much faith as they put into action. Applying it to the present, we have just as much faith as we work out in obedience. If we have faith only, we have only a dead body, but faith together with works are a living body.

Ananta Tasa

and finally rested on the servant squatting on the floor.

"Where am I?" he asked.

The man sprang to his feet.

"In your own home, master. Praise God and the Padre Sahib that you are awake again!"

"The Padre Sahib?" asked Ananta Tasa puzzled.

"Yes, master, you were smitten by the plague, and he saved you."

Ananta Tasa was about to say more, but he thought of Norama. Strange to say the thought brought no desire or longing. She seemed something far off, unattainable, and undesired. And the atmosphere of the temple that surrounded her, the pulsing of the tom toms, the incense laden air, the scent of flowers in the Garden, seemed almost painful to him. Idly he tried to recall their last meeting, but he proved unequal to the task, and fell asleep. When he awoke the missionary was seated beside him.

"You saved my life, Padre Sahib."

"Not I but Christ," disclaimed the missionary.

"Christ," pondered Ananta Tasa, "Yisnu Masib—I heard about Him in the school at Oojein. Is He not called the Saviour of men?"

"Yes," assented the missionary reverently. Then he told Ananta Tasa the story of Jesus of Nazareth: how He ministered to the people, and finally died on the cross to expiate the sins of the world.

"Then your Jesus is dead?" asked Ananta Tasa.

"No, for in three days He rose from the dead, and later ascended to His Father in Heaven."

"Our Father, which art in heaven," quoted Ananta Tasa.

"Where did you learn that?" asked the missionary in surprise.

"At the school at Oojein," said the Hindoo, and proceeded to show the missionary a remarkable knowledge of the Bible, especially of the Trinity, which he compared to the Brahman Tri-Murdi. The missionary then spoke to him of the power of Christ to save men; told him how he had come to India to win souls for the Master.

"The true believer has oneness with Christ," he finished.

"But how may that be secured?"

"By renouncing sin and lust and passion, and by believing on Him."

"Renunciation," pondered Ananta Tasa thinkink of Norama, "After all that is the real way to happiness. The love of woman is a passing fever, and it is by tapas, a spiritual burning, that one may attain joy."

Then he told the missionary of the advice of the zwami, and of his passion for Norama.

"That is past. Renunciation is the way to happpiness," he concluded.

"But the girl," suggested the missionary."

"No doubt she will mourn and weep, but that cannot be helped."

"You might marry—"

"Marry! Marry a nautch girl!" Ananta Tasa was scornful. "Let her weep a little. Renunciation, I like that doctrine."

When the missionary left Ananta Tasa had the servant carry him to the roof, and place him where he could look over the parapet. The western sky was afire with the after-sunset glow, which changed the sordid whiteness of the town to a soft rose color. For a long time he pondered on the words of the missionary. Renunciation, he decided again, is the true way to happiness. The twilight slowly deepened into night. Lights gleamed here and there in the town. From the temple of Parvati sounded the distant throbbing of tom toms. Ananta Tasa thought of Norama. Let her mourn and weep a little Renunciation—I like that doctrine, he thought.

* * * * * *

In the temple the dancers swept forward to receive the gold coins of tribute to Kali. Norama the Beautiful, smiling happily, glided toward her new lover, a rich loose-lipped Hindoo from the South.

WESTMINSTER'S SPORTS

P. A. A. Wins Cross Country

Richards of Westminster Is First College Man To Finish

GETS THIRD PLACE IN THE RACE

Caughey of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association won the five mile cross country run through Schenley Park Saturday. His time was 28 minutes and 30 seconds. Joe Organ also wearing the Winged Head, took second, with Richards of Westminster third. Richards was the first college entry to finish The team trophy was won by the Pittsburgh Athletic Association with 31 points.

Caughy and Richards led the entire distance, with Organ far behind. A mistake in the course, however, sent the leaders over 100 yards out of their way, and enabled the Sharon man to catch up. In spite of this handicap Caughey was the first to enter Forbes Field and to finish, while Richards and Organ finished with hardly a yard between them in the prettiest race of the day.

The next nine runners in the order in which they finished were Reiser, Tech; Livermore, Pitt; Dockstater, Tech; Albright, Pitt; Hird, P. A. A.; Warren, P. A. A.; Walker, Tech; Wait, P. A. A. and McMurray, Westminster.

Considering their inexperience and unfamiliarity with the course the local runners put up a fine race. The order in which they finished as a team was Richards, McMurray, Lucas, Clements, and Clark.

Gold, Silver, and bronze plaques were awarded the first three men respectively, while the next five men finishing received bronze medals. The team trophy was a silver mounted plaque.

FOOTBALL NOTES

Football fans in general are looking forward to the Pitt-State game on Thanksgiving.

W. & J. had a hard time gaining a 7-3 victory over West Virginia Wesleyan. The Methodists were in the game from start to finish.

Don't forget the football extra after the Grove City game!

The Irregulars are to play the Hillside waiters next Friday afternoon, and a hotly contested game is expected. Captain Minteer hopes to schedule an out of-town game for Thanksgiving Day. Several new faces will be seen in the lineup Friday.

Pitt had an easy time with Tech Saturday, scoring without difficulty on the Plaid eleven. Coach Steffens said, however, that he was satisfied with the showing of his team.

Grove City has had a fairly successful season thus far, defeating Thiel 10-0, Bethany 27-0, and Buffalo 10-7. The team was, however, overwhelmingly defeated by Tech.

In the Pitt-W. & J. grame Hastings gained 108 yards for the Blue and Gold.

Yale came into her own Saturday by defeating Princeton 13-7. As a result Princeton rooters are said to have left at least $20,000 in New Haven.

Another championship team was eliminated when Colgate was swamped by Syracuse. The pennant will go to Cornell or Pitt. And what about the Oregon Aggies, which is said to be one of the weakest teams in the West?

HIS HOPE

Father, I had a fight with Percy Raymond today.

I know you did, replied the father soberly. Mr. Raymond came to see me about it.

Well, said the son, I hope you came out as well as I did.

No Game Saturday

The Cancellation of Bethany Leaves Team Without a Game

For the second time this year a cancellation left the team idle. Early last week Bethany cancelled the game that had been scheduled, on account of lack of sufficient funds to fulfill the terms of the contract. Although coaches and players were disappointed at the loss of a trip, Graduate Manager Campbell could not do otherwise but accept the cancellation.

The coaches then decided to give the players a day off to recuperate from injuries and to get rested for strenuous work in preparation for the Grove City game The squad was in rather battered condition from the Thiel game, and it was thought that a day of rest would benefit the players.

At the last minute word was received that Bethany would be able to play, but it was too late for the coaches to make arrangements for the trip. The Bethany students, however, are to be highly commended for their spirit in raising the funds necessary to make the game possible.

IRREGULARS ARE CONQUERED

One of the biggest sports events of the year took place Thursday afternoon, when the High School defeated the famous Irregular team 18 to 0. The High School took the field first, and a few minutes later Captain Minteer led his cohorts out upon the gridiron. During the first half the advantage was all with the Irregulars, who rushed their opponents off their feet but lacked the punch to score. In the second half the High School got together and scored three times on their winded opponents. Minteer's aggregation was unable to score in spite of several well planned trick plays. It is rumored that several players were so exhausted that they had to be carried home. The Irregular lineup was as follows: left end Fergurson, left tackle Mercer, left guard Dickson, center Shott, right guard Barr, right tackle Hart, right end Sniff, quarterback Grundish, left half Brandon, fullback Minteer, right half Cummings. This was the first defeat of the Irreguars in two years. Conway and Beighle starred for the High School.

BIG CROWD ATTENDS GAME IN SPITE OF THE WEATHER

Teams put up Hard Fight. Grounds in Poor Condition. School Spirit Runs High.

The annual game between Westminster and Grove City on College Field this afternoon was one of the bitterest gridiron battles ever staged between the two institutions. Stung by the remembrance of their overwhelming defeats of the last two years, Grove City came over with the determination to secure a sweet revenge. Remarks by their players showed that the Grove City contingent were relying on the absence of the sensational fullback McLaughrey who was lost by graduation, to enable them to defeat the local team. The Blue and White aggregation went into the contest with true fighting spirit, and the entire contest was fought bitterly.

Owing to the rain of the last few days the field was in poor condition, although the wind had dried the ground in spots, especiallly at the uppper end of the field. The storm that was raging last night had died down somewhat, but the high wind still rendered the handling of punts difficult. Every now and then the sun would break through the clouds, but the cold wind kept the watchers uncomfortable.

In spite of this drawback, however, a large crowd attended the game, although many were kept from coming by auto on account of the muddy condition of the roads. The Grove City contingent came several hundred strong in a special train, bringing with them a band. The team arrived on the same train.

The local rooters also had a band, and, reinforced by scores of alumni and friends, showed Grove City a few things about organized cheering. The cheering duel between the rival contingents was one of the features of the contest. Cheerleader Kerr kept the Blue and White stands singing and yelling from the begining to the end of the game.

Both groups of rooters marched to the field, and exchanged a series of yells. The appearance of each team was the signal for tumultuous cheering. Referee Lynn called Captains McQuiston and Pollock together for the toss up.

The Lineup

Westminster—0		Grove City—6
Neal	Left Tackle	Pollock (Capt)
Berry	Lelt Guard	Heilman
McQuiston	Center	McCord

Referee—Lynn, Williamsport. Umpire—McFarland, Pittsburgh. Head Linesman—Caddigan. Length of quarters, 15 minutes.

The Game by Quarters

Grove City won the toss and elected to play with wind at back. Buckley kicked off to Penman who returned it 10 yds.

FIRST QUARTER

Brown kicked out of bounds. Westminster lost ball on fumble. During tne rest of quarter neither side had much advantage until Westminster fumbled ball on 20 yd line. Brown made 5 yds. Penman made two. Grove City in three plunges carried ball to 5 yd line. Score 0-0

SECOND QUARTER

Westminster penalyzed for offside playing, giving Grove City first downs. Fredley carried the ball over. Grove City failed to kick goal. Westminster line held like stone wall. Hoelzel went in for Neal and Nutt for McCord. Westminster took ball on 40 yard line and Dart and Wherry made their way to 4 yd line. Wick went in for Nutt and Vincent for Smith. Grove City held for downs Score 6 0.

THIRD QUARTER

Between halves rain began to fall. Brown kicked off to Hoelzel. Both teams ployed great football. Buckley made 20 yards on forward pass. Brown intercepted forward pass. Armstrong went in for Holland. The field is in poor condition on account of rain, Score 6-0

FOURTH QUARTER

Holland substituted for Armstrong. Wherry made two fine runs. No further scores in this quarter.

NOTES

Between the halves the rooters paraded the grounds.

The Sharon and Sharpsville high School teams were present as guests of the College.

Sharon is always loyal to Westminster. A big crowd came down to root for Westminster.

Westminster to Play Columbia

Prof. Campbell is arranging the football schedule for next year. Games have been scheduled with Pitt and Penn State. It is probable that a game will be arranged with Columbia University. Westminster is being recognized in the East as one of the best small college aggregations.

Mass Meeting Last Night

The most enthusiastic mass meeting of the year was held in Chapel yesterday evening. Cheerleader Kerr kept the enthusiasm at white heat. Rousing speeches were made by Coaches Parks and McLaughrey, Captain McQuiston, and several players. Dr. Ferguson, Prof. W. W. Campbell, and Prof. Moses voiced the sentiment of the faculty in wishing the team success. Among the alumni who spoke were Frank Andrews '14, William Moore '14, J. C. Felton '15, Rev. A. A. Graham '91, M. M. Edmundson '01, and W. B. McCrory '01.

Ananta Tasa

When a man in the Malway country becomes discouraged and can see no way out of his difficulties some consoling friend is likely to repeat the saying that the Deva sent the Mahratta spear. Students of history will understand that the reference goes back to the time when the Mahrattas entered the country to oppose the Mohammedan invaders under the Mogul Aurungzebe. The average inhabitant of the district, however, is ignorant of the origin of the saying, and will probably tell the consoling friend that today and tomorrow are as God wills. Then, if he is naturally hopeful, he will bind a string of seven scarlet cotton threads and five blades of durba grass around his wrist, and wait for the will of God to be revealed. Or, if his case seems utterly hopeless, he will perform the Gala Nick to win blessed communication with the All-Giver.

But Ananta Tasa was not an ordinary man. He had traveled widely enough to rid himself of the ignorance of the district. And then he was exceptionally well educated, beginning his studies in the Mission School at Oojein and continuing them through the government schools at Bombay. So when he became dissatisfied with the worship of the ten avatars of Vishnu he did not resign himself to an unknown fate, nor did he take up a severe course of asceticism in order to obtain spiritual discernment. Instead he very calmly and methodically, after the manner of the philosophers he had studied in the government college, began to search for the Truth. First of all he went to a priest of the Buddha.

"What is life?" he asked.

"Life," replied the lama, "is a bridge from Nirvana to Nirvana, Pass over, but do not build upon it."

"How then," asked Ananta Tasa, "may I attain happiness?"

"By entering the path to Extinction."

"How may that be done?"

"Rid thyself of the delusion of individuality."

"But," responded Ananta Tasa, "if I do that life would mean nothing to me. Life is nothing, eternity is nothing! You show me nothing but a dreary void."

So he left the priest sitting beneath the pipal tree, and went to a pundit of his acquiantance.

"My friend," he said to the wise man, "I do not know what to believe."

"Deva sent me the Mahratta spear in time of need. He sent rain to the parched fields, He will send thee a faith."

"But what am I to do in the meantime?"

"Adore Brahma."

"Will that bring me happiness?" insisted Ananta Tasa.

"The world is illusion," answered the pundit. "The aspiration of thy heart in prayer is Brahma, is the All, is the truth, is the Over-Soul. That art thou. And all is Brahma."

"Thy words are meaningless, and thy faith is intangible. I am seeking the Truth about life, and death, and eternity."

"Eternity is a shadowy cloud without form, and void. Eternity is Brahma," murmured the pundit.

But Ananta Tasa was already gone. He was not satisfied with the vague, pantheistic philosophy of the pundit. Slowly he made his way along the crowded street until he came to the Court of Fountains. A zwami stood by a pillar addressing a crowd of listeners. Ananta Tasa uncermoniously elbowed his way to the front, and spoke to the teacher.

"Master what is the meaning of life?"

"Life is everything," answered the zwami slowly, "We come from Nothingness, and to Nothingness we go. Therefore, my son, be happy during life."

"But how may I be happy?'

"Desire is the primal germ of happiness."

Ananta Tasa was silent for a while At length he spoke, "and the object of that desire is—"

"Woman," finished the zwami.

Ananta Tasa started back in amazemet.

"Woman!" he exclaimed. "All seats agree on the sanctity of the cow and the depravity of women! There can be no happiness found in them."

"The love of woman," quoted the teacher, "will govern the world from the Beginning to the Abyss into which the nations will fall to waiting hand of God."

Ananta Tasa turned away. The thought of women holding such a high place in the schemes of existence was ridiculous, almost repulsive, to him. He walked quickly homeward, the noise and bustle of the streets wearying him. That night, however, the words of the zwami, came back to him. Be happy during life! That is a wise saying, thought Ananta Tasa. Life at least in certain, even though eternity is unknowable. And although the zwami had supprised him by saying that happiness is to be found in the love of woman, yet it was more tangible advice than the mystic epigrams of the pundit and lama. At any rate it was worthy of a trial, provided he could discover a woman who was educated as well as beautiful. Such a one, he knew, could be found only among the nautch girls at the temple.

The following day, therefore, Ananta Tasa entered the Temple of Kali. The huge interior was lighted by the flickering flames of a thousand swinging lamps, which glowed dully red through the smoke rising from the hanging incense burners. At the farther end of the temple was a gigantic image of Kali, Goddess of Destruction. The place was crowded with white-clad worshippers. Ananta Tasa made his way to the front, knelt with the rest. On his forehead were three horizontal marks made with white ashes, the sign of a follower of Siva.

Suddenly a veiled priest stepped before the statue and began to chant.

"Adoration and praise to the Sacred Triad! One should adore Brahma the Creator with tapas, the glow of devotion. One should adore Vishnu the Preserver with constant worship and prayer. One should adore Siva the Destroyer with sacrifices of fear. One should adore with liquors and oblations Kali, the consort of Siva."

There was a long sigh, as the worshippers prostrated themselves, their foreheads touching the ground. The priest continued.

"Kali, the destructress, with gaping mouth and uncombed hair, with four hands and a garland formed of the heads of the giants she has slain and whose blood she has drunk. Parvati, universal mother, reincarnaiion of the Jagan-Matri. Durga, goddess of fear, delighting in blood and death and terror. Hail. Matra, triune goddess of destruction."

Over all sounded the throbbing of tom toms and the screaming of reed-flutes. Suddenly there was a crash of cymbals, and a hundred dancing girls, clad in garments of waving gauze, their limbs covered with glittering jewels, whirled into the temple. Shrilly they broke into a fervor of song, "Kali, Parvati, Durga, Triune goddess of destruction." Finally the flutes shrieked a louder note, the dancers, timed by rhythmical roar of the tom toms, divided right and left, and in the center danced Norama, the most beautiful of the nautch girls. Slowly she glided nearer the breathless worshipers until she was directly in front of Ananta Tasa. Then she began the terrible symbolic Dance of Fear, portraying one of the most passionate and dramatic incidents in the Mahabharata Epic.

Ananta Tasa could not take his eyes from the dancer as she whirled before him in an intricate maze of motion. In her movements, in her expression, in the waving of her rounded arm, she conveyed a sickening sense of fear of the unknown. Through the watchers mind flitted vague, barbaric impressions: voices imploring out of darkness; spirits flitting through the gloom; pestilence, famine, oppression, crime gliding through a gray waste, and, leading them, War, as a shape, with the devouring eyes of a woman. Then the flutes softened to a minor strain, and the dancer began to portray the desire of love and the fervor of passion. Her full scarlet lips were slightly parted, as if receiving the burning touch of another mouth. Her dark-tinted eyes were half closed, as a girl closes them when she sees the lips of her lover descending. And to Ananta Tasa the dancer seemed the very incarnation of love, and of voluptuous happiness.

The flutes, cymbals, and tom toms swelled to a barbaric climax. The dancers swept forward and mingled with the crowd, to receive the gold coins of tribute to Kali, the Destructress. Norama, still panting from the exertion of the dance, moved directly toward Ananta Tasa. From his wallet he took three gold coins, and pressed them into her hand.

"One for Kali the Destructress," he whispered, "but two Norama the Beautiful."

The dancer glanced at him, and smiled.

"And will Norama the Beautiful walk in the garden of the Dancers tonight?" asked Ananta Tasa, encouraged.

"Tonight, in the Garden of the Dancers," nodded Norama, and moved back to her place.

So that night, and on many nights following, Ananta Tasa met Norama in the Garden of the Dancers. He found that the girl was not only as beautiful as a Himalayan sunrise, but that she was educated and accomplished as well. At times, when he came to her worn out by the cares of the day, she would take a banjo and lull him to rest with some sweet love song of Krishna, and to him the song was sweeter than the song of a bulbul. For the first time in his life he felt that he was truly happy, and sought the zwami to thank him for the advice, but the wise man was gone to another city. Norama, for her part received Ananta Tasa's gifts of jewels and gold coins with smiles that were sufficient thanks, and returned his caresses with an ardor that surprised and pleased him. For nearly a month he was happy as Krishna, the warmth of Norama's kisses being god, life, and eternity to him.

Then came a period of drought, and the waters of the river receded until a child could cross in safety. From the piles of debris and decaying vegetation along the banks a plague arose which soon swept over the crowded city. Ananta Tasa, however, did not cease his visits to Norama, but found with her relief from the misery of the streets. But one night returning from the Garden his knees began to shake and his teeth chattered with a chill, and by sunrise he was raving in delirium. His servants, after trying in vain to persuade a native hakim to treat the sick man, lit incense sticks in the room, and fled to avoid contamination. One of them, however, who was a follower of the white man's Yishu Masib, went to the little Mission Station, and told the Hadre Sahib of the case. And the young missionary, anxions to win his way into the hearts of the natives, persuaded the servant to lead him to the sick man. He found Ananta Tasa tossing about on a pallet of straw, half choked by the fumes of the incense Quickly the missionary picked up the sick man, carried him to the next room, and placed him on a charpoy. Going to a well nearby he brought some water, and bathed Ananta Tasa's wrists and temples. From a case he took several white pills, and dissolving them in water, gave it to the patient who drank greedily. Then after ordering the servant to remain, the missionary left, promising to return on the next day. And for three days he returned and ministered to the sick man.

On the fourth day Ananta Tasa awoke from the sleep that had followed the delirium, and looked about him. His eyes roamed the thatched ceiling, the white walls, and finally rested on the servant squatting on the floor.

"Where am I?" he asked.

The man sprang to his feet.

"In your own home, master. Praise God and the Padre Sahib that you are awake again!"

"The Padre Sahib?" asked Ananta Tasa puzzled.

"Yes, master, you were smitten by the plague, and he saved you."

Ananta Tasa was about to say more, but he thought of Norama. Strange to say the thought brought no desire or longing. She seemed something far off, unattainable, and undesired. And the atmosphere of the temple that surrounded her, the pulsing of the tom toms, the incense laden air, the scent of flowers in the Garden, seemed almost painful to him. Idly he tried to recall their last meeting, but he proved unequal to the task, and fell asleep. When he awoke the missionary was seated beside him.

"You saved my life, Padre Sahib."

"Not I but Christ," disclaimed the missionary.

"Christ," pondered Ananta Tasa, "Yisnu Masib—I heard about Him in the school at Oojein. Is He not called the Saviour of men?"

"Yes," assented the missionary reverently. Then he told Ananta Tasa the story of Jesus of Nazareth; how He ministered to the people, and finally died on the cross to expiate the sins of the world.

"Then your Jesus is dead?" asked Ananta Tasa.

"No, for in three days He rose from the dead, and later ascended to His Father in Heaven."

"Our Father which art in heaven," quoted Ananta Tasa.

"Where did you learn that?" asked the missionary in surprise.

"At the school at Oojein," said the Hindoo, and proceeded to show the missionary a remarkable knowledge of the Bible, especially of the Trinity which he compared to the Brahman Tri-Murdi. The missionary then spoke to him of the power of Christ to save men; told him how he had come to India to win souls for the Master.

"The true believer has oneness with Christ," he finished.

"But how may that be secured?"

"By renouncing sin and lust and passion, and by believing on Him."

"Renunciation," pondered Ananta Tasa thinkink of Norama, "After all that is the real way to happiness. The love of woman is a passing fever, and it is by tapas, a spiritual burning, that one may attain joy."

Then he told the missionary of the advice of the zwami, and of his passion for Norama.

"That is past. Renunciation is the way to happpiness," he concluded.

"But the girl," suggested the missionary."

"No doubt she will mourn and weep, but that cannot be helped."

"You might marry—"

"Marry! Marry a nautch girl!" Ananta Tasa was scornful. "Let her weep a little. Renunciation, I like that doctrine."

When the missionary left Ananta Tasa had the servant carry him to the roof, and place him where he could look over the parapet. The western sky was afire with the after-sunset glow, which changed the sordid whiteness of the town to a soft rose color. For a long time he pondered on the words of the missionary. Renunciation, he decided again, is the true way to happiness. The twilight slowly deepened into night. Lights gleamed here and there in the town. From the temple of Parvati sounded the distant throbbing of tom toms. Ananta Tasa thought of Norama. Let her mourn and weep a little. Renunciation—I like that doctrine, he thought.

In the temple the dancers swept forward to receive the gold coins of tribute to Kali. Norama the Beautiful, smiling happily, glided toward her new lover, a rich loose-lipped Hindoo from the South.

Former President Is Dead

Dr. Jeffers Dies at His Home At York, Pa., On September 17.

Dr. E. T. Jeffers, former president of Westminster College, died at his home in York, Pa., Wednesday, November 17. Dr. Jeffers had been ill for some time, and his death resulted frem a complication of diseases. He was one of the best known ministers in the Presbyterian denomination.

Dr. Jeffers was born in 1841. He took his collegiate course at Jefferson College, which was then located at Canonsburgh. While a student at that institution he formed a strong friendship with his classmate Dr. Ferguson, who succeeded him as president of Westminster.

After his graduation from Jefferson College Dr. Jeffers decided to enter the ministry. In 1872 he was called to the presidency of Westminster, succeeding Dr. Audley Browne. He was installed as the third president of the College on June 4, 1872. This position he held for eleven years, resigning in 1883 to accept a chair in the York Collegiate Institute. He has been located at York ever since. Dr. Ferguson succeeded him to the presidency in 1884.

In 1913 Dr. Jeffers visited New Wilmington during commencement week. While here he delivered the annual sermon to the Christian Associations in the Second U. P. Church. He also delivered the baccalaureate to the graduating class.

Dr. Ferguson left Saturday to attend the funeral services, which were held Monday afternoon.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

A large number of students attended "The Birth of a Nation" in New Castle Thursday evening. All of them were pleased with the production, which is said to be the most elaborate motion picture ever attempted. It portrays vividly scenes from the Civil War and the Reconstruction period in the South.

Convention Reports Are Given in Chapel

Interesting Description of the Gathering at Grove City

Instead of the usual preaching services in the chapel on Sabbath evening the meeting was placed under the direction of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. with President Jamison of the latter organization in charge. The object of his arrangement was to bring the message of the Students Volunteer Convention, held the previous week at Grove City, before the whole student body. This plan in the first place was approved and urged by several students and members of the faculty.

In this meeting each one who had attended the convention was given the opportunity to speak. Besides the regular delegates, Misses Anderson, Whitmarsh and Toy, and Messrs Lash, Braham, and McClurg, to whom had been assigned special reports. Miss Beatty and Mr. Patton gave very interesting and helpful talks on different phrases of the convention which had especially appealed to them. The plan adopted by the six regular speakers was a unique one. Instead of the usual custom of apportioning the reports according to sessions, each delegate selected a speaker of the convention and attempted to show a little of his personality, his value, and his work by giving the substance of his message. Each report gave evidence of the invaluble worth which they, who were fortunate enough to attend the covention, had received.

Celebrates Fifteenth Birthday

Dr. Charles Freeman Represents Westminster at Gathering

The eightieth birthday anniversary of Andrew Carnegie and the fifteenth anniversary of the Carnegie Institute of Technology are being observed simultaneously yesterday and today. Representatives are present from the leading educational institutions of the section. Dr. Charles Freeman is representing Westminster.

Yesterday afternoon there was a repection for the guests and friends of the Institute who came for the occasion, and in the evening there was a dinner in their honor. Afterwards Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, Superintendent of the Chicago public schools: Edward Robinson, Director of the Metropolitan Museum of Fine Art; and Charles Howe, President of the Case School of Applied Science addressed a gathering of tne guests.

This morning Dr. Henry Prichett president of the Carnegie Foundation for education, will deliver an address on "Andrew Carnegie." A number of receptions and entertainments have been planned for the guests.

DIRECTOR CAMPBELL IS HONORED

Prof. W. W. Campbell received a letter yesterday offering him the position of Director of Music at the Summer School of Ohio State University. Prof. Campbell has held that position for three years, and his success is proven by the offer of the position for next season, in spite of an unwritten law at the University against a man teaching more than three summer terms. Prof. Campbell lectures on Musical Aprreciation and Pedagogy. In his work he is assisted by Miss Mary Douthett, who acts as interpreter of the music dealt with in the lecture.

A Boost for The Holcad

Enterprise in the way of school journalism was shown Saturday. The staff in charge of the Holcad, the Westminster College newspaper, issued an "extra," giving an account of the football game between Westminster and Grove City, and had it on the streets of the village a few minutes after the game was over. Not only did the paper give an account of the game, but it also carried the scores of all the big games.

THE NEW PAVEMENT

The new six-foot pavement along Market Street in front of "Old Main" is a great improvement in appearance as well as in usefulness. The walk was put in with the greatest of care, in order that it should be as serviceable as it is neat in appearance. The walk is the gift of Mr. James W. Stewart of Cleveland, Ohio, and is another of his practical testimonials of goodwill towards the College. Mr. Stewart graduated from Westminster in 1869, and has been a firm friend of the institution ever since.

Birthday Party

The birthday fad hitherto only employed by the Hillside girls when they wanted a good "feed" seems to have struck the sterner element of the school. A bunch of the fellows helped Hannivan Alderman to celebrate his fifteenth birthday last Thursday night.

A couple of rabbits together with a box of "eats" from home helped the boys to satisify the pangs of hunger and a good time was had by all.

The Football Extra Attracts Atrention

Tuesday's Edition of Pittsburgh Evening Sun Is Complimentary

The football Extra issued after the Grove City game made a great impression. In addition to the compliments received from alumni and friends, the New Castle and Pittsburgh papers printed notices commending the "extra."

Tuesday evening the Pittsburgh Sun printed a photographic reproduction of the headlines of the Holcad and the pictures of the editor and business manager. In addititon the Sun printed the following complimentary writeup:

While Westminster did not win the football game with Grove City on Saturday, as had been anticipted, yet the undergraduates in charge of "The Holcad," the college newspaper, gave a demonstration of the real wide awake and enterprising spirit that is in the school at the present time by performing a stunt that marks an epoch in the history of the college here. The stunt was issuing an extra edition of the college paper giving an account of the game. It was on the streets of the village a few moments after the game was over.

In addition the "extra" gave records of all the scores in the big games. It was the first time that such a thing has ever been attempted here and was so successful that "extras" may become the rule in college journalism in this section in the future. Many of the papers were sold, boys being on the streets with them before the large crowd of visitors departed on trains and in autos.

Farmer Brown, while his crew of threshers were "washing up" one morning, noticed among them a Swede who was not engaged in the use of water, soap and towel.

Well, Harris, said the farmer, aren't you going to wash this morning?

Naw, returned the Swede, it don't make me dirty to sleep.

The New Fashioned Girl

She'd a great and varied knowledge, picked up at a female college, of quadratics, hydroscatics and phenumatics very fast.

She was stuffed with eruditions as you stuff a leather cushion, all the ologies of the colleges and the knowledges of the past.

She had studied the old lexicons of Peruvians and Mexicans, their, theology, anthropology and geology o'er and o'er.

She knew all the forms and features of the prehistoric creatures--ichthyosaurus, plesiosaurus, megalosaurus and many more.

She'd describe the ancient Tuscans and the Basques and the Etruscans, their girdles and their kettles, and the victuals that they gnawed.

She'd discuss, the learned charmer the theology of Bramah, and the sandles that they trod.

She knew all the mighty giants and the master minds of science, all the learning that was turning in the burning mind of man.

But she couldn't prepare a dinner for a gaunt and hungry sinner, or get up a decent supper for her poor voracious papa, for she never was constructed on the old domestic plan.—Ex.

He Wanted More

A story is told in a paper of a merchant doing business in a town where the sale of everything intoxicating was prohibited by law, who made a large demand for his cocoanuts by emptying them of their milk and substituting whiskey. One day, the story goes, the minister of the place dropped into the store to buy a cocoanut. The merchant was in despair, and surprised the preacher by telling him that the cocoanuts were not fit to be sold to a good customer. Taking one of them up and shaking it, the minister said he was convinced that it must be sound, and would chance it, anyway. The merchant could do nothing more; so he took pay from the preacher at cocoanut rates, and fell to planning a story that would let him out of his trouble. While he was thus engaged a messenger came to the store, from the preacher with a note which ran thus: Send me six more cocoanuts exactly like the one I purchased from you.—Harper's Weekly.

THERE HAVE BEEN but few objections to changing the admission price to the last game of the season from fifty to seventy five cents. Many reasons exist which make such a change consistent and necessary. The fifty cent price was established ten or more years ago, when expenses were comparitively small. In those days five dollars satisfied any referee, and the umpire received nothing but traveling expenses. Since that time the cost of the game has quadrupled, and it is natural that the price of admission should be raised. When our team plays Pitt, for example, the admission price is one dollar. There is no reason why that price should not be established for the last game of the season at New Wilmington. The game is worth it, and circumstances seem to demand the change.

THIS WORLD IS MORE than a place in which to live,—it is a veritable store house of wonders. And the man who can detect the real meaning of life behind the evolution of nature and of nations is able to enjoy those wonders to the fullest extent. Such a man has a vision, and for him all things work together for good. The average undergraduate, however, does not bother much about a vision. He is engrossed in the affairs of the classroom, campus, or athletic field, and his forward look does not extend much farther than the next examination or Saturday's game. In this he is making a mis take. "Where there is no vision the people perish," A true vision will raise him out of the deadening rut of ordinary routine, and will align his life in relation to a world-plan. Too, often as somebody has said, the wine of vision is reserved for the close of the feast of life.

THANKSGIVING DAY IS one of the most important of our national holidays, yet the spirit of the occasion remains unobserved. Observance of the day, as far as most of us are concerned, ends when we have attended a football game and eaten an unusually bountiful dinner. Yet the day was set aside, not for sports or recreation, but for the giving of thanks to God. We thoroughly approve of football, and still more thoroughly approve of the Thanksgiving dinner, but while we enjoy these blessings let us not forget to thank Him who is the Giver of every good and perfect gift. Everyone of us has had blessings for which we are thankful to God. And as a nation we have been blessed with peace and increasing prosperity. For all these things let us make the day one of real thanks-giving.

Things We Never Do

How many times, riding or walking along some main road, have you seen a green, alluring, fancy beaconing pathway winding off wood-ward, field-ward, hill-ward, and promised yourself to return when you had time to take it? And how many times have you set foot on it at last, following its sun-flecked shadowy loveliness to whatever bourne it reached? Probably never! And that undertaken path is a symbol of the many, many things we never do, things we want to do, things there is no reason we should not do, but that some how we never succeed in accomplishing.

It is said that hardly ever do we get time to follow the by-ways of life. Along the main road we hurry, looking this way and that and promising ourselves that some day——

Some fear of being disillusioned holds us back, possibly. A timidity that steps in between the thing desired and the act grasping it; a curious reluctance to make an end of what allures and promises and calls by answering it with our bodily presence. There is certainly a mystery about the things we never do that must vanish when we do them, and it may be that the mystery is the thing we desire most though but dimly aware of the fact.

Whatever it be, the reason that keeps us from doing the things we never do is touchingly human and endearing. It keeps us children forever, with the future full of gleaming promise. For sometime, sometime, we are going to do them —the things we never do!

THE FITTEST SURVIVE

The day was cold, fearfully cold even for a mid-winter day in the Yukon country. As Carrick cracked his whip over the head of the lead dog the report rang out in the still air like a revolver shot. And during the day he had to crack his whip a good many times. The huskies were tired and hungry, and were snarling among themselves. Carrick had a hard time keeping them pulling in the traces. He, too, was dead tired. Two days before he and his partner had started for Dawson. They had not gone three miles when his partner, who was breaking trail up the river, slipped through a snow-covered hole in the ice into the black waters. After him plunged the team. Quickly Carrick cut the traces, and jerked the sled aside, too late, however, to prevent the load from slipping into the water. Then he helped out four dogs that had not been drawn under by the swift current.

As quickly as possible he gathered branches with which to build a fire. While the dogs were warming themselves he tried to rescue the body of his partner or part of the load Failing in this, he improvised a rope harness, and drove the team along shore to the riffle two miles below. Here, as he had expected, he found the battered body of his partner and one or two smashed boxes, caught among the rocks. After examining the boxes to find if they contained any food, he placed the body of his partner on the empty sled, and started along the unbroken trail to Dawson

Now, on the third day out, both Carrick and the team were beginning to break beneath the terrific strain. The man brought the last ounce of his strength into play to keep himself plodding behind the sled, and to keep the hunger-maddened huskies pulling in the traces. Through the short afternoon he forced the team across the haggard stretches of snow, while the light faded more and more, and the freezing air seemed to bite into his very heart. At length the night swooped down with startling suddenness. A few stars glittered sharply in the sky before Carrick halted the team.

The huskies watched him anxiously while he collected branches and built a fire, and growled and snarled as he unfastened the harness. Once he was compelled to beat the leading dog over the head with his whip. He went a short distance to gather a supply of fire-wood. When he returned he found all four dogs sniffing about the body on the sled. With a curse he dropped an armful of branches, and sprang at them, whip in hand. The huskies leaped back, snarling angrily, and crouched on their haunches a few yards away. Carrick turned quickly toward the fire. In doing so he tripped over the branches he had dropped. and fell headlong into the snow. Before he could rise the lead dog leaped upon him, and buried his fangs deep in the man's throat.—A. W. D.

THE SECRET OF ART

The real secret of art is feeling. The highest form of that feeling is that which the splendor of nature gives—the thrill and awe of terrible beauty. This is that inexplicable communication of the mind with the Unknowable that has created the religious sense. Said a friend to me yesterday, who is not a believer:—I stood in the Alps at sunrise, and I knew what religion meant." And I think of that passage in Wilson on Fetichism where he said that the sight of the splendid sky first created the religious sense. Terribly perverted this sense has been, no doubt; but it belongs, I fancy, to those things which are eternal, and will have a glorious avatar before our planet floats off into the cemetery of dead worlds. It is, I believe, the most powerful possible motive for true modern poetry—in harmony with science and scientific faith.—Lafcadio Hearn.

THEY SHOULD WORRY

One of our coed correspondents submits a list of men who should not have the right to vote. Although we feel that our correspondent is rather piqued at the result of the vote on amendment Number One we are glad to print the suggested list. Matinee idols, men who wear black and white sport shirts, followers of Anthony Comstock. college dudes, anti-suffragists, waiters (watchful and otherwise,) exponents of peace at any price, and men who read Florence Barclay's novels. Additional suggestions for this list will be welcomed.

PRAISES MILITARY TRAINING

Glen S. Warner, coach of Pitts' championship eleven, made an address to the students of one of the Pittsburgh prep schools last Thursday. He spoke mainly on the subject of athletics in schools and colleges. In part he said:

"I believe that every student in every school or college should go out for some branch of athletics, unless physically unable to do so. Most every person is fitted for some branch of athletics and if he will apply himself to that particular branch of sport he is bound to be succesful.

I notice that there is much talk in the papers about military training in schools and colleges. I feel that this is a step in the right direction and should be encouraged. Many of the athletes of today specialize in their particular branch, which sometimes makes it hard for the ordinary fellow to make good. If military training was to be introduced, every man would have an opportunity to get the exercise needed. It would be a wonderful thing."

"Many persons object to athletics on the grounds that the men are overtrained, causing physical disabilities in the future. Also that the studies are neglected. It has been my experience that the men who do not engage in athletics are worse off than the men who do, and as far as the studies go, I always demand that the men under me are up in their studies and cannot see why it is not possible to have every player up to snuff scholastically at all times."

Mr. Warner further stated that it was his opinion that athletics bring out the same qualities that are necessary to a successful life. Perseverance, teamwork, grit and stamina are the qualities which are necessary in a successful athlete and the same is true of life in general.

The Hash Slingers went through some strenuous practice lask week. Love sustained a broken collar bone, and Joe Campbell received a biff on the jaw that reduced his eating efficiency for a day or two.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh has issued the following Thanksgiving proclamation:

Let us reverently observe our day of Thanksgiving, not alone because it is a custom so to do, but because it is a privilege annually to make public acknowledgement of gratitude to God for His manifold mercies and blessings. We are a worthy people only as we are an humble and a devout people. Not to see the guiding wisdom of God in the affairs of men is to be ignorant of the vital controlling force in the uplift of our race.

We have had vouchsafed to us a year of health, plenty and social advance. Our commonwealth has been free from calamities. Our crops have been abundant. Our industries at the beginning of the year were languishing; they now are exceedingly prosperous. The deplorable war in Europe may be the occasion of this prosperity, It is regrettable that the misfortune of our neighbors should be the means of our prosperity. The sooner we reach a sound economic condition based upon a normal competitive market the better it will be for us. The present situation is one that may well cause us to take heed. The law of love is the only abiding law of progress.

In the spirit of solemn gratitude that we have been kept from the horors of war and that we have been blessed of God with material and spiritual good, let us gather in our several places of worship to take our reckoning to give thanks for bounteous blessings and to supplicate our Heavenly Father for continuing guidance and help.

WESTMINSTER'S SPORTS

Review of the Game With Grove City

The game with Grove City Saturday was a hard one to lose. From the beginning to the end of the game the Crimson team got all the breaks and these in addition to the big advantage in weight, enabled Grove City to score the lone touchdown that won the contest.

Westminster outplayed her opponents in every department of the game, except late in the first quarter when a fumble on the 30 yard line was recovered by Grove City. A good gain by Brown, and two penalties put the ball on the one yard line. On the fourth attempt the ball was carried over. During the entire game Grove City had but three first downs, one on straight football and two on penalties. Westminster had about ten first downs, only one being on a penalty. The ball was in Grove City's territory for three quarters.

Browr, the much vaunted punter of the Red team, came out of the game with as much glory as last summer's straw hat Except in the first quarter when he had a hurricane to carry the ball for him he kicked weak punts. Vance got off several nice punts.

Westminster seemed sure of a score late in the first half, when the ball was carried by means of line bucks to Grove Citys one yard line. It seemed as if the logical things to do was to hit the weakened Crimson line, giving the ball to Dart, Holland. or Wherry, all of whom had contributed good gains on the march down the field. An attempted wide run, though, lost several yards, and two attempts at the line failed, although the ball was but a few inches from the goal,

The one man on the Westminster team who was a real star was Captain McQuiston. He played a wonderful defensive game, stopping end runs and even blocking a forward pass in addition to holding his center position invulnerable. At one time in the first quarter he made four tackles in succession.

"Jim" McLaughrey was given a big ovation when he was put in late in the game. In spite of his injury the big tackle tore big holes in the Grove City line. The miserable condition of the field, however, prevented the backs from gaining much, although Wherry contributed two long runs. Dart made several good gains, ploughing his way by sheer strength.

The Westminster line played a fairly good defensive game although three-fourths of the tackling devoled upon McQuiston. The backs played good ball, but gave little interference to the runners. Fumbles were frequent, generallv to Grove City's advantage. These were due to the slippery condition of the field.

Mass Meeting Friday Night

The most enthusiastic mass meeting of the year was held in Chapel Friday evening. Cheerleader Kerr kept the enthusiasm at white heat. Rousing speeches were made by Coaches Parks, McLaughrey, Captain McQuiston, and several players. Dr. Ferguson, Prof. W. W. Campbell, and Prof. Moses voiced the sentiment of the faculty in wishing the team success. Among the alumni who spoke were Frank Andrews '14, William Moore '14, J. C. Fulton '15, Rev. A. A. Graham '91, M. M. Edmundson '01, and W. B. McCrory '01.

Irregulars Play Again

The Irregulars and the Hash Slingers played to a 12-12 tie Friday afternoon. The game was fast and hard fought in spite of the driving rain. The Irregulars had an easy time in the first half, scoring too touchdowns and being but one yard from the line when time was called. In the second half the Hash Slingers had their innings, and tied the score.

Westminster to Play Columbia

Prof. Campbell is arranging the football schedule for next year. Games have been scheduled with Pitt and Penn State. It is probable that a game will be arranged with Columbia University. Westminster is being recognized in the East as one of the best small college aggregations.

FOOTBALL NOTES

W. & J. had an easy time defeating Bethany 59 to 0 Saturday. Coach Folwell used thirty men in the game, giving the scrubs a chance inthe lineup.

Football honors in the western intercollegiate conference are divided between Minnesota and Illinois, with the Gophers having a slight advantage. The game between the two teams resulted in a 6-6 tie.

The annual Western Pennsylvania football classic will take place Thursday, when Pitt meets Penn State. Both teams have had victorious seasons, and this battle is expected to be the hardest fought in years. A Penn State victory will give Cornell a clear claim to the Champ[illegible]ship, while a Pitt victory will enable Warner to enter a claim for supremacy.

The Case 1905 eleven deleated the present Case team 12 to 0.

Tech closed the most successful football season in its history Saturday defeating Western Reserve 30 6. During the year Tech won 7 games and lost one to Pitt, scoring a total of 316 points, and holding the opposing teams to 61 points.

Mahan was a big factor in Harvard's overwhelming victor Saturday. The Crimson leader made four touchdowns and five goals from touchdowns for a total of 29 points. His teammates made 12 more.

Indiana won the prep school championship by beating Kiski 13 to 6.

"Dick" Stoops is playing halfback for Coraopolis this season.

Compulsory Chapel

At the Commencement meeting the Board of Trustees of Princeton University abolished compulsory daily chapel, and ordered voluntary chapel attendance instead. The Sunday chapel service will still be compulsory.

Russell Storey Elected President by the Board Today

REPORT OF NOMINATING COMMITTEE ACCEPTED

By the Board at The Meeting in Pittsburg Tuesday

PROF. STOREY AT PRESENT ON THE FACULTY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees in Pittsburgh this afternoon the committee appointed for the purpose nominated Prof. Russell Story as the new president of Westminster College. The nomination was accepted by the board, and the position was offered to Prof. Storey.

Prof. Storey if a graduate of Mommouth College. He has had wide experience as an educator, teaching three years at his alma mater and one year at Clark College. For the past two years he has been on the faculty of the University of Illinois.

In addition to his teaching experience Prof. Storey spent two years at Harvard University, working for a Ph. D. degree under Dr. Channing in History. and Political Science.

Prof. Storey is still a young man, being but thirty two years old. He is a nephew of Dr. W. E. McCulloch, who spoke at the college last spring. His father, Rev. William Murray Storey, graduated from Westminster in 1877. At present he is located in Media, Ill., but was formerly in charge of a U. P. congregation near James town.

Last Saturday Prof. Storey visited the College, and looked over the buildings and equipment. He was essecially pleased with the Science Hall. It is not known just when Prof, Storey will begin his new work, provided he accepts the honor offered him by the Board of Trustees.

SOME STATISTICS

The other evening there were seventeen people in the library, five girls and twelve boys. Two of the girls were studying James' "Psychology," two were reading works on Education, and one was pouring over the "Saturday Evening Post." Three of the boys were studying Education, one was read-James' "Psychology," one a history of Music, one a religious periodical, one "Collins," one "Current Opinions," one "Saturday Evening Post," one was studying debate, and another was looking over Kant's "Critique of Pure Reason." The other fellow had nothing better to do than collect this very useful information.

Remember the Holcad when you have any news items.

Christian Association Meeting

The Christian Associations will meet as usual this evening. Mary Sloan will have charge of the Y.W. C.A., her subject being "Keeping the Sabbath." The Y.M.C.A. will be led by Roy Lash. The subject is "Danger Stop."

CLUBS SERENADED BY THE GIRLS

Boys Enjoy Rare Musical Treat Wednesday Evening

Wednesday night the "Hillside" girls chaperoned by Miss Knott visited the four clubs, favoring each with a serenade. The first step was at the Crescent Club. At the close the fellows served some refreshments. The girls then went to the Van Club. From there they went to the Kelly where another "feed" was waiting for them. The Neshannock was the last club visited where the concert was cut short on account of the lateness of the hour, The serenades were splendid and more than one fellows felt his heart beat a little faster as he thought of one who was singing out there under the stars.

THANKSGIVING DINNER

Everyone who attended the "Hillside" Thanksgiving dinner spent a most enjoyable evening.

The tables were beautifully decorated with fall flowers and candles, while at each place was a lovely hand painted place card on which was written a Thanksgiving verse. The dinner consisted of every delicacy that one could desire. Everyone left the dining room with a feeling of fullness but wishing thrt they could eat more.

Spaghetti

Charlotte Logan has promised the staff an essay telling the value of spaghetti as an article of food.

The essay is to be based on personal experience. Miss. Logan also praises "Forgette" as an article of diet,

FIRST GIRL'S DEBATING CLUB

Club Has Been Organized and Officers Elected for the Year

It has been considered advisable for the girls of our college to organize a debating society, and at a meeting appointed by the chairman this week, some fifteen girls reported for membership. The challenge of the Pitt team was rejected for the time being but may be considered later when a team has baen selected which will be able creditably to support the reputation of Westminster in fields of learning. Undoubtedly great profit may be derived from the intelligent consideration of every day problems which would present themselves and it is to be hoped that the girls debating team may soon take definite shape. We want "a team at Westminster to tread on their toes."

The following officers have been elected: President, Marie Lytle, Vice President, Marion Kitch, Secretary, Vera Toy.

THE DEBATE PRELIMINARIES.

Sophomore Debaters are Selected this Afternoon

At the preliminaries this afternoon Ashbrook, McGeogh, and Britt were chosen to represent the Sophmore class in the interclass debate. Ferguson was chosen as alternate. Professors Shot, Shaffer, and Moses acted as judge.

One Hour and Twenty Minutes

Brown raced down the stairs, forced his way through a crowd of angry Turks, leaped to the back of his pink and green diplodocus —and woke with a start. Automatically he reached out and silenced the alarm clock that stood on the chair beside the bed. Then he sat up in bed, and yawned noisily.

"John, your train leaves in just one hour and twenty minutes," shrilled his wife from the next room.

Brown remembered his New York trips, and jumped out of bed, deftly shedding his pajamas at the same time. With the natural grace and speed of a Pittsburgh stock broker he dressed and shaved. Then, seizing the suitcase his wife had packed with malice aforethought, he ran to the breakfast room. He consumed shredded wheat, ham, eggs, coffee and doughnuts with a happy disregard for Mr. Fletcher, while glancing over the headlines of the paper propped against the sugar bowl.

"John, put away that paper. It's ten after seven and your train leaves at eight ten," insisted his better two-thirds.

He gulped down the last of his coffee, slipped into the overcoat she held for him, stuffed the paper into his pocket, picked up his suitcase, jerked his hat from the rack in hall, kissed his wife noisily, and started down the steps.

"Goodbye, John. Be careful. Keep away from the roof gardens. Don't forget my furs. Don't go to that Winter Garden Show. Don't forget to wear your flannel."

At the corner Brown caught a streetcar. Congratulating himself on his luck he reached into his pocket for a nickle. To his dismay he discovered he had left his pocket book at home. At the next corner he jumped off the car, and ran home. Puffing noisily he rushed past his surprised wife, explaining as he went.

"Forgotmuh—dampocketb o o k-wher—hellisitany way—Igotithereondresser—damfooltrick—g o o d-bye."

After a fifteen minute wait at the corner, during which time there was no sign of a car, Jones jerked along in his new Ford. Seeing Brown on the corner he stopped.

"Going down town?"

"Yeh—to the station."

"Jump in."

Brown did jump in, and on his way to the station spent his time reading about Armenian massacres, looking at his watch, and listening to Jones tell about the marvels of the Ford. At sixteen minutes to eight he walked into the Union Station, bought his ticket and stuffed it into his pocket book, and settled down to wait. For a moment he glanced at the paper, then threw it aside. Once or twice he yawned. Then his head slipped lower and lower. The pink and green diplodocus flapped its wings, and flew towards the waiting pocket book, which hung lazily on the edge of a yellow cloud.

A well-dressed man with a brown derby glanced at Brown, then sat beside him. With an ease born of long practice he slipped his hand into the inside pocket, and drew forth the pocketbook. For a few minutes he sat quietly, then walked carelessly away.

Brown rested on the back of the diplodocus with a beautiful houri beside him. Sudddenly there was a terrific noise,—again he woke with a start.

"—Harrisburg, Philadelphia and New York," rumbled the caller.

Seizing his suitcase Brown ran to the gate. Ignoring the watchman he raced for his train, and swung abroad the last car. Panting from his exertion he sank into the nearest seat. When the conductor came Brown reached for his pocket book. With a growing dismay on his face he searched through all his pockets. At length he turned he turned to the conductor

"Must have lost my pocket book," he explained.

"Sorry boss."

"Can't you trust me—my watch as security."

"Against the rules. Sorry. Next station's Wilmerding. Ticket, please."

At Wilmerding Brown left the train escorted by the conductor, who left him standing alone on the station platform. Brown went to the waittng room, sat down in the corner, and swore softly. He could not think of any acquaintance in Wilmerding. Lazily he wondered what to do next. His head sank until his chin rested on his tie. The pink and green diplodocus stopped before one of the castles, and the beautiful houri led Brown up the steps.

HEROES IN HISTORY

Universal History, the history of what man has accomplished in this world, is at bottom the history of the Great Men who have worked here. They were the leaders of men, these great ones; the modellers, patterns, and in a wide sense creators, of whatsoever the general mass of men contrived to do or to attain; all things that we see standing accomplished in the world are properly the outer material result, the practical realizations and embodiment of Thoughts that dwelt in the Great Man sent into the world; the soul of the whole world's history, it may jnstly be considered, were the history of these.—Carlyle.

Dr. Jeffers' Funeral on Monday, at York, Pa.

The exercises connected with the burial of Dr. E. T. Jeffers, President of Westminster College from 1872 to 1883 took place in York, Pa., at 2 p. m., Monday Nov. 22, 1915. They were appropriately held in the building of the York Collegiate Institute where for twenty-two years he was the leading spirit. His fine form, lay within view of the entering people with a back ground of flowers artistically arrranged, flowers in great profusion, the gift of his many friends in the city and elsewhere.

There were present representatives of churches and institutions which he served—Attorney Hays of Oil City, Rev. J. H. Thompson of Pittsburgh a Princeton classmate, and I were privileged to convey the sympathies of Westminster College. His Colleagues of Westminster Presbytery were there and members of the "Cleric" which centers in Harrisburg.

The exercises were in charge of Rev. Dr. Oliver, who assisted Dr. Jeffers in his work in recent months and the only address was by Rev. Dr. Ely of Columbia, a special friend. It was a fine tribute of praise and gracefully and feelingly spoken. The remaining exercises were given by the Presbyterian ministers of the city, including Rev. Dr. Howard Wilson, pastor of the U. P. Church and a graduate of Westminster in Dr. Jeffers' time.

The impression was borne in upon us from many sides that a great and good man had passed away. For eleven weeks he suffered and in the end succumbed to the disease—meeting the final test of a great character in patient endurance.

The following members of his family live to mourn his loss and cherieh his memory. Miss Mary, a professor in Tulans University, George, a business man in Harrisburg, Mrs. Harriet Curtis, wife of Rev. Dr. Curtis of Harrisburg, Roland of Coatsville, and Miss Evetta the youngest daughter who has for years been the ever vigilant and loving companion of her father.

Dr. McLaughrey of the Overlook a near friend of Miss Mary Jeffers was with her friend over Sabbath and counted as one of them.

Dr. Jeffers was my classmate and friend, graduating from Jefferson college in 1862. For 50 years and more I have know and loved him. Soon after he came to Westminster in 1872, I became a pastor in Butler and by his favor I soon became a member of the governing board and every year was brought into touch with him and his work. I was a frequent guest in his house and a sharer in his delightful fellowship. It was always with a thrill of gladness that we met. What a charming companion he was! With quip and quirk and words of sober sense the hours went quick and profitably by. The exchange of letter, not many nor long, but spirited and cordial kept up the pleasant relationship. In quite recent years we have been associated together in summoning the remnant of our college class to our 50th anniversary of graduation in 1912. There were twelve present out of fifty and I closed a brief sketch of the reunion at the time with these words that required no prophetic forecast to write—"It is expected to have another reunion in five years. Who of us will reach it; There is only one who knows." Five of these have already been promoted and the last is Dr. Jeffers the liveliest of us all. Farewell, dear friend, 'til we meet again.

Dr. R. G. Ferguson.

LIFE'S SUMMIT

Are you in the night? Climb yet higher and you come to the light.

For the peace and the light are right above us—above the storm and the night.

And life is the journey from the storm and the night to the peace and the light. . . .

Every day gets better, because every day we get a little farther up. Every day we look down upon some storms that used to terrify us. Every day we rise above the legacy of our limitations. None of these things move us now.

Today is our best day, because today we are highest up.

So our last days of earth become our best.

Some time my night may come. It will spread over the valley of material things. But I shall stand on the mountain-top, my Nebo, in the day, and the night will be down in the valley with the storms. I shall find life's mountain-top just another shelf on the side of the Mountain of Infinite Unfoldment.—From "The University of Hard Knocks" by Ralph Parlette.

THE HOLCAD is trying to boost the College, but it cannot do very much without the co-operation of students, faculty, and alumni. May we repeat the lines along which this cooperation is necessary. First, send in essays, stories, poems, letters, jokes, news items, —anything concerning college life. We want to make the paper interesting. Second, patronize our advertisers. Deal with firms that are interested enough in your trade to advertise in your school paper.

FIFTEEN MORE school days before vacation! Wouldn't it be a good idea to settle down to that task we've been putting off from day to day? We will get much more joy out of vacation if we go home knowing that our school work is completed to the minute. Let's finish up our work before the holidays so we can begin the new year with a clean slate. Fifteen days of good hard work will make vacation worth while.

IT IS A TRUE SAYING that the salvation of the world depends upon the men who don't fit in. The saddest fact in history is that most men and women are content to slip into a place, and remain there. Of course, that is the easiest and safest plan of action. Nothing is so hard as to turn against the tide of orthodox opinion. Yet every true leader must do that thing. A few days ago a doctor was man enough to break away from routine to save a child untold suffering. His act was upheld by the thoughtful minority, but the orthodox crowd held up its hands in holy horror. The doctor was a man who did not fit in. The college student who wishes to be a leader, who wishes to help the world in some way, must not be content with merely fitting in.

REAL ENTHUSIASM IS something more than the moral blare of brass trumpets. It is the aiding inner motive power that starts a man on the way to acomplish some task, and keeps him working until the task is finished. No doubt all of us have felt that somewhere in the big world a great task awaits us,—a task that will demand the fullest use of all our powers. And we have felt that we could enter a great national or world reform with true enthusiasm. Experience has taught, however, that the world is composed of little things. The demands upon us will increase according as we increase in power. If we take each task as it comes we will never find anything too difficult. Let us learn in college to be enthusiastic in our work and in our play. And remember, real enthusiasm is not a sudden and spasmodic flare—it is deep, vital, and abiding.

From the Periscope

The man who stands and waits can always be found waiting at the same old stand.

When a fellow says "Believe me," you begin to doubt him.

One way of telling a paper's policy is by observing what it doesn't comment on editorially.

The unrealities are often the greatest things in life.

Some men reach the height of their ambition when the bartender serves them a certain drink without having to be told.

The speed demon generally runs into everything, including debt.

A PRAYER

Let me have a good sense of proportions. Let me live in Today, instead of living so greatly in the Past, counting so largely upon the Future. Teach me to realize that regrets over the Past will get me nothing, while too great preparation for the future may find me in my grave and unable to cash in on the climax. Enable me to get into the cheerful frame of mind where Today always looks fair and bright, where all the disagreeable things in the Past are forgotten and where the Future does not assume a vastly over-rated importance in the Present.—Personality.

Mary McAnnlis '15 spent a few days at the Hillside recently.

Hall and Walter Braham, both of the class of 1915, were home over Thanksgiving.

Rev. E. A. Campbell '01 of Crafton Heights has accepted a call from Clintonville U. P. Church.

Dr. Ferguson made an address at the dedication of the Browne Memorial in New Castle this afternoon.

Dr. A. R. Robinson '89 was in town on business Saturday. Dr. Robinson is President of the Board of Trustees.

Lawrence Shoemaker, son of F. B. Shoemaker '00 of Plaingrove Pa., has been very ill with scarlet fever but is now convalescent.

Mary Wright '14, A. E. Wright '11, Clara Williams '11, and L. H. Conway '12 spent the Thanksgiving season at the homes of their parents in town.

The five Westminster men who are Juniors at the Seminary made an excellent showing in a recent Hebrew examination, every one of them making over 95%.

A PLEASANT PROSPECT

The manager of the Girl's Glee Club received the following reply to a letter of inquiry:

"I would like much, very much, to have you sing for the dear people of ——. And they would so much enjoy it. You can reach the place with no more than five changes of cars going and as many returning, with only a single night out each way on the road. You would have to make the last lap on a coal train, but Joll- College girls would not care for that. We would have to sleep you among the farmers after the entertainment, but just think of cider, apple butter, sausage, and new milk! We could drum you up an audience of a whole hundred, which with your own eighteen would make lots. Some of the farmers would take you to the station in their farm wagons which would be jolly. Could you bring a piano with you? The money—ah, there's the rub!"

PERSONALS

McNaugher attended the W.&J.-Lehigh game.

"Bill" Ashbrook spent Thanksgiving at Beaver Falls.

"Pinky" and "Jim" attended the Pitt-State game on Thanksgiving.

Jean Kerr, Marian Kitch, and Flora Zimmer spent Thanksgiving at home.

Lawrence Milligan, and Ralph Wallace were in Youngstown Thursday.

For once, Margret Littel and Charlotte Logan had a busy sign on their door.

Haskell Patton, Basil Murray and "Jimmy" Kerr spent Thanksgiving at Slippery Rock.

Mary Alana Dennison went home for another Thanksgiving dinner, as did also Kitty Troup and Charlotte Logan.

It has been said that "Bob" and Jean are an ideal couple. They held up a radiator in the lower hall Saturday morning.

Margret Chick entertained her friend by leaving Miss Weil to the tender mercies of Bill while she strolled with "Hash."

Hasting, Douthett, Mercer, and Ferguson were among the Westminster students who were at the Pitt-State game Thursday.

Things That Puzzle Us

Who tackled Joe Thompson?

Why does a man invariably put on his left shoe last?

Why are freshmen so addicted to senior's conversation?

What does a girl say when she stubs her toe in the dark?

How the editor had nerve enough to print my puzzling questions?

Who originated the idea that Harold Bell Left was a great novetist?

Who was mean enough to inflict the first Ford joke on suffering humanity?

When does a proud High School senior change to a crying College freshman?

How can a woman protest against the cruelties of war while she is wearing the feathers of a mother aigrette on her hat?

Next Number on Lecture Course

Thomas Brooks Fletcher to be the Speaker of the Evening

Mr. Thomas Brooks Fletcher will present the third number on the Community Lyceum Course in the Second U. P. Church, Thursday evening, Dec. 2. Mr. Fletcher is one of the youngest orators on the platform today, but he already has the reputation of being one of the most brilliant and logical men on the lyceum circuits. His lectures on "Tragedies of the Unprepared," "The Modern Judas," and

THOMAS BROOKS FLETCHER

"The Martyrdom of Fools," have gained favorable comment in all parts of the country.

Mr. Fletcher is a keen and convincing thinker, and a fascinating speaker. His lectures deal with live, interesting topics, and his arguments are driven home by apt, effective stories and illustrations. He is one of the few men who are able to combine impassioned oratory with cool logical judgment.

YOU SHOULD READ

Under this heading each week we intend to publish the name of some book or magazine article which every student should read. We will try to point out articles that are origional, instructive, and entertaining. Especially we'll try to to present articles that are different, that present unusual phases of ordinary questions. This week the article is "Through Mohammedean Spectacles" by Achmed Abduullah (Forum Vol. 52 Page 484). It presents the East and Ortental mind in a new way.

This article has been called the most illuminating that appeared in any magazine during the year. It is well worth reading.

"The Spires of Oxford."

[We are so busy with our daily work and play that the great war seems very far away. Occasionally, however, we read something that brings to our mind the fact that college students are playing a great part in the war. That is the thought presented in the appealing poem, "The Spires of Oxford" by W. M. Letts, which we take the liberty of reprinting from the "Literary Digest." Miss Letts' poem originally appeared in the "Westminster Gazette."—Editor.]

I saw the spires of Oxford
As I was passing by.
The gray spires of Oxford
Against a pearl-gray sky.
My heart was with the Oxford men
Who went abroad to die.

The years go fast in Oxford
The golden years and gay.
The hoary colleges look down
On careless boys at play.
But when the bugles sounded war
They put their games away.

The cricket field, the quad
The shaven lawns of Oxford
To seek a bloody sod--
They gave their merry youth away
For country and for God.

God rest you, happy gentlemen,
Who laid your good lives down,
Who took the khaki and the gun
Instead of cap and gown.
God bring you to a fairer place
Than even Oxford town.

THANKSGIVING FEEDS

Feeds were rife at the Hillside last Friday night. We hear of at least six persons who helped their friends to celebrate the close of Thanksgiving season by festivities and merriment. Some few were fortunate enough to be invited to more than one and Julia Carnes managed to attend three. It is reported that Dot Murray in a fit of rash hilarity tried to execute a kind of Highland Fling and kicked her foot so hard that she caused her slipper to land in a plate of turkey salad.

A bitter Fate.—A number of local Grand Army veterans were having a reunion, and were entertainining brother members from a neighboring State. Some of the visiting veterans protested against certain proposed legislation by the State Assembly.

One of the speakers became so vehement in remarks painting the situation so dispairingly that an earnest auditor, overwhelmed by the oratory, jumped to his feet and cried excitedly:

A PERFECT PROGRAM

The story has the merit of being true, anyhow: The official pessimist of a small Western city, a gentleman who had wrestled with chronic dyspepsia for years stood in front of the post office as the noon whistles sounded.

Twelve o'clock, eh? he said, half to himself and half to an acquaintance. Well, I'm going home to dinner. If dinner ain't ready I'm going to raise hell; and if it is ready I ain't going to eat a bite.—Saturday Evening Post.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Hamilton Fish, Jr., told a war story at a smoker at the officers' training-camp in Plattsburg.

Two brothers, Russian, he said, were captured in the Karpathians and sent to a prison camp in Germany.

Their mother heard nothing from them for a long while, and the poor woman was nearly distracted. Then, at last she got a letter, a letter from the elder brother, Piotr.

Dear mother, he wrote, here I am in the lovely German prison-camp. I have a beautiful room, with use of bath. The bed is comfortable, clean sheets every week, good food and plenty of it. Beer to drink and cigars to smoke. I am very happy.

Irregulars Win Easily

Score Three Touchdowns on the Hash Slingers of the Hillside

College football fans were treated to a rare display of pigskin juggling last Saturday afternoon when the world-famed irregulars met face to face in deadly combat with a motley array, commonly known as the Hash Slingers. An immense crowd witnessed the conflict, and cheer after cheer echoed back and forth among the grass blades of the new athletic field.

The Hash Slingers appeared on the field first, their green, yellow, purple, red, blue and orange jerseys giving them a resemblance to a bunch of potato bugs attempting a turkey trot on a patchwork quilt. Captain Minteer led his bunch of scrubs and high school stars on the field a few minutes later.

Neither team scored during the first quarter, the Irregulars rushing the ball into their opponents territory but being unable to score. In the second quarter one of Aldermans punts was blocked, and Richards recovered for the first score of the game.

Late in the third quarter McGrann, who no doubt had been making a study of "Hub" Stewart's famous run at Grove City last year, picked up a fumble and scored a touchdown for the Irregulars. After that the Hash Slingers did not have the ghost of a chance. Two forward passes from the famous spread formation gave the Irregulars the ball on the 30 yard line, and Alderman smashed thru for another score. With just a few minutes to play Minteer kicked off to Lash. Cummings intercepted a forward pass, and ran for the final score. The feature of the game was the line plunging of Alderman. Score, Irregulars 18, Hash Slingers 6. Lineup:

Irregulars–18		Hash Slingers–6
Grundish	l e	Shott
Mercer	l t	Randolph
Dickson	l g	Braham
Barr	c	Clark
Hart	r g	Cummings
McGrann	r t	Lawther

High School Wins

The local High School closed its season Thanksgiving Day by trouncing Sharpsville High 31 to 0. Although slighty outweighed the locals excelled in every department of the game. The features of the game were two long passes, Beighle to Phillips, both of which resulted in touchdowns. Anderson and Phillips were the individual stars.

INTELLIGENT YOUTH

The boy was very small and the load he was pushing in the wheelbarrow was very, very big.

A benevolent old gentleman, putting down his bundles, lent him a helping hand.

Really, my boy, he puffed, I don't see how you manage to get that barrow up the gutters alone.

I don't, replied the appreciative kid. Dere's always some jay a-standin' round as takes it up for me.—Puck.

FOOTBALL NOTES

"Bob" Peck has been selected to lead the Pitt eleven next year.

The University of Washington team has not lost a game for eight years.

By scoring 17 points in the final quarter Cornell defeated Pennsylvania 24 to 9. Barrett contributed 18 of Cornell's total.

Theil walloped Hiram 28 to 13. At the same time Bethany lost 21 to 7 to the light Davis-Elkins eleven. Both Canon and Strathern were in the Bethany lineup.

Bucknell completely outplayed Lebanon Thanksgiving, but lost the game when Mackert kicked a goal from placement. A good kicker often enbles a weaker team to take the game.

Grove City defeated Allegheny Thursday 9-7. The Meadville team gained more ground than Grove City. Thorn scored the winning touchdown in the last few minutes of play.

W. & J. defeated the heavy Leigh aggregation 27-3. Folwell's team surprised Lehigh by playing straight football, instead of the aerial game that was expected. Witherspoon was the star of the game.

Pitt's 20 to 0 defeat of Penn State gives the Smoky City team a right to dispute the championship with Cornell. Hastings scored 17 of the 20 points, and Gougler contributed a placement kick. Stan Ewing played a brilliant defensive game for State.

The game between West Virginia University and West Virginia Wesleyan was really a contest between Rodgers, the University fullback, and Kellison, captain of the Wesleyan eleven. Kellison played a wonderful game on defense, and if his teamates had given him any support the result might have been different.

Browne Memorial Unveiled

Former President of Westminster Honored at New Castle

The memory of Dr. Robert Audley Browne former president of Westminster College, was fittingly honored in New Castle last Tuesday, when a monument was unveiled in the Oak Park Cemetery. The memorial momument honors Dr. Browne's services as citizen, soldier, patriot and instructor, which have won for him the sobriquet of Lawrence County's First Citizen.

After brief services at the cemetery a meeting was held in the First U. P. Church, of which Dr. Browne was pastor for many years. There addresses were made by Rev. T. W. Douglas, James A. Gardner, and Dr. R. G. Ferguson. The text of Dr. Ferguson's address will be found on another page. Col. Norman Maxwell acted as presiding officer.

During the Civil War Dr. Browne was chaplain of the 100th Roundhead Regiment, and the services were attended by many of the old veterans. Even in the cold at the cemetery they stood with uncovered head as a mark of reverent respect for the dead comrade. In 1868 Dr. Browne was called to the presidency of the College, and acted in that capacity for three years. He was succeeded by the late Dr. Jeffers.

INTERCLASS DEBATE

The annual Freshman-Sophomore debate will be held Wednesday evening, December 15. The question is "Resolved, that the United States should prohibit the exportation of war materials to beligerent nations." Ashbrook, Britt, McGeogh, and Ferguson make up the Sophomore team. Lowstetter, Richards, Taylor, and Gilfillan will represent the Fresh men.

Merry Christmas to All!

A Peasant Child

A peasant Child was born—and at His birth
The awe-struck shepards came with worship meet,
And mighty kings laid tribute at His feet
Gold, frankincense, and myerh of prieeless worth.
From Heaven's opal portals to the earth
Bright hosts of chanting angels came to greet
The new-born Child with strains of music sweet—
A proud Magnificat of praise and mirth.

A peasant Child—but ever since that night
A world has tried to follow after Him
Great kings have sought Him from their lofty height.
And over all the earth, in haunts of wrong,
In hospitals, in camps, in churches dim,
Have lingered still the strains of angel song.

—W. G.

Debate Question Is Decided

The question for the intercollegiate debates has been decided upon as follows: Resolved that there should be an International Police Force to enforce Internation Law, and to preserve International peace. This question will be used extensively in college circles this year.

Debates have been arranged with Geneva, Pitt, and Penn State, the last two here and the first at Beaver Falls. The preliminary contest to choose the members of the teams will be held early in January.

The girls are planning to enter the field of debating this year. Challenges have been received from Pitt and Geneva, and there will probably be a co-ed intercollegiate debate.

ARTISTS RECITAL

The third artist recital will be presented Wednesday evening December 8, when Miss Christine Schultz of New York City will appear in Chapel. Miss Schultz has a rich contralto voice, and her recital is expected to be one of the best of the year.

Rumor Says Dr. Hankey is Dead

A rumor is circulating to the effect that Dr. D. C. Hankey has been killed in Servia. According to the story a Servian in Sharon received the news in a letter from his native country. Dr. Hankey graduated from Westminster in 1909. For a time he was principal of New Wilmington High School. For the past year he has been engaged in Red Cross work in Servia.

Thomas Brooks Fletcher

Most Original Speaker That Ever Appeared on a Local Platform

The third number on the Community Lyceum Course was presented in the Second U. P. Church Thursday evening, December 2, by Thomas Brooks Fletcher, Dramatic Orator. This was Mr. Fletcher's first appearance in New Wilmington, and he won his way into the hearts of the audience by his originality, humor, and sheer daring. During the entire lecture he held the listeners in the grip of his personality.

Mr. Fletcher's subject was "The Martyrdom of Fools." Fools he divided into two classes: the real fools, and those who are considered fools by other people. Both classes of fools are martyred, the first by their own sins and vices and the others by a society that does not understand them.

The lecture was filled with apt and forcible illustrations, both humorous and tragic. Mr. Fletcher has the knack of driving startling truths home, and he does not spare his audience in his talk. He is one of the most original speakers that have appeared on a local course.

FRESHMEN PRELIMINARIES

The freshman debate preliminary was held Adelphic Hall last Wednesday afternoon. Lowstetter, Taylor, Richards, and Gilfillan as alternate were chosen to represent the class. Professors Barr, Smith, and Moses were judges. Alderman acted as chairman.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY

"Ezra Jones of Jonesville" will be presented in the High School Auditorium Friday and Saturday December 10 and 11. Saturday evening is Westminster night, and all the College students are invited to attend. H. P. Igo '15 is directing the play.

Dr. Browne as An Instructor

[An address by Dr. R. G. Ferguson in New Castle last Tuesday.]

"Dr. Robert Audley Browne was called to the presidency of Westminster college from the pastorate of the First New Castle congregation in the year 1867, and continued in his work for three years, when he retunred to the church he formerly served. It may be that this period of his life does not loom so large in the view of his contemporaries as his brillant service in the army as chaplain or his long service of a single congregation, or even his distuingished advocacy of measures of reform. And yet the years spent in educational work were an episode in his career of no small importance.

He came to the college with the prestige of success in former fields and his very name added dignity to the institution. Might I say that he tided it past a place of anxiety and possible danger and prepared the way for others who came after him.

I am to say a few words about Dr. Browne as an instructor. The complete transition from the pulpit to the class room—from being a great preacher to being a great teacher, requires time. Though the offices are close of kin, they are not quite the same. We sometimes hear it said of one, 'He preached like a teacher,' and less frequently of another, 'He teaches like a preacher.' Dr. Browne had the gift of melliflous, eloquent speech and had exercised the gift for years, and I would not wonder if he found it somewhat difficult to compress himself into the narrower bounds of the class room. Perhaps he was less incisive than the man with the everlasting quiz. Perhaps the interrogation point was not always at the end of his tongue. But those who heard him speak would be sure the class that sat before him would be stimulated and instructed by his clear logical speech whatever might be the form of speech.

I have not been able to get into touch with his pupils so as to get first-hand testimony concerning his method. I received a letter from one whose name if I should mention it, would carry weight in all this region of Western Pennsylvania and throughout the whole country indeed—one well cognizant of all the facts concerning our college and in the letter, after speaking of his 'large brain power' and of some trials through which he passed, he added: 'I believe that the farther his college life recedes in point, the deeper grows our respect for him and the warmer becomes our love.'

In this he no doubt voices the sentiment of many and especially of those who were under him from 1867 to 1870. They hold him ih high esteem that grew afterwards with the years.

All this has to do with the particular theme I am speaking upon. His efficient and honorable career both before and after his brief period as an educator give assurance of the valuable work done while in the presidency of Westminster. Whatever position he occupied he could not be less than himself. And after all the 'instructor' is more than the instruction—the man is more than his message.

The influence of the bearing and character of the man is more important than his skill in imparting knowledge or even in developing mind.

Edward Everett Hale closes a chat on 'How I was educated' with this remarkable summary: 'My experience with schools and with the college teachers were to distrust all the mechanisms of education. One comes back to Mr. Emerson's word, 'It is little matter what you learn, the question is with whom you learn.'

I am not able to tell you much about the mechanism of Dr. Browne's class room work. But I am sure there was a forceful, strong man behind it. All that he shower himself to be in the various walks of life—as pastor, chaplain, reformer—he was in the narrower quieter field of the school.

It was worth while to sit in the presence of that erect, manly form and listen to the words that poured from his earnest soul from day to day. It was worth while to feel the beating of that heart that throbbed with intense love for truth and man and God. The impress of the man was more than all his words, however execellent.

Courtesy and courage complement each other as Christian virtues and they both appeared conspiciously in him. They were in the grain of the wood and could not but appear. They could not but be reflected in the character and life of his pupils under his care.

May this memorial monument unveiled today, the expression of the love of many not only preserve him in memory, but perpetuate the gracious, invigorating influence of his life—make men brave and curteous, like the Master he served.

The Waiters Cries

The waiter who bawls out his orders to the cook in the kitchen may soon be as extinct as the dodo, but his cries should live forever.

"Mutton broth in a hurry," says the customer. Baa-baa in the rain! Make him run!" shouts the waiter.

"Beefsteak and onions," says the customer. "John Bull! Make him a ginny!" shouts the waiter.

"Where's my baked potatoes?" asks a customer. "Mrs. Murphy in a sealskin coat!" shouts the waiter.

"Two fried eggs. Don't fry 'em too hard," says a customer. "Adam and Eve in the Garden? Leave their eyes open!" shouts the waiter.

"Poached eggs and toast," says the customer. "Bride and groom on the raft!" shouts the waiter.

"Chicken croquettes," says the customer. "Fowl ball!" shouts the waiter.

"Hash," says the customer. "Gentleman wants to take a chance!" shouts the waiter. "I'll have hash, too," says the next customer. "Another sport!" shouts the waiter.

"Glass of milk," says the customer. "Let it rain!" shouts the waiter.

"Frankfurters and sauerkraut, good and hot,.' says a customer. "Fido, Shep and a bale of hay!" shouts the waiter, "and let 'em sizzle!"—Ex.

The boys who were in Camp Suegin at the New Wilmington Conference last summer will hold a round-up December 27 and 28 in the Second U. P. Church, N. S., Pittsburgh. Every fellow that is interested is invited to attend.

SELF-BETRAYED

A sentry was giving close attention to his post in the neighborhood of a British army camp in England, chalenging returning stragglers late afte1 dark. The following is reported as an incident of his vigil:

"Who goes there?" called the sentry at the sound of approaching footsteps.

"Coldstream Guards!" was the response.

"Pass, Coldstream Guards!" rejoined the sentry.

"Who goes there?" again challenged the sentry.

"Forty-ninth Highlanders!" returned the unseen pedestrian.

"Pass, Forty-ninth Highlanders!"

"Who goes there?" sounded a third chalenge.

"None of your d——n business!" was the husky reply.

"Pass, Canadians!" acquiesed the sentry.—Omaha World-Herald

IN THE MIDST OF the festivites and pleasures of Christmas vacation we should not forget the college. Each one of us should give, as a Christmas present to Westminster, a generous amount of personal advertising. We are sure to meet prep students who are planning to go to college. A word from us, boosting Westminster, will be of more influence than a dozen letters or bulletins.

IT SEEMS STRANGE THAT we herein America are looking forward to a happy, prosperous Christmas season. Europe is frantic in the midst of great preparations of war. And yet there is little we as individuals can do to alleviate the horror of the situation, save to resolve that when the time does come our efforts will be put forth to aid in building the shattered homes and cities. In the meantime it seems as if the war will have to go on until men tire of the uselessness and awfulness of it all. But in this season when the civilized world is looking back, in some sense at least, to the birth of the Prince of Peace, it is a shame that innocent women and children must live in want, mourning bread winners who died on the battlefield. Merry Christmas to the men shivering in the death-swept trenches! And a Merry Christmas to their wives and children! The miserable irony of it! Rather say, God help them all.

THE TRUE SPIRIT OF Christmas is often forgotten in the maze of pleasures that enter in to the modern celebration of the day. The average person's idea of Christmas Day is a bewildering mingling of gifts, hockey games, turkey, dancing, visitors, candy, theaters and indigestion. And in the midst of all this the spiritual significance of the season is entirely lost. The anniversary of the birth of Christ who preached universal love has degenerated into a mere festival of the hearth, when the prosperity of the family is celebrated as openly as possible. Instead of trying to follow Christ's example of love for humanity most men devote themselves exclusively and selfishly to the material desires of themselves and of their families. Of course it is a splendid thing to be interested in the welfare and pleasures of our immediate friends, but at the same time we should remember Christ's great example of love for all men. And the best way of showing our respect and esteem and love for Christ is by doing some kind deed to a stranger in remembrance of Him.

HOLIDAY HANDKERCHIEFS

Get some to take home with you, for you will not find as good a selection anywhere else outside of the large cities. I have made a specialty of fine handkerchiefs for the Christmas trade for years, and this year is no exception. Also an unusually fine line of ladies' fine neckwear and other novelties for the Christmas trade. Why not come in and look at them while you have time to match your selections? Come in, if not wanting to buy, and look things over. You are always welcome at this store, which students have made their headquarters for the past 25 years. So come right along.

PERSONALS

It's odd how many fellows are taking boys to the lectures this year.

Why did Gladys Krause and Lowstetter come in late to Latin class?

Herbert Jamison spent the week end at his home in Pittsburgh.

Paul Miller attended a matinee party in New Castle Saturday afternoon.

"Little Bob Stewart easily lead his class." That was news to Dean Freeman, at least.

The Cozy Corner gave a delightful feed Saturday evening after the basketball game.

Speaking of the new president:

Foxy; Well, for my part I hope he is in favor of co-education.

Olive Hickman refused to be satisfied until she got her face in the picture Monday afternoon.

Freshman girl: Oh, I just love gym.

Pinky Miller: Well I like that!

Edmund Shott spent an hour in Biology lab gazing at a comet. Ask "Butch" to explain this joke.

Rev. Allen of Beaver Falls lectured Wednesday evening in the Presbyterian church on the Jewish Tabernacle and its ceremonies.

Mrs. McClure attended a student volunteer conference at Gettysburg last week. She spoke at two sessions of the conference.

Prof. Mills surely hasn't much respect for the masculine gender. A few more Biology recitations, and co-education will be wrecked forever.

At the lecture Sam McCullogh remarked, "I wonder who the little prep girl is?"

The little prep girl turned out to be Marion Hover.

"Butch" McQuiston made a business trip to Youngstown Saturday. He did his Christmas shopping early, buying everything from a new overcoat to a spear of Red Man.

"Dave" Schnable, who has been absent from school for several weeks on account of illness of his father, was in town several days last week. He returned to Lowellville Saturday.

Six of the great critics of the age were in the library Friday afternoon. They got into such heated arguments that Miss Mitchell was compelled to call them at least ten times—more or less.

Alumni

Mabel Henderson '08 visited friends in town recently.

A few days ago Loyd Cleland '13 was seen urging his merry little Ford through town.

F. W. Orr '15 is principal of Cherryville (N. C.) High School. He is teaching English, Solid Geometry, and is coaching the basketball teams. In addition he has several pupils in Public Speaking.

Dr. Temple spent only $811 in his recent congressional campaign. Most of this amount was spent for newspaper advertising. According to the New Castle News this accounts for his large vote and his small expense.

S. H. Miller '60 of Mercer took his seat in the House of Representatives last Monday. Judge Miller was a student at Westminster the first term that the school opened, April 1852. While in school he boarded with the parents of Judge McLaughrey, elect. From 1881 to 1885 Judge Miller served in Congress, and presided over the courts of the 35th Judicial District, composed of the County of Mercer from 1895 to 1905. In November, 1914 he was elected to the 64th Congress. In a letter Judge Miller states "Should any of the alumni of Westminster be in Washington while Congress is in session it would afford me pleasure to meet them, and accompany them to places of interest in the city."

Christian Association NOTES

The Young Men's Bible Class is planning a special Christmas service for next Sabbath morning.

McGeogh was in charge of the Y. M. C. A. meeting yesterday evening, the topic being "The Morning Watch."

The subject of the Y. W. C. A. meeting Tuesday evening was, "Our Common Opportunity." Margaret Chick was leader.

Berry, Randolph, Hoag, Cummings, Martin and Taylor spoke at the Young People's Meeting in Fay last Sabbath evening.

The Y. W. C. A. will hold its annual Bazaar at the Hillside Saturday evening, December 11, at eight o'clock. There will be something for everyone. Come and see the big surprise.

The Y. M. Bible Class discussion Sabbath morning centered around the subject "Looking past and at Jesus to see God." In part Prof. Barr said that when we look past Jesus we find the sources of our knowledge of God to be five; nature in which we see design: reason; the Old Testament in which we find the seeds of things; experience; and the creeds which are born of struggle and conflict. When we look at Jesus to see God we adopt the true, the divine way. Jesus claimed He knew God and he taught the only adequate idea of God as Father which we possess. He bade men look at Him and said "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father.

ANNUAL ELECTION

The Y. P. C. U. of the First U. P. Church elected the following officers Sabbath evening; President, Miss Inez Hope; Vice President, Clarence Toy; Secretary, Miss Margaret Noble; Treasurer, Howard Simpson; Organist, Miss Neva Stewart.

CAPTAIN ELECTED

The High School team elected Walter Cheers '17 captain for next year. Cheers is one of the best centers the High School ever had. He is a strong, steady player, and has the knack of leadership.

Some people think they can pay their bills by simply making a mental note of the amount.

YOU SHOULD READ

In the course of his lecture Mr. Fletcher said that Christanity has never been tried. He is not alone in this belief. There is war everywhere, between indiduals, classes, sects, and coutries. Men deplore this condition and are seeking after new things. In "The Way" (The Forum Vol. 53 Page 21) Alfred Ollivant suggests a remedy, The article is especialty adapted for Christmas reading. "It is not the way of death, leading down through the grey morasses of asceticism, to a remote other world that few of us today desire to enter on. It is rather the way of eternal life, winding up continually out of the valleys, on and on toward the heights shinging in the dawn and loud with the songs of the lark."

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS

A id thar war in the same kintra side herds bidin i' the fields, and keepin gaird ower their flocks by nicht.

And see! an Angel o' the Lord cam till them, and glorie o' the Lord glintit roond aboot them; and they war sar gliff'd.

And the Angel said, "Be-na gliff'd; for I bring ye gude tidins o' muckle joy to the hale warld!

For thar is born t'ye this day, in Dauvid's town, a Saviour, wha is the Anointit Lord.

And here is the token for ye; ye'se fin' the bairn row't in a barrie-coat, lyin in a manger."

And a' at once there was wi' the Angel, a thrang o' Heeven's host, praisin God and sayin,

"Glorie to God i' the heighest heights, and on yirth peace! Gude will to men!"—Luke 2:8-14.

Officers Elected

The Young Men's Class of the Second U. P. Church met Wednesday evening and elected the following officers: President, Thomas Johnston; Vice President, Richard Brandon; Secretary-Treasurer, Wilbert Anderson. W. I. Grundish is teacher of the class.

PICKED FROM COLLEGE WORLD

The Holcad Suggests a Mythical Eleven of Stars

THE FIRST TEAM		THE SECOND TEAM
CHAMBERLAIN, Nebraska	E	SOUCY, Harvard
GILMAN, Harvard	T	NASH, Rutgers
SPEARS, Dartmouth	G	FITZGERALD, Notre Dame
PECK, Pittsburgh	C	COOL, Cornell
HOGG, Princeton	G	WHITE, Syracuse
BUCK, Wisconsin	T	JAMESON, Cornell
HIGGINS, Penn State	E	OLIPHANT, West Point
RUSSELL, Chicago	Q B	CLARK, Illinois
DEPRATO, Michigan Aggies	H B	HASTINGS, Pittsburgh
BARRETT, Cornell	H B	BERRYMAN, Penn State
MAHAN, Harvard,	F B	BEIRMAN, Minnesota

It may be well to state at the beginning that the choice of the above players for the mythical all-s[illegible]en has been based large-[illegible] thin[illegible] [illegible]t, news-paper reports of the performances of these players during the past season. Second the opinion of football experts both east and west. To these factors is added some slight knowledge from personal observation, and from conversations with men who have seen these players in action.

The players were chosen from widely scattered teams. Harvard contributes two, and Cornell, Michigan Aggies, Chicago, Penn State, Wisconsin. Princeton, Pittsburgh, Dartmouth, and Nebraska one player apiece for the first team.

Practically all of the critics have awarded Higgins of Penn State an end berth. His ability is too well known to need comment. Chamberlain of Nebraska would make him a splendid running mate. He is over 6 feet in height, weighs 190 and runs the 100 yard dash in 10 2-5 seconds. In eight games he scored 16 touchdowns—a record for a wing man. Most of these touchdowns were scored on forward passes.

Buck of Wisconsin is undoubtedly the best tackle in the country. [illegible]lman of Harvard is given the [illegible]er position. Both men are [illegible]st in spite of their weight, and excell at breaking up plays. Gilman's experience gives him precedent over Nash, Rutgers; Jameson, Cornell; or Shull, Chicago. Spears of Dartmouth and Hogg of Princeton look good for the guard positions. Both men open up good holes for the backs, and are following the ball all of the time.

The center [illegible] [illegible] of Pitt. Cool of Cornell, Watson of Illinois, and others were fully as good passers and defensive players as was Peck, but the Pitt man had a wizard's knack of being always in the play. His interference paved the way for many of Pitt's scores.

The backfield is a different proposition. Mahan of Harvard and Barrett of Cornell are the stellar performers. Mahan without doubt deserve the fullback position. Russell of Chicago is too good a quarterback to be left out,—he is brainy, a good runner in the open, a 50 yard punter, a marvel at drop kicks, and a sure line plunger. We give him the pivotal position and shift Barrett to half, where all the ability of the Cornell marvel could be utilized without giving him the bother of calling signals.

It is difficult to choose the other half. Hastings of Pitt, Berryman of State, Bierman of Minnesota, Wilkinson of Syracuse, Glick of Princeton, and Rutherford of Nebraska are all exceptionally good men. DePrato of the Michigan Aggies is given the choice, with Hastings a close second. DePrato is a splendid line smasher. He scored 120 points in 6 games, scoring 24 against Michigan.

With such a fast heavy line, with Mahan and Russell doing the kicking, the team could work down the field until DePrato could plunge through for a touchdown. Barrett or Mahan could run the ends, and Russell could run back punts for almost sure gains. Higgins and Chamberlain are both good on the receiving end of aerial passes.

The Basketball Season Opens

Vans Win Exhibition Game From Neshannock Club

The Vans and Neshannocks opened the basketball season Saturday evening, the latter team losing the contest by a 39-18 score. Considering lack of practice the players on both teams put up a good article of ball. Douthett led in the scoring, caging 9 baskets. Wherry contributed 9 foul goals and 4 goals from the floor.

The Van aggregation took the lead at the start, and the result of the game was never in doubt. Shaffer and Armstrong starred for the Neshannock Club.

Prohibition Meeting on Last Sabbath

Three Speakers Address A Union Service in the 2nd U. P. Church

Under the auspices of the local W. C. T. U. a prohibition meeting was held in the Second U. P. Church Sabbath evening. The congregations of the Presbyterian Church and both the United Presbyterian Churches united in this service. Rev. Graham was in charge of the meeting.

The special theme of the meeting was national prohibition, special emphasis being laid upon the constitutional amendment to be presented to Congress. Dr. S. A. Kirkbride, the first speaker, introduced the subject, giving reasons why national legislation was necessary to effect real reform.

The second speaker was W. I. Grundish, who presented some problems which Congress must answer before passing the amendment. He also pointed out the duty of making New Wilmington an advertisement for the prohibition cause.

Dr. J. O. Campbell was the last speaker of the evening. He said that preparedness was the keynote of the legislation outlined for this year. The present war has taught us that even moderate drinking detracts from efficiency, and suggested that the proposed amendment be added to the program of preparedness.

Dr. R. G. Ferguson and Rev. P. B. Logan assisted at the services.

Pictures Received

The College has recently received some excellent pictures depicting life among the ancient Romans. These works of art are hanging in Prof. McElree's room, and everyone should see them. In the collection are: The Arch of Constantine, The Erechtheum, The Acropolis, Interior View of the Coliseum, A Chariot Race, Six Columns of an Ancient Temple, and an Exterior View of the Coliseum. These pictures add greatly to the appearance of the room.

The faculty has very kindly and sympathetically extended the time for handing in the Junior orations until January 2nd.

Third Artist's Recital of The Year

Miss Christine Shultz Sings To an Appreciative Audience

The third Artist's Recital of the year was presented in Chapel Wednesday evening, December 8, by Miss Christine Shultz. A large audience attended the recital. The singer has a rich contralto voice and her rendition of the varied and difficult program was praiseworthy.

Miss Shultz is from New York City, and has apppeared with much success in the largest cities of the United States and Europe. Westminster was very fortunate in having her on the Artist's Course.

Nothing Definite About Hankey

The Holcad has been unable to obtain definite news of Dr. D. C. Hankey '09. Rev. B. F. Hankey writing to Mrs. Lawrence Johnston states that a rumor had reached him that Dr. Hankey had been killed by a cannon explosion in Servia. Rev. Hankey expressed a hope that the rumor was false, and that the Doctor had escaped into Greece. The authorities at Washington have begun an investigation.

Rev. James E. Walker

Rev James E. Walker '94, Pastor of the First Church, Chicago, preached his seventh anniversary sermon, November 28. "He has done a good work" said one of his clerical neighbors, "as the record of the congregation will show." He is a working member of the Co-operation Council of City Missions and is on the board of a number of charitable and social organizations. Above all, however, he is chairman of the committee of one hundred to lead the Billy Sunday campaign.

High School Presents Play In Auditorium

The Comedy of "Ezra Jones of Jonesvillle" A Success

The Dramatic Club of the High School presented the three act comedy "Ezra Jones of Jonesville" in the High School Auditorium on Friday and Saturday nights of last week. The play won the favor of large audiences on both evenings. All of the parts were well presented, and showed persistent effort by those who played them. Ney McMinn and Rebecca Crawford as Ezra Jones and wife took the leading roles. Roy Beighle as Tim McGuire made a hit, handling his part like a veteran.

The play was under the direction of Prof. H. P. Igo, who is to be congratulated on the success of the production. Music was furnished by the College Orchestra.

Informal Gathering

Prof. Barr entertained several fellows at an informal gathering Monday evening. The Victrola furnished a feature of the entertainment. Later in the evening refreshments were served.

TRAIN SERVICE

For the accomodation of students two coaches and a baggage car will leave New Wilmington Thursday evening in time to make connections with the 6:30 train at the Junction. Returning the same accomodations will leave the Union Station, Pittsburgh, 5:30 p. m. Monday, January 3. The ticket agent will be in the College Office Thursday from 10:30 to 12:00 m. and from 1:30 to 3:00 p. m.

Societies Elect Officers

At a recent meeting of Der Deutsche Verein the offices of secretary and treasurer were filled by the election of Ula Porterfield and Roy Lash respectively. The newly elected officers of Le Cercle Francais are Arthur Kirkbride, president, and Oliver Love treasurer.

The Annual Christmas Bazaar

Held at the Hillside Last Saturday Evening by the Y. W. C. A.

The Y. W. C. A. girls held their annual Christmas Bazaar at the Hillside last Saturday evening. Many townspeople and students attended and the affair was a great success. There was fancy-work booth where milady might obtain anything from a vanity bag to a laundry bag. Then charming Japanese ladies sold Japanese novelties from a gaily colored bower of yellow and white. There was an artistic Westminster booth in blue and white and a Christmas booth with its popcorn balls and boxes of homemade Reymers' and Huylers' candies. There was also ice cream and cake for those who cared to buy.

A feature of the evening was the "old lady with a thousand pockets" who shared her gifts with all and sundry for a very small amount. Cecil Sniff is the possessor of a lovely Xmas doll-baby,—and it isn't a blonde either. Doc Moore bought a mouth organ and will join the volunteer Band at its next meeting. Little Earl Dart bought a rattle which he has already promised to Britt for a Christmas gift.

All in all the affair was a great success both socially and financially.

First Student Recital

The first student recital of the season was given Friday afternoon in the Recital Hall. In this recital Misses Evalyn Swan, Margaret Littell, Martha Vincent, and Mary Shaffer sang in a most pleasing manner. Piano solos by Miss Charlisa Hunter and Mr. Ralph Wallace were much enjoyed. The next recital will be presented Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 15.

YOU SHOULD READ

Kant, Hegel, Rousseou, and Descartes are more than citizens of France or Germany,—their great thoughts have made the citizens of the Occidental world. In these modern times the thots of one country cannot help but be influenced by the thinkers in another, in spite of wars and rumors of war. One of the saddest things in the present war is the way great philosophers and poets have neglected their splendid visions to engage in petty political squabbles in rival newspapers. It is refreshing to read an article in which a Frenchman contrasts the French and German thought—even if the article was written before the war "German Thought and French Thought" (Educational Review Dec. 1915) by Emile Boutroux of the French Academy is well worth reading. "The French spirit and the German spirit should not hesitiate to maintain the most intimate relations; to know and to appreciate each other as fully as possible. But let each one retain its individuality; the strength, the fruittulness, and the beauty of both dependent upon it; the interest of mankind is at stake."

Mr. Robert A. Dornon father of R. C. Dornon of the freshman class, is now convalescent in the German hospital at Philadelphia where he underwent a serious operation. It is hoped that he will soon be able to return to his home at New Alexandria, Pa.

PERSONALS

A great many of the brunettes are going to reply to Box No. 6.

Marion Kitch is quite sure that she would be proficient on a track team.

Miss Knott and Miss McLaggan were regular society buds last week.

If you want to know the art of running a Ford, just ask Mary Campbell.

Martha and Walter occupied their reserved seats in chapel the other morning.

Margaret Carnes is learning to crochet. We hate to laugh but we can't help it.

The Hillside hypnotized the dining room tables during Miss Knott's absence.

Evalyn is becoming a mere shadow as the thoughts of separaration crowd in upon her.

John McGeogh and Olive Hickman received honorable mention in the Public Speaking class.

Wedneeday: Tomatoes for lunch again. Vainly the maidens cry, "We cannot live by bread alone."

Mrs. Smith: Well, we will hear from the girls. Mr. Milligan have you anything to say on the subject?

"Bones" (after attending a concert with Love): My, it's perfectly wonderful what that fellow can do with one arm.

Miss McLaggan says that any blonde man is very popular in France. There's the chance for some of you boys.

"Pinky" last Monday morning: I wish I could have held on to Jim long enough to have him carry this bag to the Hillside.

Did you notice how Jean Speer got dressed up for her Public Speaking performance? But, sad to relate she wasn't called on.

Sankey perched on the piano, "Say kids, try this on your piano."

Julia Carnes: "Ah, come off your perch and quit acting the fool."

Prof. Troup extended the time to pay Der Deutsche Verein dues until after Christmas. He realized the flatness of the pocket books.

Speaking of all star players! The position of All-American draw back goes to William Jennings Bryan.

The Pittsburgh Dispatch reports that a deer has been running loose in Bellevue. Some of the Bellevue girls are worried.

Ney McMinn starred in the High School play the other night, according to reports at the Hillside. To the girls he has become a veritable idol.

Elizabeth Sankey, accompanied by Mary McCauley, entertained a portion of the Hillside with humorous selections on Thursday evening.

Mary Caldwell has a bid to a dance at Christmas time. All dancing teachers who can guarantee to teach her within one week, please apply.

Evalyn has had a broad grin on her face since last Wednesday morning.

It is odd how some fellows send flowers after a turn down.

Peg Cleland got up too soon the other morning. When she took her tumble leaving the dining room, she got up just before Martin and "Randy" reached her.

Dot Murray became terribly worried the other day because as she said, her pen scratched so loudly that everyone could hear what she was writing.

Miss Knott must have forgotten to wear her "petite goloshes" when she went to get her picture taken the other day. As a consequence her story ran thus: Snow, Go, Fall, All.

Mary Sloane wrote home the other day and signed her letter. "Be a good girl. Lovingly, Mother.' We fear that she is fast approaching the state of the absent minded school teacher.

It isn't safe to stand around talking to a waiter as the avenging spirits on second floor are liable to let fly with their powder boxes and tin cups. For inside information apply to Mary Walker.

Freshman girl, carrying a pair of gym shoes, comes late to Prof. Shaffer's class.

Prof. Shaffer: Well, if you had a few more pairs of shoes with you you might be able to get here on time.

Martha Kennedy was coming from the dining room carrying a doughnut.

Miss Knott, looking at her strangely: Why Martha, I like doughnuts, too.

Martha: Oh you do! Well, you can have the whole (hole.)

WHAT HAS BECOME of the student Athletic Association? A few years ago there was a more or less flourishing organization of that sort in existence, but at present the students know little or nothing about the athletic affairs of the school. The management has been taken entirely out of the hands of the students. This should not be the case. Every student who contributes to the athletic fund should have a voice in the management of affairs. Why not call a meeting of the Association, and elect officers? Then meetings could be held at intervals during the year to discuss the selection of coaches, ratify schedules, and hear reports. In these meetings every student should have the right to ask questions, and state his opinion. In the evolution of the school it may be necessary to drop certain organizations and customs, even Junior Orations. But we need a Student Athletic Association!

THE HOLCAD HAS had a varied history. For many years it was published as a monthly, but in the spring of 1914 it was changed to a four page weekly. The present management taking charge last May, decided to enlarge the paper, and the present eight page weekly is the result. We are not satisfied with past achievements, however, and hope during the coming year to improve the paper as much as possible, in the way of giving better news service, printing some cuts, and raising the standard of the paper generally. Some changes have been made in the staff, and we hope to be able to fill the paper with interesting items and articles. In order to make any lasting improvements, however, the paper must be financially independent. The Holcad is supported by advertisers and subscribers. Every student can boost the paper by buying from our advertisers. Then we must appeal to alumni and friends for subscriptions. We believe that a live wire weekly is one of the best advertisements a college can have. Help us boost Westminster.

THERE ARE TWO subjects in President Wilson's recent message that demand the thoughtful attention of every American citizen. The first is the discussion of preparedness. War, as the President says, is "a thing of disciplined might." Then, in two striking sentences, he sums up the theory of preparedness.

"If our citizens are ever to fight effectively upon a sudden summons they must know how modern fighting is done, and what to do when the summons comes to render themselves immediately available and immediately effective. And the government must be their servant in this matter, must supply them with the training they need to take care of themselves and of it."

President Wilson advocates an increase in the standing army, and a supplement of 400,000 disciplined citizens. The importance placed upon this subject by the President is shown by the fact that he put forward a specific program instead of a general suggestion. He also urged that steps be taken to outfit an effective navy. The President's demands in regard to preparedness are very reasonable. We are glad to note the majority of publications approve of his views.

The subject of revenue ranks next to preparedness in popular interest. The President proposes to levy taxes on gasoline, automobiles, bank checks, pig iron, and fabricated iron and steel. This suggestion has aroused considerable opposition. Some critics would prefer to issue bonds, perhaps the $222,000,000 of them authorized for the Panama Canal but not used. We believe, however, that the proposed tax levy is the better way to raise the money. The burdens would be distributed, and the tax would not oppress any one class of persons. The President was right in saying that "we should pay as we go."

His program of preparedness is not for this generation alone, and when he states "that the industry of this generation should pay the bills of this generation" we may infer that some such tax must be continued. Be that as it may—we must be prepared.

Christmas Carols

I love the old carols of Yuletide. One hears them all too little nowadays. How full they were of the spirit of optimism and consolation. That one about "Christmas Comes But Once a year. . . ." That is my favorite, I think.

—Vanity Fair.

ALUMNI NOTES

Helen Troup '15 is teaching the Greensboro Training School in North Carolina.

Blanche Weiser '15 is instructor in music in the Boys' Industrial School Lancaster, Ohio.

Dr. W. M. Anderson '90 of Philadelphia underwent an operation for appendicitis recently.

C. O. Markle '15 who is in the Insurance business in Uniontown was a recent visitor in town.

C. R. Scott '15 a student of medicine at Yale University reports that he likes the work very much.

Rev. John C. Heinrich '09 and wife are stationed at Gujranwala to learn the language, preparatory to beginning active missionary service.

It may interest all Westminster students and alumni to know that our ex-president, Dr. Robert M. Russell is now located in his new home, 751 Lincoln Parkway, Chicago, Illinois.

On Sabbath, November 28, Mrs, Gibson, wife of Rev. J. H. Gibson of the class 1872, died suddenly of appoplexy. Rev. Gibson is pastor of the Wheatland congregation of Chicago Presbytery.

At a recent meeting, the Presbytery of New Jersey appointed Rev. S. P. Barrackman as one of their evangelistic committee. Rev. Barrackman is a brother in law of Dr. Freeman, and graduated here in 1887.

The contributor of the cement walk, James W. Stewart '69 was professor of Latin in Westminster for several years. He began his work under Dr. Jeffers in 1872. Thirty years ago his father Vance Stewart Esq., was a member of the board and an active worker for the College. If he did not originate the Junior Contest, he at least increased interest in them by the gift prize medals, known for a good many years as the Vance Stewart medals.

A Susgestion

The following letter has been received from Prof. Roland G. Deevers '02:

"It is wide awake and up-to-date. May I make one suggestion? I miss the old cut of the Greek Holcads and the motto, 'Many Holcads were anchored there.' Could you give it a place on the front page of your newspaper, a space about the size given to the Peasant Child in issue of Dec. 7th? It would become a characteristic of the sheet and would appeal to many of the alumni."

Salient Points From President Wilson's Message

The War department plans an increase of the regular army to a strength of 134,707 enlisted men and 7,136 officers.

The Department plans to supplement the army by a force of 400,000 disciplined citizens. So much preparation for defense is imperative.

Congress should adopt a plan to put the navy upon a final footing of strength and efficiency within the next five years.

For the sake of national efficiency and development we should have a merchant marine large enough to make us commercially independent.

These plans will require large expenditures of money, which should be paid by internal taxation so distributed as not to bear too heavily on any one set of persons.

We should rid ourselves by process of law of those who are hazarding our peace and safety by disloyal words and acts tending to make our proud country a hotbed of European passion.

The transportation problem lies at the foundation of our efficiency. A commission of inquiry should be appointed to ascertain whether the present laws in the matter are as serviceable as possible.

Westminster Named

An examination given at New Castle High School in order to ascertain how much the students knew outside of their text books brought forth some astounding answers. One of the questions was "What is the Largest University in the United States?" Among the answers appeared Westminster, W. & J., Oxford, and Indiana State Normal.

Environment

Someone remarked the other day that men are the victims of their environment. We will admit that this is true in a few extreme cases, but all too often do men make their environment the excuse for not doing the things which they could do and should do. Let us not choose the way of least resistance.

Christian Association NOTES

Minnie Belle McQuiston led the the Y. W. C. A. Meeting Tuesday evening. The subject was "Unto Us a Child is Born."

The subject of the Y. M. C. A. meeting Tuesday evening was "God's Gift to the World." Randolph was the leader.

The Mens Bible Class met as usual last Sabbath morning. A feature of the meeting was a sacred concert, music being rendered by Prof. Barr's Victrola, and by the quartet composed of Mercer, Lash, Miller, and Nelson. Prof Barr chose as his subject "The Heart of Christmas." In part he said that music, literature, and art have done much to raise the spirit of Christmas to a high level. We should think of Christmas not as a day of feasting but as a day to commemorate the birth of Christ. John 3:16 is definitely linked with Christmas. Christ came at the time when the world's need was greatest and has come down to us as a great leader of religion and moral advancement. "The Heart of Christmas" is God, and God in His greatest aspect is Love.

Boys Meet

Coach McLaughrey called a meeting of the boys of the College last night to discuss the baseball and track situations. Prof. Campbell told of the schedules he is arranging. The members of the two teams expect to hold meetings in the near future to arrange plans for the season.

French Society

An excellent feature of the meeting of the French Society Tuesday evening was a scenario presented by some members of the society. Messrs. Clark, Braham, Kirkbride aud Bush, and Misses Beatty and Lorena Stewart took the principal parts.

Officers Elected

At the regular meeting of the Y. P. C. U. of the Second U. P. Church Sabbath evening the following officers were elected for the second semester: President, Agnes Little; Vice President, Wm. Ashbrook; Secretary, Inez Mercer; Treasurer, Gordon Bennett.

Dinner Party

Prof. and Mrs. Mills entertained a group of friends at dinner Sabbath. The guests included Dr. and Mrs. Freeman, Dr. and Mrs. Smyser, Prof. Shott, and Prof McElree.

Letter for Box 6

My Dear Friend:—

This morning when I received my Holcad the first thing that attracted my attention was the following, "Wanted a Girl, Blondes need not apply. Address Box 6, New Wilmington, Pa. When I had finished reading your ad. do you know my heart just started to go pit e pat and I said to myself that I must meet that nice young man and perhaps we can become very good friends. I just figured that you were real lonely and as I am lonely too, we might as well run around together and enjoy our college days together.

I am a brunette and my father and mother both say that I am good looking and that I will make some man a very good wife. My home is in Pittsburgh. Now if you would care to see me some time in the near future, jrst be in the library Wednesday evening Dec. 15 and I will make myself known. I am so very very lonely here in school and do so want to get into the social life of the school. Now if you do not care to meet me, then we will let things drop. Hoping to meet you in the library Wednesday evening, December 15 I remain,

Yours until better acquainted,

Mary ——

The Calamity Howler

A dog sat out in the midnight chill and howled at the beaming moon; his knowledge of music was nil and his voice was out of tune. And he howled and howled as the hours went by, while dodging the bricks, we threw, till the moon was low in the western sky, and his voice was split in two. And there wasn't a thing at which to howl over which a pup should weep, and the course of the dog was wrong and foul, for people were wild to sleep. There are plenty of men like that blamed fool hound, who yell when there's nothing wrong, disturbing the country with senseless sound—the pess[imist] a doleful song.—Personality.

THE RULING PASSION

Cyrus—When a man gets all the money he knows what to do with, there's only one thing he wants.

Sillicus—And that is?

Cynicus—More money.

BOBBIE KNEW

Fond mother—Bobbie come here. I have something awfully nice to tell you.

Bobbie (age six)—Aw—I don't care. Big brother's home from college.

Fond mother—Why,Bobbie how could you guess?

Bobbie—My bank don't rattle any more.—Awgwan.

CRUELTY

George Ade once introduced a speaker at a banquet thus: "Two towns in Indiana lay claim to the honor of being Mr. Blank's birthplace. (A pause, during which Mr. Blank tried to look modest.) Warsaw asserts that he was born in Kokomo and Kokomo insists that the honor rightfully belongs to Warsaw.—Christian Register.

WISE CAT WAS HE

Two suburban gardners were swearing vengance on cats.

It appears to me, one said, that they seem to pick out your choisest plants to scratch out of the ground.

There's a big yellow tomcat, the other said, that fetches my plants out and then sits and actually defies me.

Why don't you hurl a brick at him? asked the first speaker.

That's what makes me so mad, was the reply. I can't. He gets on top of my greenhouse to defy me.—Kansas City Star.

A stranger, looking over a country church, asked the old pew opener who showed her around who the organist was. My 'usband, was the proud reply. Indeed? Well, added the woman, the young woman up at the 'all hits the keys, but my 'usband blows it.

—Exchange.

"Who gave you that black eye?"

"Who gives me anything? I had to fight for it."—The Masses.

WILFUL

I understand you have a new motor car.

Yes.

Do you drive it yourself?

Nobody drives it, we coax it.

TIMES CHANGED

Willis: In the old days, kings had jesters to pull off the funny stuff.

Gillis: And now they have diplomats to do it.—Judge.

NOT HIS JOB

City Boy: I suppose you hatch all these chickens yourself.

Farmer Boy: Nope, we've got hens here to do that.

Rastus, what's your idea of a molly-coddle?

Well, Boss, I think it is a niggah what carries a safety razor.

A GOOD REASON

How was it that you didn't name your baby Woodrow Wilson when you told me that was your intention?

We named it Mary Jane.

—Philadelphia Ledger.

COLOSSAL IGNORANCE

Fair Fair-Visitor: Can you tell me why the state exhibits are all closed on Sundays?

Gruff Guide: Well, I should say so! Don't you know that the states belong to the Union.

—Chaparral.

THE SPORTING SECTION

Walter Camp's All-American Football Team

Men Representing Twenty Different Colleges are Chosen for the Three Elevens

	FIRST TEAM	SECOND TEAM	THIRD TEAM
E	Baston, Minnesota	Herron, Pittsburgh	Hayman, W. & J.
T	Gilman, Harvard	Buck, Wisconsin	Cody, Vanderbilt
G	Spears, Dartmouth	Hogg, Princeton	Dadmum, Harvard
C	Peck, Pittsburgh	Cool, Cornell	McEwan, W. Point
G	Schlachter, Syracuse	Black, Yale	Taylor, Auburn
T	Abell, Colgate	Vandergraaf, Yale	Halligan, Nebraska
E	Shelton, Cornell	Higging, Penn State	Squier, Illinois
Q B	Barrett, Cornell	Watson, Harvard	Russell, Chicago
H B	King, Harvard	Tibbott, Princeton	Abraham, Ore. A.
H B	Macomber, Illinois	Oliphant, W. Point	Mayer, Virginia
F B	Mahan, Harvard	Talman, Rutgers	Berryman, Penn S.

Walter Camp, writing for Colliers, has chosen the above mythical All-American football teams. The line is heaviest it has been for years, Bob Peck center being the lighest man on it. The two guards, Spears of Dartmouth and Schlachter of Syracuse, tip the scales between them at 500 pounds. At tackles are Gilman of Harvard and Abell of Colgate, two of the best line men in the football world today.

On ends are Bastin of Minnesota and Sheldon of Cornell. Bastin was the fastest end and one of the best tacklers in the game last season. Barrett of Cornell as quarter can play fullback or halfback equally well. Mahan of Harvard won his place at fullback by being the greatest drop kicker in the game. The other two backfield positions are filled by King of Harvard and Macomber of Illinois.

News From Columbia

H. A. Fisher, graduate manager of Columbia University Athletic Association, writes to Prof. Campbell that it will be impossible to schedule a game between Westminster and Columbia for the season of 1916. Mr. Fisher expressed the hope that conditions would permit a contest to be scheduled in another year.

Prof. Shott Elected

Prof. Shott was re-elected president of the local school board last week. The other officers are: Vice President, Rev. P. B. Logan; Secretary, John Wright, Sr.; Treasurer, R. S. Mercer.

Girls Basket Ball Team

Great enthusiasm is being shown by the Girls of the College in basket ball. Each class is represented by enough girls to make a good team. Recently a vote was taken as to whether boys' or girls' rules were to be used during the coming season, and a decision was made in favor of the latter. Several out of town games are being arranged. It is probable that the girls' team from New Castle High School will be played in the near future.

Girls' Gym Class

Arrangements have been made whereby the sophomore and freshman girls folk dance classes will meet in the Gym instead of in Philo Hall as formerly. It will necessitate a readjustment of basket ball practice, but that has been taken care of by Coach McLaughrey.

Captains Elected

The Junior Class elected Oliver Love baskbetball captain recently. Jeanette Smith was chosen captain of the Junior girls basketball team.

The following men received their football letters at New Wilmington H. S. Johnson, Byler, Hilton, Cheers, Phillips, Beighle, Crowe, Buck, Williams, Anderson and Pitzer.

Sport Items

The Pitt football team was banqueted last week.

The Yale and Princeton hockey teams will play a three-game series in Pittsburgh during the holidays.

Ty Cobb of the Detroit Americans led that league in batting during the past season. Cobb batted .370, with Gregg of Boston Reds taking second honors.

Harvard plans to have ten games instead of nine on her football schedule next year. It is announced that the Crimson will not meet Penn State.

W. M. Johnston of San Francisco is given first place in the tennis ranking this year. R. Norris Williams of Philadelphia is second, and Maurice E. McLaughlin third.

Senator "Joe" Thompson at the Pitt football banquet last week said that a great injury had been done Andy Hastings in not giving him a berth as halfback on the All-American Team.
